Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

Poetry.

The Morning Cometh.

"The morning cometh!" Soul-inspiring message!
Sent forth in love from heaven's far distant height,
To kindle hope in men grown faint and weary,
Those anxious watchers through the cold, dark night.

They need the hope; for long o'er earth hath rested
That awful darkness, murky with its sin,
Whilst cries most pitiful have sadly echoed:
When will God's sunlight once again come in?

"Faint gleams we see, and then the clouds but deepen;
The shadows gather darkly as before.
When will the everlasting doors be opened,
And Jesus be our light for evermore?"

Peace, peace, sad hearts! The morning surely cometh;
The hours fly fast, the dawn is very near.
Perchance, before ye think, those doors will open,
And Christ, the King of glory, will appear.

Yet listen! Men who wait, these words hear also,
That morning of God's everlasting light
Will bring to some a darkness deep and awful,
A heart-despairing, agonizing night.

Then, whilst ye wait and watch, be working also,
Give warning to that darkness drawing nigh:
Oh, tell of him whose beams are life exciting,
That sun who shineth yet in mercy's sky.

Conference Report.

According to the notice given in THE RESTITUTION the Conference met at Oregon, Ill., Aug. 30. The meeting was called to order by the President, Bro. J. W. Wilson, at 7:30 P. M., at which time Sister Mary A. Woodward preached on the subject of "The Second Coming of the Lord Jesus Christ." The Secretary was not present to hear it but those who were say that it was a fine effort, and those who know her manner of handling the Word may safely say that it was worthy of praise.

Friday at 10:20 the Conference was called to order by Pres. J. W. Wilson. It was opened with singing after which Bro. Woodward offered prayer. The members of the Conference Board reported present except the Secretary. Then with a few well chosen words and happy thoughts Bro. Lindsay, in the name of the Master, welcomed the brethren and sisters. He also dwelt on the importance of individual effort in the cause of the Master. To which the President responded with a few words of thanks on behalf of the Conference for the kindly welcome, followed by an earnest exhortation to build up the firm foundation already laid; that should stand in the day of trial. He also dwelt on the signs of the times, showing how great cause we have to lift up our heads and rejoice.

After singing a hymn the business of the Conference opened. By motion of Bro. Glotfelty the Committee on programme now acting be retained for the ensuing year. The same action approved the work done by the committee on arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates. The report of the Quarterly meeting of the Executive Board was approved in the same manner.

The committee on printing reported that the printer made a mistake and printed 8000 quarterlies instead of the number ordered and that there were enough so that all who wished could be easily supplied. Collections on the quarterlies were $13.19. Bro. Wilson's donation of $25.00 would make a total received on the bill of $38.19, leaving a deficit of $17.31. Any one wishing the Quarterlies for distribution will please order them of Bro. Jas. W. Wilson, 79 Dearborn St. Chicago. The subject treated in the last Quarterly is "Generation and Regeneration," by Bro. Samuel Wilson of New York. It is a neat little work and well worth studying. He also donated a large amount of periodicals and books for free distribution at the meeting.

The Treasurer then reported as follows: Sept. 1899, cash on hand at close of Conference, $60.15; by collections for the year, $200.20; by tent fund applied, $61.75; total $322.10. The amount paid Evangelist $67.10; to cash paid B. & S. W., $50.00; to cash on hand, $205.00; total $322.10. By motion of Bro. Fahrney duly seconded the Treasurer's report was approved.

The Evangelical committee reported that Bro. Hudler worked about 6 weeks. The time being used at Ripley, Adeline, and Antioch, when he engaged in other business.

Bro. C. P. Graham wrote that on account of ill health he could not be with us. Bro. S. Wilson wrote that he would not reach Oregon till Saturday.

Bro. Lindsay gave an extended report of their church work. Met three times during the last year for communion, have a Bible class every Sunday and Tuesday evenings, in which the citizens as well as the members take part. Attention to history, chronology, etc., was given and doctrine incidentally brought in so as not to startle and frighten the unbeliever away. He also made an earnest plea that more attention be given to the young people.

Sept. 11, 1899, balance on hand, $74.74; by collections and sale of seats, etc., $378.65; total, $453.39; expenditure, $452.01; balance on hand, $1.38; total $453.39.

They had 63 sermons and lectures, two additions; their membership 14.

Bro. Conner reported that since last Conference he began preaching at Antioch. Preached over two Sundays with but little success at first, but gradually aroused the people and increased the interest and audiences. Still preaches there to good congregations. He travels 400 miles every time he preaches and reports great interest. He expects good results as every indication is favorable. He thinks there is a good field in Illinois. He has concluded that to make evangelistic work effective we should put it on a business basis. Send an evangelist into the field, pay him well, and keep him there till he brings in the fruit.

Sister Drew reported that Dixon could take an evangelist for a month. She reported that the church at Dixon continues to hold their Sunday School and Bible class each Sunday. Could report no increase in membership, but could report progress in the study of God's Word. Had only one preaching service during the year, by Bro. Zilmer of Indiana, who was with them two evenings in May. The interest manifested by those in attendance at the meetings was such as to convince us that good work might be done in Dixon.

Sister Dean reported as follows for Chicago. Since Conference met last year we have lost of our members, two by death, our beloved Bro. James Wilson, father of Jas. W. Wilson; and Bro. Button. Two by removal, and have gained two, one by baptism and one by letter. We meet each Lord's day for the breaking of bread and for exhortation, and for the encouragement in our faith and Christ-like living. We have Sunday School every Sunday morning and our young people have their society which meets every two weeks and our ladies have an aid society that meets every two weeks. We have reading of Scriptures and prayer at each meeting, we get better acquainted with each other and try to do something to help the needy. While we are far from being satisfied with what we have done, I would like to be able to say we hope to do more in the future. We have made several attempts to and have talked about the matter of starting a mission Sunday School, but in a large city where every ism under the sun is represented it is hard to get a foothold, or to gain the attention of the people and yet we feel like making a more vigorous effort to persuade men to hear the truth if by some means we may save some.

Bro. Gesin reported that the church at Adeline held their Bible class meetings, also that the young people held their meetings in the winter but not in the summer. Had gained no new members; no deaths.

Bro. James Tilton reported that Antioch held their Bible readings twice each month and had preaching once a month by Bro. L. E. Conner. No additions, and no deaths.

Lanark reported meetings every Sunday with good attendance, and good interest. No additions; little preaching.

Bro. Aslaksen reported for the Sunday School in Chicago. Said they had a good corps of teachers who were present every time. His daughter was a pupil in Sister Whitehead's class and great praise was given her as a teacher. Mention was also made of Sister Lelia's class for its efficient work. We missed her at the meeting this year but trust that she may be with us next year to help with the Sunday School work.

Bro. Woodward concerning the Sunday School work in Michigan, said that too much attention could not be given it. Said that prayer and social meetings were good helps to the church but the best aid was in the Sunday School for he considered that the Sunday School was the nursery of the church. Too much labor is bestowed in vain by not having the preaching services continued long enough at each series of meetings. He related an instance in his experience where he and his wife went to hold meetings for 8 or 10 nights, but stayed 5 weeks, and as a result of their labors baptized 87. They then organized a good lively Sunday School and a good church. Which would not have been done if they had left the field at the end of the 10th day. Another good aid to the church is to have a good live Child's paper. One that would contain the lessons of the Scriptures in their purity. This idea was sanctioned by others, yet no action was taken in the direction of having one started.

Bro. Lindsay remarked that it was the Master who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven;" and said that if it were not for the little girls he would not have the good class in their Sunday School that they have. We make a great mistake in not caring for the little boys and girls, and bring them into the Sunday School. He has a little class which has been studying the life and work of Paul. To say they are living monuments to the energy and zeal of their teacher is no misstatement. That is manifest by their answers to the many questions given them before the Conference, which they answered promptly concerning the lessons which they have long ago passed over. This is another demonstration of the truth of the saying, "Like teacher like pupil." Bro. Lindsay is undoubtedly a good teacher and his work is manifested in his class. That is the test of a good teacher. A few hints from his pen in relation to how a Sunday School class should be trained and educated would not look out of place in THE RESTITUTION, and we suggest that he try it.

We must not slight the little girl who related in such a brief story the life work and travel of Joseph. This recitation showed carefulstudy on her part and careful training on the part of the teacher. Nor would we forget the little lady Bernice Phelps who so gladly and willingly played the piano. May she continue in the pursuit of her loved theme until she shall learn to do the Master's bidding, and at last when the harps of gold shall make melody to his name may she be in that happy throng.

Friday afternoon the meeting was called to order and after singing and prayer Bro. Fahrney spoke briefly on the subject of "what is primitive Christianity?" in which he treated of the promises of God to Eve, Moses, Abraham and on down to Christ. Following him Bro. Aslaksen showed that to be a Christian according to the primitive practice one would have to resign the whole will to God and "present our bodies a living sacrifice to him."

Bro. Woodward said that under the Mosaic order it was written "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," but that the Savior introduced a new order; that he came to preach a gospel of love and forgiveness. No guns or weapons of warfare except the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of life. Nothing in primitive Christianity that would cause death, but on the contrary it was the law of "love and good will."

Bro. Mitchell thought to be a primitive Christian one should have the three elements of Christian character, faith, brotherly kindness and charity.

Sister Woodward said that if we had more to fight for, that is a more open opposition to the views we present, we should have more zeal which would cause us to look steadfastly at our pattern, and as a result be nearer the primitive Christian.

Bro. Conner thought that there was not a lack of love now but the lack of persecution fails to make us as demonstrative as we would be if we were confronted with greater resistance.

Bro. Lindsay said that oppression would tend to make us demonstrate our love and zeal for the Master's cause. That God has given us a great advantage over the early Christians by permitting us to show our love by a godly life and thereby bear a good report in the world.

Bro. Jas. Wilson thought that our goods were given to us as stewards, and that to be like the primitive Christians we should trust in the promises of God.

At 3 P. M. Bro. Woodward preached on the topic of "The Kingdom of God," or "What did Jesus preach?" It was forcibly given and very favorably received. The meeting then adjourned till 7 P. M., at which time Bro. Aslaksen led the meeting, the subject being "The prize of our high calling." Those words were given us through the writings of Paul to the Philippians in the 3rd chapter and 14th verse. "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." This prize will be obtained by or through suffering. Jesus gained his prize through his humiliation and suffering. The prize lies before us or in the future as we learn by reading the 13th verse of the 3rd chapter of Phil. In this verse Paul said "forgetting the things which are behind, (or those things which we have forsaken) and reaching forth unto those things which are before, (or unto those things which we have a desire to obtain.) He could look over into the bright beyond and through the eye of faith see the promises fulfilled and earth's inhabitants enjoying those blessings which none can enjoy except they who follow in the footsteps of him who hath pointed the way, and for this reason he was induced to press forward for that great prize. It was for the crown of life that Paul labored. It was this crown that Paul prized above all things else, and for it he fought a good fight, for it he finished his course, for it he kept the faith, and then assured his brethren that all who love the appearing of the Master would be likewise rewarded. To John the revelator it was promised that, "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels." It was also promised, "because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth," and the same voice said, "Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast that no man take thy crown." Coupled with the promise, "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name." To the overcomer is another promise given in Rev. iii. 21. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." This will be fully realized and enjoyed when "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

At 7:45 P. M. the President introduced the subject "What must I do to be saved?" After speaking briefly concerning the subject he introduced Bro. Conner, who read that portion of the 16th chapter of Acts relative to the imprisonment of Paul and Silas, and the conversion of the jailor. In this account we find that Paul and Silas had been followed several days by a damsel who had a spirit of divination, on account of which she brought her masters much again. Paul was grieved because of her annoyance and cast out that spirit out of her. It was because Paul had thus deprived them of their further income from that source that he and Silas were beaten with many stripes and cast into prison with the charge being given to the jailor to keep them safely. And it was the custom in those days that when a jailor or officer was given such an order that the prisoners thus committed to their charge were placed in the most secure place, and accordingly they were cast into the inner prison and their feet made fast in the stocks, so that escape was impossible, but in this instance such was not the case for it occurred that "at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God, and the prisoners heard them. And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken; and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed. And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled. But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, "do thyself no harm, for we are all here." Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, and brought them out and said, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" This, to the terrified jailor, was, at that critical moment the most important question that he could ask, and should be with every individual whether facing imminent danger or dwelling in apparent safety. There are no exceptions, regardless of religious proclivities. All are alike desirous of being safe.

Then what is salvation? A short definition is, the quality of being saved. But saved from what? In religious work it is confined to our salvation in the future. If we were permitted to tell what our idea of salvation consisted of we might turn to God's Word and find our wish recorded there. If you wish to be free from pain you find the promise there that there will come a time when there will be no more pain; so it will be with tears, sorrow, sickness and death, for the former things are passed away. Then that promise will be fulfilled, which says that "He will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.

When we wipe the tears from our eyes they come again, but when the great physician removes the cause they will never flow again. In this life we experience many instances of temporal salvation but beyond the vale of death we will, if faithful, be blessed with an eternal salvation. In this life we meet with those whose hearts are filled with sorrow, limbs that are feeble, eyes that are blind, ears that are deaf, tongues that are dumb; but in the new earth when the "desert shall blossom like the rose:" when the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, when it shall receive the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, then "they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." Then the weak hands shall receive strength and the feeble knees will be confirmed, then the feeble heart shall be made strong, the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." "Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing." No matter with what we may be afflicted here it will all be removed over there. There is some thing more in store for us all, for the promises are of freedom from sorrow, care, tears, pain, suffering and death. They shall be exchanged for joy, bliss, happiness, health, incorruptibility, eternal life, palms of victory and a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

In Isa. xxxv. 8, we read, "And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." Some claim that this refers to the present time, but we think it does not, for if it does, why then do we so often err? It refers to that future time when the redeemed shall walk therein. "The unclean of the heathen, and even of Israel, shall not travel that holy road; but only those who have been sanctified and purified by sufferings, and been redeemed and attached themselves to it; to them alone belongs this way, a way that is so conspicuous that a short sighted person cannot miss it." The fools shall not err therein, for they will not be there. One translation reads, "And there shall be there a highway and a road, and it shall be called the holy road; no unclean person shall set foot on it, but it belongeth to them, whose walketh on the road—even the simple err not. No lion shall be there, nor shall the most ravenous beast climb up on it; it shall not be met there; and the redeemed walk there, and the ransomed of Jave shall return, and come to Zion with shouting, and everlasting joy shall be over their head; upon gladness and joy they lay hold, and sorrow and sighing flee away."

The preceding terms embrace nearly all of salvation; but what is it? Paul's answer to the jailor was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." What is it to believe on him? To believe on an individual is to believe his teachings. To believe on Jesus is to believe his teachings. What did he teach? He taught that the dominion was lost through disobedience, and that it would be restored through obedience. The record says that Paul and Silas, "spake unto the jailor the Word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them (the jailor took Paul and Silas) the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway." But why was the jailor so eager for baptism before the coming of day? Because the Roman law was very stern, and death was the penalty for an officer's unwatchfulness and the escape of any of his prisoners. Undoubtedly he thought that when the fact became known to the magistrates, that he would be put to death, and now that he had been fully persuaded that the words of the frenzied girl were true when she said of Paul and Silas, "that these men must be servants of the Most High God, to show the way of salvation," he thought he would make sure of the future life, even if he had to lose the present. But before his immersion he settled his account with the prisoners and then with his God. Heit was who inflicted the stripes upon the backs of Paul and Silas and then cast them into prison. He took and washed their stripes. His rude, harsh, almost brutal nature now became sympathetic and tender. Then after baptism, with thankfulness of heart, he made them the most welcomed guests at his table. This action was the proof of the fruit of that faith which worketh by love.

The jailor set an example worthy of the notice and practice of every generation. Before making peace with his God he tried to relieve the pain and suffering of those upon whose backs he had used the merciless lash the day before, by ministering to their necessities and trying to heal their wounds. He first made reformation to them and then obeyed the Word of the Lord. When a person wrongs another and tries to make it right with God without saying anything to the party he wronged, he is deserving of less praise and reward than he who makes it right with the party wronged and says nothing to God about it.

Another lesson which we may learn from this instance is that the Master whom Paul and Silas served and who could unbolt and throw open wide the prison doors and free the prisoners from their bonds, can unlock the house of death and free our loved ones from its cruel bondage, and unless he soon returns and claims us as his own, it will hold us in its relentless grasp. But we know that if we pass into the tomb that the loving Master can call us up again for he is the one who holds the keys of death and the grave. He is the resurrection, the way, and the life.

The Secretary has other notes but for the want of time has not written them and will make balance of report brief, asking to be excused for the delay in sending this.

At 10 A. M. Saturday meeting called to order by the President. The Secretary's report read and approved. The motion to elect the old board prevailed, also to continue the President in office. Bro. Lindsay suggested that a permanent location be made at Oregon for holding the Annual Conference. Also that a dining hall be erected on the church lot. After a little discussion of the subject Bro. Glotfelty suggested that a vote be taken at 2 P. M., thereby taking the responsibility out of the hands of the Conference Board. A number expressed themselves as being well pleased with the idea of holding the Annual Conferences at this place and having a meeting of the Board quarterly at other localities with preaching. Bro. Woodward said that the Annual Meeting, if made permanent, should be where there was a good live teacher or leader, and as nearly all felt that Oregon was blessed with this essential element, it was generally conceded that Oregon was the best place. According to suggestion the chair appointed a committee of three viz:—Bros. Gesin, Glotfelty and Lindsay to drew plan and compute the cost of building. Meeting adjourned at 12:15.

At 1:45 P. M. the building Committee reported that it would require $850 to erect a building 32 x 32 feet, two stories high. A motion to erect it prevailed with the vote of 39 for and 2 against.

The young people then took charge of the meeting for one hour. Bro. Eychaner then preached on the topic, "What is Christianity?"

The Conference Board then met and organized. The Pres. Jas. W. Wilson, Vice Pres., S. J. Lindsay; Treasurer, J. M. Glotfelty; and Secretary, L. Booth, were retained by motion.

Also the Committee on Evangelist, composed of Bros. E. F. Gesin, L. Booth, S. J. Lindsay and J. M. Glotfelty.

Also the Committee on printing, composed of Bros. Jas. W. Wilson, S. D. Fahrney and Martin Aslakson.

Also the Committee on Ways and Means, composed of Bros. J. M. Glotfelty, E. F. Gesin and L. Booth.

The building Committee consists of Bros. S. J. Lindsay, E. F. Gesin and S. D. Fahrney.

Ministerial certificates were issued to S. J. Lindsay and Z. E. Brant.

A motion prevailed that all applications for the services of an Evangelist should be made to the Committee and Hymn of the Jews.

God of the thunder! from whose steady seat
The fiery winds of desolation flow:
Father of vengeance! that with purple feet,
Like a full wine-press, tread'st the world below:
The enkindled arrows wait thy eyes to slay,
Nor springs the beast of prey on his prey,
Nor withering famine walks his blasted way,
Till thou the guilty land hast scathed for woe.

God of the rainbow! at whose gracious sign
The billows of the proud their rage suppress,
Father of mercies! at one word of thine
An Eden blooms in the waste wilderness!
And fountains sparkle in the arid sands
And timbrels ring in maidens' glancing hands,
And marble cities crown the laughing lands
And pillar'd temples rise thy name to bless.

O'er Judah's land thy thunders broke, O Lord!
The chariots rattled o'er her sunken gate,
Her songs were wasted by the Assyrian sword,
Even her foes wept to see her fallen state;
And heaps her ivory palaces lie strew'd,
Her princes wore the captive's garb of shame,
Her temple sunk amid the smouldering flame,
For thou did'st ride the tempest-cloud of late.

O'er Judah's land thy rainbow, Lord, shall beam,
And the seal city lift her crowndless head;
And songs shall wake, and dancing footsteps gleam,
Where briers o'er fallen streets the silence of the dead.
The sun shall shine on Salem's gilded towers,
On Carmel's side our maidens call the flowers,
To deck, at bluding eve, their bridal bowers.

Thy vengeance gave us to the stranger's hand,
And Abraham's children were led forth in slaves,
With fettered steps we left our pleasant land,
Eat'ying our fathers in their peaceful graves.
The stranger's bread with bitter tears we eat,
And who in our weary eyes sh ald sink to sleep,
'Neath the mute midnight we steal forth to weep,
Where the pale willows shade Euphrates waves.

The born in sorrow shall bring forth in joy;
Thy mercy, Lord, shall lead thy children home;
He that went forth a tender yearling boy,
Yet, ere he die, to Salem's streets shall come.
And Canaan's vines for us their fruits shall bear,
And Hermon's bees their honied stores prepare,
And we shall kneel again in thankful prayer,
Where, o'er the cherub-seated God, full blazed the irradiate dome.

Ages.

"That in the ages to come, he may show the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness to us through Jesus Christ." Eph. ii. 7.

Times past and present may be divided into numerous periods called ages, with judgments following each age. But it is the purpose of this article to divide it into three great divisions from the recorded creation down to the present of nearly two thousand years each, calling the 1st, the antediluvian age, from the creation to the deluge; the 2nd, the miscellaneous age, from the deluge to the birth of Christ, and the third from the birth of Christ to the present, the Christian or gospel age, with a view to more clearly demonstrating what are the "exceeding riches of God's grace" towards those that share in the glories of a future age or ages.

Much controversy has arisen from time to time as to the status of those people living in the age subsequent to the Christian age. Will there be different classes of people following different avocations, or will all be of one class having one calling? are questions frequently asked. History has informed us of what has occurred in the past, and in the main, men are a unit in their conclusions regarding it. Prophecy is simply history written in advance; but in its interpretation the minds of men are as wide apart as the poles. But there is no doubt but that in the arrangement of the canonical Scriptures, the second was regarded to be as plain as the first.

In the history of the antediluvian age, all that we have to guide us may be found in the first seven chapters of Genesis. That there was not more written concerning events of that period, was no doubt on account of the sparse population of a large part of the age. Yet there are events recorded that are of vital importance to those of this present age, and the next future age. The fall of man and consequent sentence of death, the entailment of the same state upon all mankind, the prohibition of access to the tree of life, and the promise of a Redeemer in the Seed of the woman, are subjects of thrilling interest to those who are looking for emancipation from the thralldom of sin.

The term miscellaneous is used concerning the period between the flood and the coming of the child Jesus, is by reason of the diversity of governments under which the people lived, together with the promises, covenants and prophecies directly affecting not only the present age, but extending on and on through the countless cycles of eternity.

The Biblical account of the period above alluded to, is full and complete, in regard to those people that were so fortunate as to be chosen of God, as the medium through which he would transmit to all the world his great plan of reiemption from the sentence imposed upon man on account of sin. God sent his only begotten Son into the world to confirm the promises or covenant made not long after its beginning to the patriarch Abraham. To Abraham and his seed were the promises made says Paul in Gal. iii. 16. In Gen. xii. 7, it is used in the singular only, and the single thing was land.

Here God promises an abiding place or home. Three years later he renews the covenant with Abraham and adds the blessing of life, eternal life, for he says, "To thee and thy seed will I give it forever." Gen. xiii. 15. Again he reiterates the same promise and says, "I will give thee and thy seed after thee the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. 8. Again to Abraham's son Isaac he confirms it by an oath saying, "I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries, and in thy seed shall all the nations of earth be blessed." Gen. xxvi. 4. And yet again to Jacob, Isaac's son he says, "The land whereon thou lirst to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, and in thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxviii. 14. Thus all nations and all families, are to receive the blessing of everlasting life, to live on this earth, for the wise man says, "The earth abideth forever." Eccl. i. 4. And though the boundaries of the original inheritance or promise is given in Gen. xv. 18, it shall be extended "from sea to sea, and from the rivers unto the ends of the earth." Psa. lxxii. 8 and Zech. ix. 10.

Again do we find the promise repeated hundreds of years later to David and David's son, who also are of the seed wherein he says to David of his son, "He shall build me an house, and I will stablish his throne forever, and I will settle him in my house and in my kingdom forevermore, and his throne shall be established forevermore." 1 Chron. xvii. 12, 14 and 2 Sam. vii. 12, 16. Thus the blessings increase and are made wider, for here is a kingdom with statutes (1 Sam. x. 25) enacted for the government of its people, endless in its duration. The question may arise, If endless in its duration "where is it now?" Ans. Overturned for a period of time on account of sin, or "until the seed should come to whom the promises were made." Ezek. xxi. 27, and these were made sacred by the oath of the Almighty, was made doubly sure in that they were confirmed by his Son Jesus, Rom. xv. 8, and Gal. iii. 17, and by being adopted into this great Abrahamic family we become sons, and if sons, then "heirs of God through Christ." Gal. iii. 5, 7.

The most remarkable events recorded in the first epoch, was the creation of man and his fall, and the deluge. Of the second, the promises to the fathers, the Law from Sinai and the prophecies. Of the third, the birth of the Son of God, his death and resurrection, his exaltation to the throne of God, and the preaching of the kingdom of God as embodied in the gospel. But of the next epoch, what? The first event is easily answered:—The coming of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven, the resurrection of the heirs and setting up of the overturned kingdom of David, or kingdom of God, as the coming of the Lord from heaven and the setting up of the kingdom are simultaneous, or nearly so. There is evidently a difference of opinion in the conditions of the kingdom and its relation to the inhabitants.

It is conceded that the kingdom is universal, in that its dominion encircles the earth, and that all kingdoms shall be subject to King Emanuel.

The view is taken that it will be world-wide in its very outset, and the whole earth at once will be subject to his rule and authority. But the Word of God is the very acme of reason, and it should be examined in the light of reason. It is not to be supposed that there will be a reversal of nature's laws at Christ's coming; the law of gravitation will remain the same, yet undoubtedly there will be power given to suspend it in relation to the individual, as see Acts i. 9; and viii. 39. The virtues and uses of fire and water will remain unchanged, "Seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." Gen. viii. 22; Jer. xx. 25.

In the parable of the tares, Jesus says, "Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them, but gather the wheat into my barn." Matt. xiii. 30. And again, "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." Matt. xiii. 41, and further, "When he (Christ) shall have put down all rule and authority and power, for he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 24–26, and "Christ and the saints shall reign a thousand years." Rev. xx. 4, 6.

From the above we conclude that earth's purification will occupy another period of time, called the "Age to come," of 1000 years duration and that all people will not be righteous, but that there will be disobedience and efforts made, successful efforts to bring those rebellious ones into subjection; and judging the future by the past and present, part of those efforts will consist in preaching.

"But," says one, "That is Fair Chance."

Very well, my brother, God intends every one to have a "fair chance" that will accept it, else why did he send his beloved Son into the world to suffer the cruel death of the cross, if his precious blood was not shed for the redemption of all from sin, and to give men a fair chance? For the life of all, in all ages rests upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and there could have been no resurrection without there was first, death of the resurrected one. 1 Cor. xv. 13.

There is no Universalism in the fact that Christ died for all, for man is a free-will agent, and has been since the beginning and has had good and evil held before him with the privilege of choosing either, and an evident knowledge of results. Man has been subject to law in all ages of the world, and transgression of the law under which he lived has ended in disaster, while obedience has had its just reward. Adam disobeyed, and he died. Noah obeyed and escaped the deluge of waters. Those that would not submit to the teaching of Moses in the "day of provocation," left their carcases in the wilderness; while the sublime triumph of Jesus Christ overcoming temptations, and yielding himself obedient unto death, resulted in his exaltation unto the throne of God, until he takes unto himself his great power and reigns over the nations of earth, and he will associate with him all those who like Paul have sought to be found worthy to attain unto a resurrection from the dead at the coming of the Son of Man.

That there will be laws to govern the nations is evident from the fact that the law shall go forth from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Isa. ii. 3; Micah iv. 2, and that many shall say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord's house, implies that there will be some rebellious ones that will not go up, though the Lord be Judge and Law-Giver. Isa. xxxiii. 22.

It looks like a difficult matter to combat the idea of salvation in the next future age, when we hear the testimony of James who says, "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name, and to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written, After this (taking a people out of the Gentiles for his name) I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof and I will set it up, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord." Acts xv. 14–17.

The Lord will not return until the end of this age and the ushering in of the next, and this residue of men will seek him after his return. I am not concerned as to who or what people they are, but I contend that God has given men a "fair chance" in all ages in which they have lived, and has given them opportunities of making their calling and election sure. With them it has been a day of salvation, a present time of accepting the terms offered and if they have rejected the conditions, how can they in reason look for another opportunity to "try again." We are now on probation and must continually "fight the good fight of faith," that we may hear the welcome plaudit "Well done, good and faithful servant."

By consulting the prophecies of the 2nd and 3rd ages, we will find the most full and complete account of the beauties of the future age, and the great apostle to the Gentiles quotes from Isaiah, and eloquently depicts its glories and beauties, when he says, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Cor. ii. 9.

Let us then, brethren in Christ, make use of the opportunities given us, ever keeping in view that God's grace is ever sufficient to sustain us in every trial and temptation, and that he doeth all things well. Earnestly teaching men what they must do in order to take part in the glorious work of earth's restitution. "For the feet of him who shed his blood on Calvary, shall stand upon the Mount of Olives and he shall be King over all the earth." Zech. xiv. 4–9.

Though we suffer afflictions in this life on account of sin and our feet drag wearily, let us faint not, for "Joy cometh in the morning" when we shall see the King in his beauty, "And the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Hab. ii. 14.

MERRITT ELLIOTT.

Genesis. Chap. 14.

1. And it came to pass in the royalty of Amarphal king of Senuaar and Arioch king of Hellasar, that Chodollogomor king of Elam and Thargal king of nations

2. Made war with Balla king of Sodoma and with Barsa, king of Gomorra and with Sennaar king of Adaina and with Sumobor king of Seboeun and with king Balak; this is Seegoor.

3. These all conspired against the salt valley; this is the sea of the salt-marshes.

4. These had served for twelve years Chodollogomor as bond-servants, and in the thirteenth year they had revolted.

5. And in the fourteenth year came Chodollogomor and the kings with him, and smote the giants in Astarood and Karnain, and strong nations with them at the same time, even the Ommaioi in the City Saues.

6. And the Chorraioi in the boundaries of Sereir, as far as the terebinth-tree of Pharau, which is in the wilderness.

7. And returning they came unto the Fountain of the Crisis (legal-trial,) This is Kadees ("Kadish-Bornea" C. V.) and they smote all the rulers of Amaleek and the Amorraites dwelling in Assonthamar.

8. And there came out the king of Sodoma and the king of Gomorra and the king of Adamia and the king of Seboccim and king Balak, this is Seegoor, and they arrayed themselves for battle in the Salt valley,

9. Against Chodollogomor king of Elam and Thargal king of nations and Amarphal king of Sennaar and Arioch king of Hellasar, the four kings namely against the five.

10. And the Salt Valley had wells of Asphaltum: and the king of Sodoma and the king of Gomorra fled and fell in there: but those left behind fled into the mountain range.

11. And they took all the cavalry of Sodoma and Gomorra and all their food supplies and departed.

12. And they took also Loot Habram's brother's son and his camp supplies and went away. For he was dwelling in Sodoma.

13. And a certain one of those who had been saved came and told Habram the result; and he was dwelling alongside of the Mambrine Oak of the Amorraite brother of Eschool and of the brother of Aunan, who were sworn allies of Habram.

14. And when Habram heard that his nephew Loot had been taken captive, he numbered his own kindred three hundred and eighteen and pursued after them as far as Dan.

15. And fell upon them in the night he and his servants and smote them and pursued after them as far as Chobe which is at the left-hand of Damaskoe.

16. And he turned back all the cavalry of Sodoma and he turned back his nephew Loot and all his belongings and the laity and their wives.

17. And the king of Sodoma came out to meet him, after his return from the smiting of Chodollagomer and the kings with him, in the valley of Subu. This was the plain of the kings.

18. And Melchisedek king of Salem brought out loaves of bread and wine; and he was a priest of the Most High God.

19. And he commended (blessed) Habram and said, Blessed be Habram by the Most High God who created the heavens and the earth.

20. And commended be the Most High God who surrendered thine enemies subject to thy hands. And Habram gave unto him a tenth of all.

21. And the king of Sodoma said unto Habram, Give unto me the men and do thou take for thyself the horses.

22. But Habram said unto the king of Sodoma, I stretch forth my hand unto the Lord God who created the heavens and the earth, and say,

23. That I will not take of thine from a cord to a sandal-latchet, that thou mayest not have said, I enriched Habram.

24. Only those things which the young men ate and the portion for the men of prominence Eschol, Aunan and Mambree, namely who went their way along with me; these shall take for themselves a portion.

COMMENT.

The variations in the C. V. & R. V. are so many and the names given in this chapter are so entirely different from the names given in the Greek text, that I must ask the reader to compare for himself and see which look like and sound when spoken like real names of persons and places.

The cavalry, or horses, spoken of here several times are not even mentioned in the R. V. "The Fountain of the Crisis" being the place where the Crisis in the affairs of Habram and Loot occurred, when they separated, and which gave the fountain its name, is not even translated at all, and neither is its later name of "Kadish Barnea" a translation or an original Hebrew name. Kadesh means the same as Krisis. The same can be said of "The Valley of the Salt Marshes," and the "Plain of the Kings," both important as historical names of identification—not translated at all.

The important name of "Melchisedek" (Melchizedek R. V. & C. V.) is perhaps near enough for identification, but I would say that the spelling here is exactly the same in Hebrews of the New Covenant where it occurs, and illustrates the importance of not even changing a letter nor a letter point. For I do not know of any lexicographer or commentator having been able to decipher its wonderful meaning until I gave it to the public some years ago.

We learn at the close of this chapter why the oak near which Habram pitched his tent was called the Mambrene Oak,—so called from Mambree, not Mamre, R. V. one of the three brothers who proved to be allies of Habram in this great "Crisis."

Bear in mind that this chapter gives us a glimpse of the country and cities now covered by a portion of the Dead Sea, and quite a vivid picture too it is considering how condensed the historical narrative is. Adamu seems to have been significantly beautiful and fertile as here stated and elsewhere referred to in the Scriptures.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalsaints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for fun salvation.

Duties of Daily Life.

Life is not entirely made up of great evils or heavy trials; but the perpetual recurrences of petty evils and small trials is the ordinary and appointed exercise of the Christian graces. To bear with the failings of those about us—with their infirmities, their bad judgment, their ill breeding, their perverse tempers—to endure neglect when we feel we deserve attention, and ingratitude where we expect thanks; to bear with the company of disagreeable people whom Providence has placed in our way and whom he has provided on purpose for the trial of our virtue, these are the best exercises of patience and self-denial, and the better because not chosen by ourselves. To bear with vexation in business, with disappointment in our expections, with interruptions of our retirement, with folly, intrusions, disturbance—in short, with whatever opposes our will or contradicts our humor—this habitual acquiescence appears to be more of the essence of self-denial than any little rigors or afflictions of our own imposing. These constant, inevitable but inferior evils properly improved, furnish a good moral discipline.

Wins One Courtesy.

It is not enough to have a kind heart and a benevolent disposition; it is not enough to give alms and to do deeds of charity. The courteous man is more than kind; he is also kindly. The rough, gruff, over-bearing philanthropist, who throws his charities to the needy as he would pitch a bone to a dog, is not a model of kindliness, however large-hearted and generous he may be.

I have in mind a prominent religious worker, who is always offending people by his ungraciousness and boorishness of manner. He is a man of immense power, of large and generous impulses, of sympathetic nature, of undoubted influence in the religious world, and yet he so persistently wears the rough side of his coat outermost to the world, that he has a very unsavory reputation for discourtesy, and on some occasions does as much harm by his boorishness as he does good by his persuasive eloquence.—Francis E. Clark, D. D.

Work is of a religious nature; work is of a brave nature; which it is the aim of all religion to be. "All work of man is as the swimmer's." A waste ocean threatens to devour him; if he front it not bravely, it will keep its word. By incessant, wise defiance of it, lusty rebuke and buffet of it, behold how it loyally supports him—bears him as its conqueror along! "It is so," says Goethe, "with all things that man undertakes in this world."—Carlyle.

Study the graces; not the graces of the dancing-master, of bowing and scraping; nor the foplsh infidel etiquette of a Chesterfield, but benevolence, the grace of the heart, whatever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report. The true secret of politeness is to please, to make happy—flowing from goodness of heart—a fountain of love.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

We have during the last few weeks, sent letters to a number of those who are owing us, setting forth our condition, and asking for aid by renewals. Some have responded, and we are thankful to you for your prompt attention and uniformly kind words. We are forced to say that the large part of those whom we have addressed have apparently paid no heed to our call. Brethren, this is a wrong way to do. We told you the truth when we wrote, and it is truth now. It is expensive both in time and money to write letters. Only one is not much, but the many makes a burden in expense and time. By a little attention you can save us both the cash outlay and the labor. You certainly know when your time is out. Then please aid us by a prompt renewal. Don't let us ask again.

After a week of ovation in France the Boer President was announced to visit Germany this week but before he reached the frontier was informed that "pressing engagements" of another character would render it impossible for the German Emperor to receive him. China is likely to win most of her points by the delaying process. The powers cannot agree on anything that all will stick to, so one point after another is modified and changed till the wiley Chinaman sees the weakness of the pretended "concert," and plays his part accordingly. No single one is strong enough to take the lead and define a policy of its own. So it drags on and the end is not in sight.

Truly has it been said that the righteous perisheth and no man layeth to heart." The devastating warrior or proud conqueror is held up to admiration. Volumes are written in their praise, and their memories are perpetuated in song and story; while the faithful servant of the Lord treads the rough and narrow path of duty unknown, or, if known, despised by the children of this world, who have, perhaps, "counted his life madness, and his end to be without honor." *

The December number of the Cosmopolitan is as usual full of interesting reading, but the article on "The Peking Legations," by Sir Robert Hart, giving the true history of the Chinese uprising, is of special interest to the student who is watching the movements of nations as their acts relate to the prophecies of the Bible. This one article is worth more than the 10 cents the magazine costs, and we commend it to you as worthy of a careful reading.

We have a few copies of the book called "The Scriptures Opened; or Thoughts and Themes for Bible Students" by Robert Ashcroft. It is a work that has passed the scrutiny of such of our brethren as Benjamin Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Wilson, J. F. Wagoner, A. J. Eychaner and others. It contains 370 pages, strongly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering on the back and side. It formerly sold for $1.25, but we offer the few we have on hand at 75 c. each, post paid.

Publicans may be called capitalists, for they farmed the districts of Palestine for a certain sum, and collected all they could from the tax-payers. These publicans usually sub-let the taxes to contractors of a lower grade, and the actual collectors are driven to the severest exactions. These taxes being levied on produce and merchandise, over assessments were easy and most oppressive. Jewish tax gatherers were universally despised: (1) as unpatriotic and degraded by serving the Romans, (2) for their extortion and false accusation, and were classed accordingly with sinners." *

"Holy courage characterizes every true life. The possessor of this life looks at the right and says, "With God's help I will do it." He never for a moment asks himself the question, "Will it affect my material interests?" but only, "Is it right?" If the reply to this question is, "yes," he moves right on in the sacred path of duty, though it leads through a burning, fiery furnace, or a lion's den. The frowns of friends or the threat of enemies moves him not. His position has been taken and from it he will not be driven. When he approaches the portals of the tomb, he exclaims, "I have fought a good fight," and when he is lowered into the grave, the very remembrance of his heroism calls forth the word, "There he lies who never feared the face of man. Such are the men who triumph over every foe, and are more than conquerors through him that loved us." *

Thankfulness.

AN ADDRESS.

I understand the President of the United States has followed the national custom and appointed the last Thursday in November as a day of Thanksgiving for heaven's bounties during the year. Truly they have been very great. When we think of the conditions existing in other lands where crops have failed and millions been barely kept alive by others more favored, and many thousands of others have shrunk and shrunk till they died of starvation, we can truly say our lines have fallen to us in pleasant places; and we have abundant cause for thankfulness for temporal blessings vouchsafed. And some sense of gladness comes over me when I see that although this is an age of abounding iniquity, and our country appears to be striving to distance all others for supremacy in wickedness,—yes; notwithstanding all this, I am pleased to see some slight recognition of God and his goodness as a nation, although the million only congratulate themselves in their comfortable circumstances and forget the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

As a people, if we are anything near what our profession would indicate, we do not give thanks because of the President's Proclamation or that of the Governor's. If our faith and works agree,—"In everything, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving our requests are made known to God." This is to relieve us of all anxiety or vexing care, for the promise of God is closely coupled with this injunction, that the "peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." The peace of God will do two things for us. It will fix our affection just where it ought to be set; and besides that, it will keep our minds,—our thinking machine from anticipating the troubles of to-morrow, next week, month, or next year.

I trust you will notice that every time we ask for something, we must give thanks for what we have already received, this is the way to secure a continuous supply, and the peace of God besides. I do not consider that these injunctions paralyse or impede business endeavor. The fact that the same spirit enjoins us to be diligent in business as well as fervent in spirit serving the Lord, is proof that the Diaglott Translation, which says, "be anxious for nothing," contains the spirit's meaning, rather than "be careful for nothing." In the nature of things a man cannot close up his business every night and begin afresh in the morning,—although I would not be surprised if a good many would be glad to do it. The fact that we have to provide for our own precludes the idea that we must not exercise care. It requires much careful effort to make both ends meet very often,—and without great diligence we would be very apt to violate the Divine rule to owe no man anything. The thing is, as I understand it, to use all diligence to discharge our obligations faithfully, then leave the consequences with him with whom we have to do. Is it not a stubborn fact that cannot be gotten rid of, that if we are not careful in such matters some one else will have to be careful for us? So it seems to me. Inasmuch as he that will not work should not eat, shows conclusively that God's purpose is not to put bread into one's mouth without effort on his part,—in man's extremity is God's opportunity.

I now call your attention to Rom. 1. 20, 21. The preceding verses teach the same truth as the following:—"For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse; because that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise they became fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts and creeping things,—wherefore, for this reason, God also gave them up to uncleanness," etc.

Please note particularly the following points for further consideration. The peoples here referred to had no spoken or written revelation from God,—he held them responsible for a knowledge of his existence, and not only his existence, but also his eternal power and Godhead. 3rd. He held them responsible for knowledge to this extent because the things above them, beneath them, and all created things about them, proved or should prove to them, his eternal power and God-head. What I wish you to reflect upon at your leisure, is this:—If God gave them up,—abandoned them, with only the light of nature to instruct them what will our fate be "if with all the light they had, and vastly more from scientific appliances such as telescopes, microscopes etc, reveal, and the wonderful revelation of himself made in his Book, and the transcendant manifestation of him made in the flesh of Jesus of Nazareth,—yes; what will be our fate if we glorify him not as God and be not thankful?"

From the Scripture quoted to it is clearly seen that God considers it very dishonoring to him to be ungrateful for his loving-kindness. And I think from our own experiences we are warranted in concluding that human nature is liable to take on a thankless spirit. The exercise of gratitude would seem to be an easy pleasant thing. It imposes no burden, no hardships, no inconvenience upon any one. Sensibility of benefits received, and a disposition to make suitable returns for them, is so eminently proper and just that we would think every one would be anxious to exemplify these feelings. Ingratitude is as a rule in ill favor with worldlings; and yet the spirit of thankfulness is not as common and potent as it should be in God's house. The claim of reason, justice, piety, or common brotherhood are met in a very infirm way quite often. Sad to relate we are too apt to take, hold, and enjoy what blessings and favors we get, and not think of any obligations to any one for them—are taken often as a matter of course, and seldom give a heart felt thank you, to God or man. This is strikingly characteristic of this age, and its infectious. Children grow up and luxuriate in the lavish love, patience, forbearance and dear-bought earning of their parents, and think nothing of making harsh exactions upon those who have tenderly cared for them, disobeying them, ill-treating them, and caring not what sorrow and distress they cause them. Friendships are dissolved forever on a word of misunderstanding or on the merest slight, trifling errors or mishaps of an hour are made to set aside all the loving favors of a lifetime. Indeed it has come to be the rule, the more you do for some people, the surer are they to turn against you and avoid you, or show you how they dislike you.

But far worse than all this is it, that the claims of the Great God above for gratitude for transcendant mercies should be ignored. Thanksgiving Day, once a year with great formality and pious phraseology does not meet the case. As the years come and go, instead of being used for the expressions of love and gratitude to God, it is turned into a secular gala day, man and his likes, and his pleasures is more and more uppermost. It is true churches are open, but so are the play-houses, the shows, the drinking and gambling places. If disciple Pauline had to write up this city on Thanksgiving Day, would he not be apt to write just as the apostle did, "When they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful?"

Ingratitude is one of the ugliest of vices. It argues a mean, degraded, untutored and selfish heart. It embodies a host of other ill quantities. It tramples under foot every law of God. It ignores all right, all justice, all tender sensibilities, all appreciativeness. It casts dishonor upon God, puts him out of his place, strips him of his rights, and puts the whims and fancies of the depraved heart in his place.

With ingratitude everything that is good and lovely in human feeling and sensibility falls into a Dead Sea, as it were, in which all is shut up in self. And where therein unfeeling selfishness God cannot be honored—he is dishonored. On the other hand, a thankful spirit is a godly spirit. It is the outflowing of the appreciation and love of what is true, proper, beautiful and kind. It sets us in peaceful harmony with ourselves, with God, his will and law both in creation and redemption. It not only leads to the glorifying of God as God, but it is that which shows man as man—makes blessings blessings, and sets the seal to all right consciousness and every virtue. It is the very the embrace of faith, and the activity of love. It is a good thing, says the Psalmist, "to give thanks unto the Lord." A moment's reflection will show us why. It evinces an appreciation of him. It shows that his being to us what he is, has not been in vain; that the intent for which he made us and redeemed us has not failed, that we have some right sense of our position in the universe, that we are not entirely dead, or asleep to the development of Jehovah's purpose. And, O beloved, it brings us before God, not like a company of weeping beggars, or sullen culprits, or heartless stoics, but a blessed band of delighted children, happy in their Father's benefactions, rejoicing in his goodness, overflowing with his love.

Pleasant memories, glad experiences stirring affections and confident trust commingle in it and combine in sweetest heart-songs. O, it lifts us up, it animates us, it beautifies us, and it blesses while it blesses. We do not have to wait for it.

Do I hear some one whisper that gratitude or thankfulness confesses debt! Well, yes; it confesses to a great and heavy obligation beyond all ability to pay, but at the same time finds a sweetness in the bonds which makes them far more precious than their absence. The poet says

A grateful mind
By owing, owes not, but still pays at once
Indebted and discharged.

(To Be Continued.)

Communicated.

Dear ones in Christ Jesus Greeting:

Since being separated from you our hearts often turn with love and fond remembrance to the profitable and happy meetings we have enjoyed together, and so at this time we would like to meet with you in spirit and through the medium of the pen make known to you that we still are trying to abide in Christ and prove faithful to the cause we have espoused, and offer to you a few thoughts upon the subject of charity, which characteristic we feel is much needed in the Church of God in these last days.

CHARITY.

Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three. Paul in these letters to the Corinthian brethren has been setting forth the order of the church and he finds first of all that when they come together in the church there are divisions among them and he says he partly believes it, for he found them disorderly in their manner of communion, one was hungry and another drunken, and in this condition would eat without waiting one upon another wholly unable to realize the solemnity of the occasion. Our Lord had taken the loaf and brake and gave them, saying, "This is my body, eat of it; and the cup, saying, Drink of it, for it is my blood spilled for the remission of sins. And as often as yeeat of this bread and drink of this cup, ye show my death till I come. Holy and sacred memory to be thus abused, how carefully we should examine ourselves that we be not condemned. Next he speaks of the spiritual gifts, and he does not want us to be ignorant of this matter, for he says, "I give you to understand that no man speaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jesus accursed, and that no man can say, that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit. Read this twelfth chapter and ponder well. The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man. For what purpose is it given? To profit with all. To some has been given faith, wisdom, knowledge, discerning of spirits and so on, but mind by the same spirit dividing to every man severally as he will. Severally means separately, distinctly apart from others. Thus we see that every man has his personal place to fill, for we are all baptized into one body, and that too by one Spirit. Read commission. He now goes on to speak of the different members of our natural bodies, the head, hand, foot, etc., completing the whole body, but God has set these members in the body as it has pleased him. Now he says, Ye are the body of Christ and members in particular. You, my brother, and you, my sister, constitute one of these members, and are responsible alone for the work given you to do. If I am only a foot I could not possibly do the work of the head, but I can and I must do the work of the foot, or I cannot stand approved of God.

He has set in the church, first apostles, then prophets, teachers, and so on; they have their work to accomplish, and they will, for God says his Word has gone forth, and it will accomplish that where unto it was sent, it shall not return unto him void. Here Paul admonishes us to covet the best gifts. I ask, what are the best gifts, and wonder when these questions will be satisfactorily answered. But let us go on for Paul has something better in store for us than even the gifts, for he says, I show unto you a more excellent way and that is the way of charity. Read the thirteenth chapter and see why we hear so much about faith, and he says that even faith without charity is nothing, and though we might have all knowledge and understanding of mysteries, and it would be without profit, without charity. And Peter tells us to have fervent charity among ourselves. Why Peter? Because it covers a multitude of sins; and in Col. Paul has been admonishing the brethren of many good things to do, but he says above all these put on charity, for it is the bond of perfectness. Well, what is charity that Paul calls it the more excellent way? Webster says first, that charity is that disposition of heart that inclines men to think favorably of their fellowmen and to do them good; love, benevolence and good will. Second, liberality to the poor, to be benevolent; also liberality in judging of men and their actions; a disposition which inclines men to put the best construction on the words and actions of their fellowmen. Ah, no wonder Paul says it is the greatest, and O, what beautiful lives we would exhibit to the world, if we could only use charity toward all and under all circumstances. If we that have been crucified with Christ will but let him live in us, we shall be able to abide in him, and he will make us that we shall not be barren and unfruitful, but that we may always abound in the Lord. For by grace are ye saved through faith and not of ourselves; it is the gift of God. Not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and if God so loved us, we ought to love one another. We at this present time only see in part, we only know in part. We perhaps never will in this age or dispensation think exactly alike on all points, but we can each of us take God's Word and study it faithfully and prayerfully and live out in our daily lives our convictions of truth and righteousness, and exercise that charity toward those that differ with us, that suffereth long and is kind, for now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity. Love to all,

Mrs. H. W. Barnhill.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the brethren who so kindly sent the books I called for in The Restitution. There have been sent me several copies of one of them. I appreciate the favor very much, and shall try and get some good out of the books to give to others.

A. H. Zilmer.

If you merely attain to the theory of religion, you may always live in question of every truth; but if you rise above the theory, and walk with God continually, doubts will vanish. I never doubt whether there is a sun, when it shines on me and makes me warm; I can never doubt the existence of bread, when I am eating it. He who feels the life of God gets beyond the reach of philosophical questioning, which is the very atmosphere of the age.

Poetry.

Life in Christ. Gal. ii. 20.

I live, I live, who once was doomed to die;
I live, and yet not I,
But he who gave his life to make me free,
Christ Jesus, lives in me.

I live! Yes, quickened by his life I live,
In Christ, my life, I live,
And death can never reach with sting of sin,
This blessed life within.

Thus, hid with Christ in God, my sheltered life
Shall rest from carnal strife,
And learn to know the secret of the Lord
Within his living word.

Oh, blessed life of faith, and hope, and love,
So like that life above;
To rest, complete in him, with boundless grace
In love's secure embrace.

Now faith and hope with kindling ardor burn
For our dear Lord's return;
Still waiting for that hope that comes apace—
The vision of his face.

And then, when he who is our Life, appears
To close earth's toilsome years,
And we appear in glory by his side,
I shall be satisfied.

To the Indiana Conference of the Churches of God of the Abrahamic faith in session at Plymouth, Nov. 17, 1900: We, your committee on Ways and Means, having prayerfully considered the task assigned us beg leave to submit the following for your consideration. Knowing that a large number of the believers in the Abrahamic faith throughout Indiana are not actively co-operating with this, the Conference of the Churches of God of said faith; and knowing that our ability to promulgate the truth corresponds somewhat in proportion to the number of prayerful co-operators in the efforts to spread same truth; therefore be it

Resolved, That the delegates here assembled in Conference session instruct that prayerful effort be made to create within the minds of our brethren a hearty interest in the workings of this Conference. As a means to this end be i

Resolved, That we encourage all such willing ones; also, That we ask all the churches to give all the encouragement possible, both moral and financial, to any such above named persons.

FUNDS, Whereas, an organization of this kind has some general expenses which cannot be met out of any special fund; therefore

Israel as a Nation. Ezek. xxxvii. 15.

There is a class of expositors that think that God is done with Israel after the flesh or nationally. They profess themselves literalists, and claim to be honestly searching for more light. Literalists they are not, on the subject in dispute. On this they are unreasonably in the dark. We would gladly enlighten them through their own papers, if this privilege was granted. Among the readers of these papers are some who are not satisfied with the view so persistently held by the majority of the Advent Church. To these is accorded the right to propound questions on the subject, to which the editors in charge reply. The replies given furnish an illustration of the manner of handling the prophecies on this point, and shows how sophistical men are when laboring to support a theory in harmony with William Miller's view of world-burning. Believing that the Bible teaches a universal conflagration they see no chance for nations in the flesh; and of course none for Israel and Judah. These expounders [illegible] no difficulty in believing that [illegible] anciently organized the natural [illegible] Abraham, Isaac and Jacob [illegible] and blessing [illegible] Also that the [illegible] dry of the [illegible] taught by Miller and advocated by the present generation of Adventists, must go by the board. "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple." Psa. cxix. 130. Will have more to say on the above prophecy in my next.

JOHN L. WINCE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Christmas will soon be here again; almost one year since last Christmas, nearer to the great day of accounts, when the righteous shall enter upon their reward, which is eternal life to be enjoyed in the kingdom of God. How important that we live in such a manner that Jesus may say to us, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Paul says we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we let them slip. Again said Jesus, "Strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many will seek to enter in and shall not be able, for straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to life and few find it." Don't be deceived with the idea that every one is going to be saved, irrespective of character. We now are living in the sowing time, and we are told that whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap. And that God will render to every man according to his works. To those who seek for immortality by a patient continuance in well doing he will render eternal life. And those who know not God and obey not the gospel shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord when he comes to be glorified in his saints and to be admired by all them that believe in that day. O how important to live in a preparation for that important time. How careful we ought to be in respect to our conversation. Says Jesus, "By thy words thou shalt be justified and by thy words thou shalt be condemned; for every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Says Paul, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ that we may receive a reward according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. Peter said, "That judgment must begin at the house of God, and if it first begin at us, what will the end be of those who obey not the gospel. Paul says their end is destruction (not salvation as some teach). It will be better for us to give all diligence to make our calling and election sure. If we are obedient we will be permitted to eat the fruit of the land and have an abundant entrance administered unto us into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Let us remember that our conversation should be in heaven from whence we look for the Savior, who shall change our corruptible body and make it like his. And John says, "He that hath this hope purifies himself." And Peter says, "Ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved and he that believeth not shall be condemned. Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost. Salvation is obtained by faith in [illegible] means provided by God and we are told that he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God, because there is no other name given whereby we can be saved. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Again says Paul, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Again says Paul, "For the love of Christ constraineth us, for we thus judge that if Christ died for us all, then were all dead. In that he died for all that they who live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him who died for them and rose again. For this unspeakable gift we are led to thank God. Dear brethren, continue faithful to the end, for he that endures to the end shall be saved.

P. H. BURK.

A Disregarded Beatitude.

Perhaps no other one of the beatitudes of Christ is so overlooked and disregarded as that which he pronounced among the peacemakers. Who ever heard a sermon on it? How many strive to get its benediction? Surely no Christian duty is more neglected than that of peacemaking. There are many people who are really strife-makers, rather than peacemakers. They do not seek to heal [illegible] bring together those who have been divided or alienated. Their whole influence goes toward widening breaches, intensifying bitterness, and exciting anger and hatred. When they meet a man who speaks qualifiedly of another, they take the opportunity to emphasize the qualification, thus confirming the man's doubt or suspicion concerning his neighbor. When they find a slight estrangement, they are quite sure to make it greater than less by their words, by the tone in which they speak, or by their suggestive silence. When they find rankling in one man's mind a bitter feeling against another, they do not try, in a brotherly, generous way, to remove the feeling, but manage to deepen and intensify the bitterness. The true peacemakers are few, even in Christian society. Is it not time that we should get our Lord's beatitude down from the shelf and brush the dust from it, and try to win its benediction?

Obituary.

Andrew Marshall, well known to many of the brethren who attended meeting at Antioch this County years ago, died at his home in this city Nov. 19. He was born in Fayette Co., Indiana, June 8, 1825, and came to Marshall Co. in 1850, settling on a farm near Antioch meeting house where he resided till 1892 when he moved to Plymouth. Mr. Marshall though not a member of any church was a good man and kind neighbor. He was chosen as one of the trustees of Antioch and remained such until his death. The funeral services were from the late residence, conducted by Bro. A. H. Zilmer.

Concerning Evangelization: Whereas after due effort by our evangelists in protracted work, some hearers become desirous of more reading matter than we can furnish gratis; therefore

Resolved, That our Committee on literature be instructed to procure in sufficiently large quantities such works as "Gospel of the Kingdom," by Wiley Jones, "A Letter to a Friend," etc., placing them in the hands of the Evangelist, or any other person who can find sale for them, to dispose of at a price agreed upon. Funds for the purchase of these works to be furnished by the Evangelical Board, said funds returnable upon sale of books.

Resolved, That the resolution which was passed by the Conference in session, Sept. 8, 1900, creating an Evangelical Board, in the second paragraph the sentence beginning "The means from each individual of the congregations to be paid to the Secretary thereof, by him sent to the Secretary of the Conference," be amended to read "The means from each individual of the respective congregations to be paid to such person as may be selected by the State solicitor upon the approval of the congregation, who shall send same to the Secretary of the Conference."

Resolved, That Evangelical Board be authorized to fill vacancies in the position of State Evangelist, or to employ additional help, so long as said board does not contract beyond the amount of the means provided.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Evangelical Board report from time to time, as called upon, to the Conferences, the workings of said Board.

Resolved, That the Committees on Ways and Means, Auditing and Credentials be made permanent until the next Annual Conference, and thereafter to be appointed annually.

Resolved, That three be appointed a committee on literature, consisting of three members, to continue until the next Annual Conference, and thereafter to be appointed annually. Said committee to use diligent effort to devise and execute ways and means for securing and distributing literature calculated to build up and establish readers in the truths of the gospel.

Inviting to the ministry. Whereas, we have several churches desirous of ministerial aid; and Whereas, there seems to be none of our ministers who can answer all of these calls; and Whereas, we have several young men in our churches who have signified a willingness to enter the ministry if satisfied concerning ability in that direction, and if proper financial encouragement be held out; therefore

Resolved, That we encourage all such willing ones; also, That we ask all the churches to give all the encouragement possible, both moral and financial, to any such above named persons.

FUNDS, Whereas, an organization of this kind has some general expenses which cannot be met out of any special fund; therefore

Resolved, That we ask our churches and Sunday Schools throughout the State to take up a Christmas contribution, and a contribution each third month thereafter, the proceeds to be turned into a general fund in this Conference.

Israel as a Nation. Ezek. xxxvii. 15.

There is a class of expositors that think that God is done with Israel after the flesh or nationally. They profess themselves literalists, and claim to be honestly searching for more light. Literalists they are not, on the subject in dispute. On this they are unreasonably in the dark. We would gladly enlighten them through their own papers, if this privilege was granted. Among the readers of these papers are some who are not satisfied with the view so persistently held by the majority of the Advent Church. To these is accorded the right to propound questions on the subject, to which the editors in charge reply. The replies given furnish an illustration of the manner of handling the prophecies on this point, and shows how sophistical men are when laboring to support a theory in harmony with William Miller's view of world-burning. Believing that the Bible teaches a universal conflagration they see no chance for nations in the flesh; and of course none for Israel and Judah. These expounders find no difficulty in believing that God anciently organized the natural seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob [illegible] and that [illegible] the Word [illegible] Alas, that the [illegible] theory of "no vocation [illegible] taught by Miller and advocated by the present generation of Adventists, must go by the board. "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple." Psa. cxix. 130. Will have more to say on the above prophecy in my next.

JOHN L. WINCE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Christmas will soon be here again; almost one year since last Christmas, nearer to the great day of accounts, when the righteous shall enter upon their reward, which is eternal life to be enjoyed in the kingdom of God. How important that we live in such a manner that Jesus may say to us, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Paul says we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we let them slip. Again said Jesus, "Strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many will seek to enter in and shall not be able, for straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to life and few find it." Don't be deceived with the idea that every one is going to be saved, irrespective of character. We now are living in the sowing time, and we are told that whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap. And that God will render to every man according to his works. To those who seek for immortality by a patient continuance in well doing he will render eternal life. And those who know not God and obey not the gospel shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord when he comes to be glorified in his saints and to be admired by all them that believe in that day. O how important to live in a preparation for that important time. How careful we ought to be in respect to our conversation. Says Jesus, "By thy words thou shalt be justified and by thy words thou shalt be condemned; for every idle word that men shall speak they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Says Paul, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ that we may receive a reward according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. Peter said, "That judgment must begin at the house of God, and if it first begin at us, what will the end be of those who obey not the gospel. Paul says their end is destruction (not salvation as some teach). It will be better for us to give all diligence to make our calling and election sure. If we are obedient we will be permitted to eat the fruit of the land and have an abundant entrance administered unto us into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Let us remember that our conversation should be in heaven from whence we look for the Savior, who shall change our corruptible body and make it like his. And John says, "He that hath this hope purifies himself." And Peter says, "Ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved and he that believeth not shall be condemned. Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost. Salvation is obtained by faith, by the means provided by God and we are told that he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God, because there is no other name given whereby we can be saved. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Again says Paul, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Again says Paul, "For the love of Christ constraineth us, for we thus judge that if Christ died for us all, then were all dead. In that he died for all that they who live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him who died for them and rose again. For this unspeakable gift we are led to thank God. Dear brethren, continue faithful to the end, for he that endures to the end shall be saved.

P. H. BOCK.

A Disregarded Beatitude.

Perhaps no other one of the beatitudes of Christ is so overlooked and disregarded as that which he pronounced among the peacemakers. Who ever heard a sermon on it? How many strive to get its benediction? Surely no Christian duty is more neglected than that of peacemaking. There are many people who are really strife-makers, rather than peacemakers. They do not seek to heal estrangements, to bring together those who have been divided or alienated. Their whole influence goes toward widening breaches, intensifying bitterness, and exciting anger and hatred. When they meet a man who speaks qualifiedly of another, they take the opportunity to emphasize the qualification, thus confirming the man's doubt or suspicion concerning his neighbor. When they find a slight estrangement, they are quite sure to make it greater than less by their words, by the tone in which they speak, or by their suggestive silence. When they find rankling in one man's mind a bitter feeling against another, they do not try, in a brotherly, generous way, to remove the feeling, but manage to deepen and intensify the bitterness. The true peacemakers are few, even in Christian society. Is it not time that we should get our Lord's beatitude down from the shelf and brush the dust from it, and try to win its benediction?

Obituary.

Andrew Marshall, well known to many of the brethren who attended meeting at Antioch this County years ago, died at his home in this city Nov. 19. He was born in Fayette Co., Indiana, June 8, 1825, and came to Marshall Co. in 1850, settling on a farm near Antioch meeting house where he resided till 1892 when he moved to Plymouth. Mr. Marshall though not a member of any church was a good man and kind neighbor. He was chosen as one of the trustees of Antioch and remained such until his death. The funeral services were from the late residence, conducted by Bro. A. H. Zilmer.

One Step.

For just one step and only one,
His promises we may claim,
Until the way clears for the next—
'Tis evermore the same.
And thus he makes us hold his hand—
He's but a step away,
And keeps us looking unto him,
That so we may not stray.
Oh! let us listen as we walk,
To hear what he may say!

Communicated.

Dear Ones:

Tonight as we gaze out through the beautiful moonlight as it softly falls in silvery rays upon the calm and peaceful waters of the Arkansas, our thoughts go back to him who said to the storm-tossed waves of Galilee, "Peace, be still," and as we continued to gaze at the sullen waters as they softly glide by, I think even so will it soon be with you and me. We too are hurrying to the dark and sullen sea of death. "And none can keep alive his own soul." The weaver's shuttle so quickly passes; the tender flowers of the grass soon wither. "Yea, man dieth and wasteth away and where is he?" The mantle of sackcloth that has wrapped the teeming millions of past ages, is still large enough to robe us for the "abode of darkness," and the "land of forgetfulness." The suburbs of the city of the silent sleepers, has never been filled and earth's heaving bosom will soon pillow our cold pale brow near its sobbing heart in death's embrace. But with this shadowed pathway of darkness that leads over grief's precipice a.' down the rocky gorge of mourning to the "Valley and shadows of death," the watchers calmly close their eyes and slumber in the valley in sweet rest to be awakened only by the voice of him who hath said, "I will come again." Then the enemy's land will have to yield up its captives, when he says to the "North give up, and the south keep not back." He will send many "Fishers and they will fish them out. He will send many hunters and they will hunt them out." No rock or cave can conceal his jewels from him; the diamonds in the rough will be polished by the purifier of silver and gold. The great ocean with its heaving bosom that so long hath wrapped his pearls in its winding sheet of salty chilliness, can no longer lull them in sleep, for many fishers will cast forth the life lines and fish them out." Then the murmuring waves, the troubled world, the dashing floods and the peaceful hills will unite their voices in joyful and everlasting songs and praise to him, "For he cometh to judge the earth; he shall judge the world with righteousness and the people with truth." "Let the sea roar and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein. Let the floods clap their hands. Let the hills be joyful together before the Lord." Why should the sea roar? Why should the floods clap their hands? Why should the hills be joyful? Ah, deliverance has come. He who broke the bonds of death and holds the keys of hell and death, has set the slumbering captives free. Would tonight we were there; could we but turn our ear in silence and hear the touch that unlocks death's dungeon and hear that gentle voice say, "Come forth; awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." No tongue could tell, no pen portray the unspeakable joy. There is a sacred spot to every heart somewhere; on hill or in the vale slumbers some loved one, and with the stamp of death on every brow and a pain of sorrow in every ear. We still say, "How long, O Lord." And yet while this theme is so, so sad, and the meditation so touching, there lies beyond a summer land; the tender buds are putting forth and we are nearing the border where the flowers never fade; we are nearing the sparkling stream of life; we are almost home and there awaits us a welcome there. While I trace these few words, I still kindly remember home and friends, and to those who have manifested an interest in me and the little work that I am trying to do. I will say no one knows how much I appreciate your tokens, and am sure each and every tract and paper will be placed in the vineyard. I have given out most of them, some days walking many miles to distribute them as this is my only way to travel from the boat. Many of our people of southwestern Kansas and Oklahoma will remember that I had been urged to send some young man into the field to distribute our literature, but none seemed to take much interest and an opportunity presented this way to travel, I embraced it against many, yes, many opposing requests. This way I can always be at home and the expenses are so much lighter. I am near the mouth of the Cimerone river near Leroy, Okla., and will be here three or four weeks, and if any one desires to send more literature it will reach me at the above address, and to those who I am under obligations to write to, I will as soon as possible. I am busy most of the time, for I am teaching a class in vocal music, this way I can more than pay my way, and it affords many opportunities to tell something of the truth. Would be pleased to hear from any of the faith, and trust to be remembered kindly by you all.

Obituary.

Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Esther Gilbert, Blythedale, Harrison Co., Mo., Nov. 22, 1900, Mrs. Selah Harrold, aged 79 years. She was very feeble in her frail, mortal body, but blessed hope she was strong in the Abrahamic faith. By that and through a resurrection from the dead we have a promise of meeting our mother, sister and friend again on this earth made new. There will be no sad partings there, neither sorrow nor crying. Her weak body shall be changed and fashioned like unto our Lord's glorious body.

MRS. ROSA WILSON.

Not Settled Yet.

A gentleman once introduced an infidel friend to his minister, with the remark: "He never attends public worship." "Ah!" said the minister. "I am almost tempted to hope you are bearing false witness against your neighbor." "By no means," said the infidel, "for I always spend Sundays in settling my accounts." The minister immediately replied, "You will find, sir, that the day of judgment will be spent in the same manner."

This reminds the Christian Budget of the remark of an old gentleman who once lived in Salem. The good old man was much annoyed by the conduct of some of his neighbors who persisted in working on Sunday. One day as he was going to church, his godless neighbors called out to him, sneeringly, from the hayfield, "Well, father, we have cheated the Lord out of two Sundays, any way!" "I don't know about that," replied the old gentleman; "I don't know; the account is not settled yet."

As one sensibly remarks: Making a profession of religion is like enlisting in the army. It is very easily done, and is at the most only a promise. Whether the promise is kept depends on how the recruit behaves; whether he endures hardships as a good soldier, and fights bravely and follows wherever his Captain leads.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Brother Underwood:

I Would Be Pure.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Matt. v. 8.

I would be pure, like some clear brook,
Upon whose crystal brink
The wood birds stand and bow themselves
To shadow, sip and sing;
So would my heart its incense bring
In chalice pure to heaven's King.

I would be pure, like some sweet flower
That holds its gem of dew
In stainless cup, to be exhaled
By sunbeams ever true;
So would my heart its incense bring
In chalice pure to heaven's King.

I would be pure, like some white cloud
Floating in ether blue,
Showing upon its amber crest
Heaven's light to mortal view;
So would I have my spirit be
A mirror of God's love to me.

I would be pure, like drifted snow
Upon some mountain's breast;
Sinless, like babies' hair that bloom
Where pale dead children rest,
O Jesus! wash me in thy blood,
That I at last may see my God.

Australian Letter. No. 5.

AN EVENING STROLL IN OLD SYDNEY.

An evening stroll in old Sydney before you have explored it is the glaring light of day is enchanting. The terraces, steep ascents, and duchivities, the unexpected turns and surprises that meet you on every hand lend a zest to the spirit of exploration. The streets wind in and out and zigzag up the hills to avoid steep ascents. In early convict days creeks flowed down from these heights in great numbers. Fords were used where most available and the street crossings still remain at these ancient landmarks. There is a saying that the streets were surveyed by a bullock driver and laid out with a boomerang. The small reservations and private paddocks are so jumbled together that you are never quite sure when you are on forbidden ground. So in order to be at ease you may as well ignore property rights and stroll on until you come to a padlock or a dog, which, in Australian slang, will not be "too far." For you may start out upon a stately thoroughfare and after a few turns find yourself in a kitchen garden.

The semi-darkness hides the dinginess in soft shadows and you see only the poetry of the scene as you emerge upon a bluff and see the busy day scene wrapt in silence, for the shops are all closed at six o'clock. At another turn you see the dome of the Observatory, on Flag-staff Hill, shining in the moonlight, the flag poles, the rigging and windmill looking weird and ghostlike.

Seated upon the rustic benches and wooed by the cooling breeze it is a pleasant place to spend the early evening hours. From this height you catch a view of the city behind and the harbor in three directions. In front at your feet a graceful little cove separates Miller's Point and Dawes Point, while away to the left the long row of lights on Darling Harbor stretch into the distance like a torch light procession, so straight is it. Down to the right precipitous streets lead to the sweeping circle of Sydney Cove which borders on Circular Quay. But we must not stay too long in the witching beauty of the night. As we retrace our steps to the more frequented streets the return tide is coming in from the city. We meet groups of men and women already drunk, singing, fighting and cursing as they stagger to their dens in the slums not far away. All night long these unseemly sounds may be heard if you wake to listen and the great human problem of sin and misery makes itself heard above the quieting voices of the night.

IN THE MORNING LIGHT.

However fascinating a night ramble may be; no matter how fairy-like the scene by moon-light, with the day-dawn the illusions vanish and many objectionable sights and practices are disclosed.

Garbage boxes stand in front of the doors unemptied until the middle of the forenoon. The practice of the police in turning the hose on the streets before the tardy scavengers have removed the sweepings of the previous day is intolerable. The shop-keepers have the habit of sweeping when they like and what they like into the street, so that a morning stroll in some quarters of the city is rather a precarious business. When it is windy in the shade the fragrance of the steam arising from this accumulation of filth may better be imagined than otherwise. At this time the carbolic acid and other disinfectants used on account of the bubonic plague add to the discomfort. The wind sweeps in a cloud of dust these particles of contagion and death.

Another fruitful means of disseminating disease is the practice of keeping all kinds of provisions exposed to the open air. Along comes the baker with an open cart heaped high with loaves of bread exposed to the sun and dirt, behind him trudges a Chinaman with a hand cart carrying the vegetables you are to have for dinner; these are treated to the same dust bath. Then comes the meat man followed by the fruit man and the cloud envelops them all. If the tidy housewife take her basket and visit the market she will find meat, fruit, pastry and vegetables alike exposed to insects and dust. No need of rats and fleas to carry the plague; it comes laden on every breeze.

THE HARBOR.

After answering the first question as to whether the United States will join with Great Britain in the coming division of the Powers, or the other form of the same question, "What do you think is the feeling in America with regard to the Boer War," we are asked: "What do you think of the harbor?" On passing through it for the first time we had been too intent upon getting ashore to fully comprehend its vastness and beauty. But by making use of the numerous small boats which ply from point to point and by imitating Samantha as a P. I. and Theophrastus Such by turns, we gleaned some facts until finally its significance began to dawn upon us. Its beauty still grows and impresses us anew the more we study it.

This harbor is sixth in importance in the British Empire. It stands first of the quintette of which Sydney boasts in rivaling all other cities of the world.

Port Jackson, Middle Harbor and North Harbor with their serrated banks of coves, inlets and bays afford three hundred miles of coast line all within a radius of ten miles of the obelisk, a point from which all distances are measured. The entrance is flanked by two bold and imposing promontories, three hundred feet high and a mile apart. These Heads are the extremities of peninsulas enclosing the gulf which divides into the several arms of the harbor. Middle Head projects into the harbor directly in front of the entrance, so that a short distance out at sea it seems a part of the outer coast line. After coming into the harbor and rounding into Middle Head the main basin is disclosed, and its great capacity can be appreciated. The six small islands add to the picturesqueness. Promontories, bold headlands and over-hanging cliffs are characteristic throughout. The water is fifteen fathoms deep in the basin. The deep water extends in great part to the base of the cliffs making dredging unnecessary. Many miles of wharfage are available without any artificial preparation.

The peculiar arrangements of the Heads prevented Captain Cook from making the discovery though he sailed past and named the harbor. While at Botany Bay a few miles below he is said to have ascended an elevation from which it is visible, but he seems not to have distinguished it from the ocean, if indeed he saw it at all. Botany Bay having been explored by Cook, it was through his recommendation it was selected as a suitable site for the settlement of a convict colony. In 1788 Governor Phillip was sent out with a consignment of convicts, but finding the water supply insufficient at Botany Bay, he went in search of a better location and sailed into Port Jackson. Seeing at once the great advantages which it offered he brought his fleet here and established the colony on the present site of Sydney.

Thus while our forefathers in England were living under old conditions preceding the Revolution, England began developing on this new continent the possessions which have in a large measure compensated her for the loss of her American Colonies.

Many relics of convict days remain in the roads, bridges and public works of Sydney. One especially attracts the notice. A beautiful circular drive of three miles leads around one side of the Outer Domain to a bold headland on the summit of which is a huge rock hewed into a rude seat known as Mrs. Macquarie's Chair, in honor of the Governor's wife who made the plan and directed the convict labor herself. The Domain has a drive of two miles the other side leading from the heart of the city down to the wharves. This Domain fringes upon the Botanical Gardens, meets the harbor at Farm Cove and extends to Hyde Park which concludes the chain of pleasure grounds. These parks are left open night and day. During the year many thousand shelterless people sleep here. On week days various games are played, cricket, the distinctively Australian game taking the lead. On Sunday it is the campus for open air meetings. Any one who imagines he has a mission or a grievance selects a position and begins. If he has an audience very well, if not he talks to the open air.

All sorts and conditions of men and women make up these audiences and as a matter of course are addressed by the same medley of speakers. The Boer War, the Chinese entanglement, the labor problem, Darwin, Swedenbourg, temperance, theories of Henry George, anarchy, gospel meetings, itinerant concerts, by the maimed the halt and the blind may all claim attention simultaneously on this common ground.

At the city entrance is placed a commanding statue of Governor Bourke. This Domain contains eighty-two acres while its neighbor Hyde Park contains forty-nine. The chief feature of the latter is its avenue of gigantic wild fig trees which extend its full length. A statue of Prince Albert is at one end of this park. Well planned flower-beds relieve the dinginess of the well worn grass, and rustic benches add to the comfort of the many people who patronize it.

In addition to this chain of parks and gardens Moore Park contains five hundred acres. Though somewhat bleak and barren its sand hills afford excellent views in every direction. Three notable institutions are within this enclosure: the Agricultural Show Grounds, Cricket Grounds and the Zoo. The last is much frequented and contains fine specimens of birds, beasts and reptiles. The various species of marsupials are well represented here.

Centennial Park, so named because of the exhibition held here in 1888, one hundred years after Governor Phillip entered Port Jackson Harbor, contains seven hundred acres. Roads eighty feet wide are in keeping with its extent. Asphalt paths for pedestrians and cyclists; polo grounds, foot ball grounds and cricket pitches are provided for the lovers of games.

A string of lakes, beautiful shade trees, flowers and birds add to the charm of the place. It is said the singing of the sky lark may be heard almost the year round. The delicate white Christmas bells and famous flannel flowers will be in bloom when you read this.

The Inaugural Ceremonies attending the Opening of the Commonwealth and arrival of Lord Hopetown the Governor General will take place in this park. It has been selected on account of its historical association and because it will afford room for the hundreds of thousands of people who are expected to be present, without endangering their lives with a crush.

VOLUME XLIX. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 19, 1900. NUMBER 47.

...als." Chap. 15.

...after these events recited an ...word of the Lord occurred ...to Habram in a vision, be (the ...ord) with ...ing, Fear not Habram. I ...am protecting (lit. holding a shield ...) ...; thy wages will be very ...

...2. And Habram said, O Lord Jehovah sole Lord (despota, kurie) what wilt thou give unto me? And I am perishing childless; moreover the son of Masek my house-maid (born in the house too), this Damascene Heliezer is mine.

3. And Habram said, Since thou hast not given me seed, my house-man will inherit me.

4. And straightway there occurred a voice of the Lord unto him saying, This one shall not inherit thee; but one who will come out of thee, this one will inherit thee.

5. And he led him outside and said unto him, Look up toward the heavens and number the stars, if thou art able to number them. And he said, In this wise will be thy seed.

6. And Habram put faith in God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.

7. And he said unto him, I am the God who led thee out of a land of Chaldaioi to give unto thee to inherit this land.

8. And he said, O Lord, thou sole Lord, (despota, kurie), In what way shall I comprehend that I am going to inherit it?

9. And he said unto him, Take a three-year-old heifer and a three-year-old female goat, and a three-year-old ram and a turtle-dove and a pigeon.

10. And he took for him all these and served them in the middle, and ... the birds he did not sever.

11. And birds came down upon the carcases upon their dissevered portions; and Habram sat down along with them.

12. And about sun-set an ecstasy fell upon Habram; and lo, a great dark fear fell upon him.

13. And it was oracularly told Habram, Comprehend that thy seed will be a sojourning seed in a land not its own, and they will subject them to bond-service and treat them ill and humble them for four hundred years.

14. And the nation which they shall serve as bond-servants I shall judge myself; and after that they will come out here with a vast removal.

15. But thou wilt depart unto thy fathers in peace, sustained unto a good old age.

16. And in a fourth generation they will return here; for not yet have the sins of the Amorraioi been filled up until that now.

17. And that when the sun had sat, there occurred a flame of fire; and lo, a smoking oven and lamps of fire which passed through between these dissevered portions (making a cross of fire).

18. And on that day the Lord made a covenant with Habram, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land from the river of Aiguptos unto the great river Euphratees.

19. The Kenaioi and the Kenezaioi and the Kedmonaioi,

20. And the Chettaioi and the Pherezaioi and the Hrapharin and the Amorraioi and the Chananaioi and the Eualoi and the Gergesaioi and the Jebonaioi.

COMMENT.

1st verse R. V. does not distinguish and never does but the general term for "the word" and the specific term. The latter is "the oracular word" specifically in the want of any better expression for it in English, and this "word" didn't "come" but "became" or "occurred" in some way to the consciousness always of the prophet or "seer." In this case we are told how it "occurred"—"in a vision" namely. Nor does it say, "I am thy shield," but literally "I am holding a shield over thee" or as I have rendered it "protecting." Nor does it say, "I am thy exceeding great reward," but does say "thy wages will be very great." There is a vast difference between "rewards" and "wages."

The Lord generally represents himself as a wage-payor not as a rewarder.

In the 2nd verse instead of "O Lord God" in the R. V. it reads "O Lord thou sole Lord" or "Despotees." Make a note of this. For the two appellations are not equivalents. Also the text reads "am perishing" instead of "go." The ballance of the verse is all wrong. What Habram says is that this Heliezer, a son of my house-maid, a native of Damascus, (his concubine of course) is mine—that is his male heir, if he does not leave a male heir in regular wedlock. The text says nothing about possessing, "Shall be possessor of my house" is inserted bodily. The 3rd verse gives the reason why this "my house man" will inherit him. This was the law in those days when a man died childless of legitimate "seed." The semi-legitimate inherited in such cases, in the male line.

In the 4th verse the R. V. says "And behold the Word of the Lord came, etc." The text reads "And straightway there occurred a voice of the Lord unto him." And "out of thee" instead of "out of thine own bowels." Progeny doesn't come this way, and people knew better than that in those days too.

In the 5th verse R. V. has "tell the stars." The text reads "number the stars."

The 6th verse reads in the R. V. "counted it" should read "accounted it."

The 7th verse reads "Ur of the Chaldees" R. V. There is no word for "Ur" in the text. Should read "a land of the Chaldaioi."

In the 8th verse R. V. we have "O Lord God" instead of "O Lord, thou sole Lord" a valu... "Comprehend" also is better than "know" as well as literal in this verse. For all that follows one of the many ways of comprehension by which he was to be taught to know and "see my day." The Christ says "Habraam saw my day and was glad."

In the 10th verse the R. V. leaves out "facing one another" a very important omission if one expects to understand this symbolism. Place these carcases according to the direction of the text, the heads or the "faces" of the sacrifices facing one another at a common center, the birds in a line at the top and facing down, and we have a cross, and the lamps following the dissevering line of each carcass gives a cross of light in the darkness.

Also the only distinction between the birds offered in sacrifice and the birds that came down on the carcasses is the preposition "the" with the former. The text does not say anything about "birds of prey." Of course they were.

In the 12th verse the R. V. says "a deep sleep fell upon Abram." The text says "An ecstacy fell upon him." That it was not an ordinary sleep is shown from the context. For it says, "he was oracularly told" instead of "And he said unto Abram," etc.

In the 13th verse R. V. says "know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger," etc. Should read "Comprehend that thy seed will be a sojourning seed," etc. In the next clause the R. V. says and "they shall serve them." should read "And they will subject them to bond-service." The R. V. leaves out entirely the "And will humble them" which was a very important part of God's lesson to his people.

In the 14th verse the R. V. leaves out the word "here" "come out here" an important topographical fact in regard to "the exodus."

15th verse R. V. says "thou shalt be buried in a good old age." Should read "wilt be sustained unto a good old age."

In the 16th verse "Sin of the Amorraite" instead of "iniquity of the Amorite," R. V. There is a difference between sin and iniquity.

In the 17th verse R. V. says "a flaming torch" should read "lamps of fire" and "furnace" should read "oven." "Dissevered" omitted also.

In the 18th verse R. V. reads "have I given," should read "will I give." It hasn't been fulfilled yet.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Selected.

The Bible.

But, say some, the Bible is not from God. Whence came it then? Some say "from bad men" and was palmed off upon an ignorant set of dupes ever ready to receive, without investigation, whatever was offered them. 'Tis strange that bad men should take so much pains to write out their own death warrant. Why upon every page we read the condemnation of wicked men!

"Provide things honest in the sight of all men," is one of those precepts of the Bible dishonest men hate. The extortioner finds no comfort in the Scripture doctrine of restitution. The drunkard reads his doom in that blessed book. He who deals out the intoxicating draught to his fellow man reads his woe upon its pugs.

When I can gather grapes of the thorn tree, and figs from thistles—when I can dip sweet water out of a bitter fountain—then, and not till then, will I believe that the best book in all the world was made by the worst of men.

But, say some, "It is not a good book, it is wholly false; the Bible is untrue." Then all I have to say is, that falsehood has done more good than all truth, if the Bible be not true. Others say, "good men have written the Bible, not God." Well, one thing a good man will not do—he may err—he may sin grievously—but he will not wilfully lie, and die for his falsehood the death of a martyr. Good men never claimed to be the authors of the Bible. Good men have always ascribed to the Bible the title of the "revelation of God."

If bad men did not make it—if it was not the work of good men, then God is its author. This sacred volume, containing a variety of compositions, historical, poetical, judicial, preceptive, and prophetical, written at various times by different persons to whom the ideas were conveyed through a space of fifteen hundred years, stands pre-eminent, and claims our admiration and reverence. The scheme of doctrine and morality of the Bible is so exalted, pure and benevolent that God alone could be its author.

In the Scripture alone is God introduced as speaking in a manner worthy of himself, with simplicity, majesty, and authority. His character as therein delineated contains all possible excellence without any admixture. His laws and ordinances accord with his infinite perfections. His works and dispensations exhibit them; and all his dealings with his creatures bear stamp of infinite wisdom, power, justice, purity, truth, goodness, and mercy, harmoniously displayed.

Simply Form.

The following from a daily paper shows very clearly the tendency of the times. People still have an idea that a church is a good thing, but do not want any thing that will bind them to do or say any certain things. The people of God must be on the watch as much against a false liberalism as against pronounced infidelity.

The People's Pulpit, Milwaukee, which is conducted at Pabst Theater, is to be made the center from which similar movements are to be started in other cities. It is not denominational, but furnishes a place of worship for those who do not wish to be bound by an orthodox creed. The incorporators plan to have the work wholly free from sectarianism, controversy, or partisanship. The Pulpit has been in existence for ten months and has done a good work. There is no attempt at church organization, no solicitation for members. It is governed by a Board of Directors, and the attendance is about 1,200. Services are held every Sunday afternoon, the regular pastor being the Rev. T. E. Barr.

That religion which does not govern the tongue, and make us beneficent and holy, is not the religion of Christ, and will secure salvation never.

An Appeal to the Brotherhood of the Church of God.

The Restitution is a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Church of God, and we ask you to kindly read the following lines, and consider our mutual interests

This paper gives you all the Church news, announcements of meetings and reports of them when held.

It gives notices of deaths of members in all parts of the country.

It gives exegetical articles that are of great value to the student.

It gives articles on prophecy, and all the news that bears on the fulfilment of the future part of God's word.

It contains articles that set forth the nature of mankind, and the Hope he has for any thing hereafter.

It sets forth the Gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Christ and his Apostles, and insists that this Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things that concern the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, are what constitute the power of God unto salvation to him that believeth it.

It goes further, and insists that a holy life consistent with the high profession made, is just as necessary as belief—i. e. that Faith is well, and Works are well, and necessary both of them. That Sincerity alone will never save of itself.

It advocates the restoration of literal Israel to their own land as the only consistent way of fulfilling the promises made to the fathers.

It contains articles that show the necessity for a resurrection of the dead as the only means of attaining the blessings promised the faithful.

It gives articles showing that the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus the Christ must be just as literal as his first coming or his going away was; and that the saints have no hope of reward until that event; thus making that the most important of all the important events that will occur.

This paper urges all these matters, and many others of like nature, including immersion as the only mode of baptism, and at a cost of but $1.50 per year, about three cents a week. It contains more reading matter than 14 books that usually sell for $1.00 each, and is the very best means you can have of keeping posted as to the workings of the Church and the world as relating to prophetic doings.

It is not sensational, and is not controversial in the sense that it wishes to discuss matters that are of secondary importance, when there is so much that is of prime importance to lay before our readers.

It holds that personal attacks by brethren upon others is out of place, and only tends to work harm in place of good, and urges always the settlement of differences by private means.

With these points here set forth we solicit you to give us your subscription for the coming year, and we assure you that you will be many times paid for the expense. Try it and be convinced of what we say.

If you have not seen a late copy we will gladly send you a sample free on request.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

The Restitution,
Plymouth, Ind.

"If some are refined, like gold, in the furnace of affliction, there are many more that, like chaff, are consumed in it. Sorrow, when it is excessive takes away fervor from action, health from the body, light from reason, and repose from the conscience."

Recent events in South Africa show that the war is not exactly over with. In a battle near Petoria the English were defeated, and some hundreds taken prisoners. It seems to be the way now when confronted by superior numbers and retreat is impossible, to reverse the old fashion of fighting to the last man, and just surrender at once. By this means arms and munitions are lost, but life saved. Parliament has voted another large sum of money to prosecute the war to a finality.

We wish to call attention to the "Important Notices" on our 4th page. We will not be responsible for money sent in a letter, even if registered. A letter said to contain $2.00 was empty when it came, and of course we must stand the loss, as a registered letter was supposed to be a safe way to send money. Send a bank draft, P. O. money orde or express order, and always have them made payable to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Ind. There are other "Plymouths" in other states, so be sure it reads "Ind." Do not make your order payable to any individual, but this office, as above.

Also regarding return of articles. We must ask that where such are valuable, and cannot be replaced, that copy be kept by the author. Recently a case has occurred where the article was valued, and cannot be reproduced, and is lost in transit. After the labor of preparing an article, making a copy is comparatively a small job. The risk of accident in the mails, by fires, misplacement, etc, is great. Besides, we are often blamed for such losses when in fact we have no knowledge of anything being sent at all. Of course thousands go all right, and only one is lost, but it always happens to be the one that is valued highest. So please be careful.

On last Sunday evening Bro. A. H. Zilmer closed his series of meetings at Plymouth, having preached 16 discourses, covering over three Sundays. It is impossible to tell of the value of these discourses to the careful listener. Our Brother simply gave Bible all the way through, and any one who failed to be benefitted can place no blame on the speaker. It was stated by some who have been constant attendants at our church for years, that we never had so complete a series of sermons, given in so convincing and masterly yet kind and courteous a manner. That our readers may gain an idea of the ground covered by Bro. Zilmer we give a list of the subjects as delivered.

Our present position on the chart of history.

The following ten points are covered by the powers in their demands on China, and they are likely to be accepted as the basis of settlement, thus keeping the Empire intact for the present.

Indemnity to the amount of 700,000,000 taels, payable within sixty years and guaranteed by the Likin.

The erection in Pekin of a suitable monument to the memory of Baron von Ketteler.

An Imperial Prince, a near relative to the Emperor, to go to Berlin to apologize and express regret for the murder.

Foreign troops to hold the lines of communication between Taku and Pekin.

Punishment of the Boxer officials.

Candidates from districts where anti-foreign outrages have been perpetrated not to be allowed to compete in the Chinese examinations in Pekin for five years.

Abolition of the Tsung-li-Yamen.

Foreign envoys to have access to the Emperor at all times.

Importation of arms and ammunition into the Province of Chili to be abolished.

The land and sea forts between Shan Hai Kwan, Taku, and Pekin to be destroyed.

The ship canal across the isthmus between North and South America, in which the United States and England are interested, and which is recognized as being so much needed, seems now to be a long way off owing to the congress of this country abrogating the terms of the existing treaty to such an extent that England will not accept it, thus blocking further proceedings. In short this government wants to construct the canal alone and have entire ownership and control, fortifying as it sees fit. Existing contracts which England is party to make this impossible unless England give up her rights, which is not likely to happen. The work will thus be hindered for the present, unless concessions are made.

More and More Difficult.

Is it becoming to reach the ear and hearts of people in a large city with the Gospel of Life in God's kingdom. Men are rushing hither and thither in pursuit of something or other, as if conscious that no risks could be taken: as if happiness, and even life itself, were at stake. There is no use in approaching men in such a mad pursuit of earth's things, with the Gospel of God's favor. It is present good they live for, and have no time to devote to future good.

Even those who are piously inclined, and are willing to make religious sacrifices, cannot be arrested by an invitation to God's kingdom and glory: they have made other arrangements. Tradition makes them proof against the love of God as manifested in the Gospel of the kingdom preached by Jesus. Being opposed by both the religious and the irreligious, we have a hard road to travel,—and see little fruit of our labor. It makes a vast amount of searching necessary to find one willing to receive the engrafted Word with meekness. But to our joy we occasionally find one or two of that class. On Sunday, Nov. 11th, it was again our happy privilege to assist two more in putting on the of Jesus. And we now introduce Sister Price, formerly a Lutheran, and Sister Haffner, formerly a Catholic, to the church scattered abroad. After several months of patient and diligent investigation, the truth has made them free, and we hope in God that it may keep them free, and that their testimony may tell for God while the door stands open, and at last hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done."

Romans xi. 13, 14, 15,

Was vividly brought to mind by a paragraph in "Immanuel's Witness" of recent date. The apostle there says, "For I speak to you Gentiles: inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify my office, if by any means I may provoke to emulation my flesh, and might save some of them; for if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead!"

The paragraph referred to says,—"Charles Simeon and Edward Bickersteth were present at a meeting in the interest of the London Society for the Promotion of Christianity among the Jews. Simeon was the speaker, and in closing his speech, said they had met together that day for the furtherance of the most important object of the world, viz:—the conversion of the Jews." When Simeon sat down, Dr. Bickersteth, who was at that time a Secretary of the Church Missionary Society, wrote on a slip of paper; "Eight million Jews, eight hundred million heathen,—which of these is most important?" This paper he handed to Mr. Simeon, who at once turned it over and wrote on the other side: "Yes, but if the eight million Jews are to be 'as life from the dead' to the eight hundred million heathen, What then?"

We see from the above by how slow a process, the glorious truths we love and enjoy more than our daily food, was recovered from the traditions of men. One earnest searcher would discover a pearl, and another would catch a gleam of light that revealed somewhat of Jehovah's Eternal Purpose in regard to earth and man in the ages to come, but it was a long time before the various links could form a chain. But we are greatly indebted to the men who led the way out of traditionary ruts and set the example to search as for hidden treasure.

Both Simeon and Bickersteth were men of earnestness and ability, and also had the courage of their convictions. On the subject in hand both were partly right—and partly wrong. Both seemed to have erred in supposing that the conversion of the Jews before the coming of the Lord, by human instrumentality was very important; but the truth in that regard, is that nothing short of sight will effect their conversion as a people, see Zech. xii. 9–14, and Rev. i. 7; Matt. xxiii. 39; Psa. cxviii. 26; because of persistent faithlessness.

Bickersteth thought it of far more importance to convert 800 million heathen than eight million Jews; showing he was in darkness in reference to God's object in sending the good message to all during Gentile times,—viz: to take out a people for his name, who should by and by execute his grand design.

Simeon seems to have seen that God would use the Jews for his glory among the nations and yet erred in supposing that they must first be converted by a preached Gospel. The prevailing belief in the natural immortality of man and reward at death, and heaven the home of the righteous etc., would naturally blind them to the clearly revealed purposes of God in the Age to come, but, as we have observed already, we have been laid under great obligations to the early investigators, and by God's favor we are enabled to say with Paul that he "who commanded the light to shine out of darkness hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ."

Romans xii.

We regard this as one of the most solemn and important passages in all the Book of God for the Household of Faith! What a wonderful mirror it holds up to us! Truly it is heart-searching. To enumerate a few of the many points worthy of serious consideration, we mention—

1. The mercies of God are urged in an imploring way, as the motive for the presentation of our bodies a living sacrifice to God.

2. For non-conformity to this age, and conformity with the age about to dawn.

3. For the transformation of ourselves—the renewing of our minds.

4. For preventing every one of us from thinking too highly of ourselves, or anybody else, or anything else.

5. As the motive for remembering that we are each a member of one body, so that when one is seen to be doing an injury to another in word or act, we may know that such an one, if connected with the body at all, it is by the merest thread, because a man or woman who would with his hands mutilate his limbs or eyes, would be either called a fool or an insane person. He would suffer all over his person intensely by an injury to the least members, to say nothing of his eyes. It is precisely thus with the Body of Christ. The centre of all suffering is in the head of the natural body, so is it in the Body of Christ. If we wound one of the least of the members of his Body, he himself, the Head of the Body suffers most.

Would there be many offences committed if this were kept in mind? Let us from this moment try to remember that if we wound one of the least of Christ's brethren, we wound Christ himself.

6. The mercies of God are further urged as the motive to let our love be without dissimulation. This goes to show the force of another divine statement, of the heart's deceitfulness, and the need of keeping it with all diligence, or else it might happen that apparently love was felt when there was none! "Be kindly affectioned one to another, with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another." This divine rule, if applied, would shut out 95 per cent of all church troubles, we firmly believe. In honor preferring one's self, is the prolific source of trouble, God's injunction being despised.

7. The mercies of God are again urged as the motive to patience under tribulation. The idea is this: God's mercies toward us have been so great, that we show our appreciation of this fact by being merciful to others. And the want of this disposition toward others argues the want of appreciation of God's mercies to us.

8. The mercies of God are pleaded as cause for blessing those who persecute us; to bless them and curse not; to do good to them who despitefully use us, because it was while we were yet sinners Christ died for us.

9. The mercies of God should prevent us from avenging ourselves on those who wrong us, but rather give place to wrath! What does that mean? It means what it says! If it means what it says,—what wrath are we to give place to? Answer, give place to the wrath of God. If you ask proof that this is the God-idea of the passage, you have it in the same verse; it says as a reason for giving place to wrath, "For it has been written,—written near 1500 years before Christ, Deut. xxxii. 35, showing it to be an unalterable principle of the divine economy that the Apostle gives utterance to, in this passage;—"Vengeance is MINE, I will repay saith the Lord;" or as stated Heb. x. 30. "Vengeance belongeth to me, I will repay saith the Lord."

What, then, is the grand lesson for us? Why, the mercies of God toward us should prevent us from usurping his authority, taking it out of his hand and taking vengeance ourselves. To do that, is to doubt his word, that he will do as he says,—or that we feel that we are taking vengeance for something that he would not disapprove of!

10. To be of the same mind is also urged on account of God's mercies. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one toward another, and the converse of this is, that we are not his disciples,—only pretend to be, if we have not love one toward another.

The Modern Method of Saving.

We recently attended a meeting for men who are supposed not to attend any of the churches. The object was a worthy one, doubtless. Much excellent advice was given, and the grosser sins of this fast age were painted in their true colors. The speaker was one of the most popular in the city; he chose for his text the words of Saul to David, 1 Sam. xxvii. 21,— and have erred exceedingly." The audience of about nine or ten hundred men of all ages, were apparently deeply interested; and we think the vivid picture held up to them of a life about to close that the words of Saul would apply to, "I have played the fool, and have erred exceedingly:" and the earnest appeal to quit their evil practices and live right must have influenced many to mend their ways, if their ways were mendable.

"I HAVE PLAYED THE FOOL

But the painful thing to us, was, there was not a particle of the gospel of God's grace mixed in with all this earnestness and eloquence. It was astonishing to us that this vast audience was not told how to mend their ways. One would think that such zeal and natural ability would at least be accompanied with some of God's recipes for cleansing young men's ways. But no; not even David's answers to his own question in the 119th Psalm and 9th verse was given:—wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? Was given, "By taking heed according to thy words" is just to the point.

True, they were told to pray to God to cleanse their ways for them. But he should have known that God would do nothing of the kind for them, after neglecting the instructions given for cleansing themselves. Doubtless the speaker was honest, and told them all he knew,—but as he taught for doctrine the traditions of men, their worship is vain.

GOD'S LAW OF PARDON

is very explicit. Faith, repentance and baptism is an infallible recipe for pardon, peace and adoption. But the law of pardon is of no avail to them because faith has to be exercised in the gospel of the kingdom, and being ignorant of that, they are as far off as ever.

The climax of this grand delusion was reached when at the close of the meeting, "Decision Cards" were handed to all, apparently. They read as follows:—

"By this act I receive Jesus Christ as my Savior; and with his help, I will henceforth live a Christian life." "Name. Business address. Residence address. Church preferred," here followed. Sad to say it, they receive Christ on their own terms, not on his. Sadder still, if possible, he said to one who wanted to be immersed, that immersion was the custom in the time of Christ,—now either immersion or pouring or and quite likely in a few years hence some other method would be in vogue. Alas, alas! And yet we no sooner say that, than we bethink us that we should be thankful for such moral agencies. It is all that society can do to hold together with them. It would be much worse without them. Said John Milton:—"God either is or is not, such as he represents himself to be. If he be really such, why should we think others use of him? If he be not such, on what authority do we say what God has not said?.....Why should we hesitate to conceive of God according to what he has not hesitated to declare explicitly respecting himself?"

SPRINKLING WAS THE CUSTOM,

Isaiah ix. 5.

"In the common translation of this passage it is rendered as follows: 'Every battle of the warrior is with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood; but this shall be with burning and fuel of fire.' These words immediately precede the famous predictions of the Messiah, with which, as they now stand, they certainly appear to have very little connection. Dr. Kennicot therefore proposes a different translation: 'Every weapon of the warrior used in battle, and the garments rolled in much blood (or often rolled in blood) is for burning, even fuel of the fire.' This agrees very well with the promise of peace at the advent of the Messiah, and is the counterpart of the words of the Psalmist,—'When God maketh wars to cease in all the world, he breaketh the bow and snappeth the spear in sunder, and burneth the chariots in the fire.'"

In the M. S. translation of Wickliff, this passage is thus rendered, "Al violent raveyn with norse, and a cloth medlid with blood, shall be into brennynge, and shall be the meate of fyer."

In Vol. V. of the works of Robert Hall, p. 529, he says: "The evidence accompanying the popular interpretation of the doctrine of eternal suffering, is by no means to be compared to that which establishes our common Christianity; and therefore the fate of the Christian religion is not to be considered implicated in the belief or disbelief of the popular doctrine."

We have a few copies of the book called "The Scriptures Opened; or Thoughts and Themes for Bible Students" by Robert Ashcroft. It is a work that has passed the scrutiny of such of our brethren as Benjamin Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Wilson, J. F. Wagoner, A. J. Eychaner and others. It contains 370 pages, strongly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering on the back and side. It formerly sold for $1.25, but we offer the few we have on hand at 75 c. each post paid.

Brother M. Joblin wishes us to say that by the liberality of the friends of Truth, he can sell several hundred copies of "Law or Gospel, Which," at 50 cents per dozen, and trusts many will avail themselves of this opportunity to do missionary work, at little expense. Address him at 624 Woodland ave. Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

To Be as Your Boy.

If I were a king and my stately bride,
Were seated in gorgeous array at my side,
If my coffers choked with caddy gold,
If the scope of my power appeared untold,
I would give all these with delight
To be as your boy tonight.

I watch his innocent, smiling face,
His careless mein and unstudied grace;
I weep when the mother kisses his brow,
For it makes me feel what I am now;
And I know that even I might
Have been as your boy tonight.

I trust that his eyes will never see
Some of the pictures that opened to me,
In my search for pleasure and folly and sin,
And now the story "It might have been"
Proves that the mother was right
When she prayed with her boy at night.

Israel as a Nation. No. 3.

No anti-Jewish and anti-Israelitish expositor, however shrewd, can by any exegetical handling destroy the literal force of the language here employed by the prophet; or show its application to any body of people other than the literal and natural seed of Abraham. No one to my knowledge has ever undertaken to critically examine the prophecy with a view to showing that it has another meaning than the one apparent on the very surface of the words. I have read a great deal on that side of the proposition and know how the prophecy is disposed of with an observation or so, and these erroneous.

Therefore, it must stand as it reads. Hence all other prophecies, referring to Israel and Judah by name, the fulfillment of which, is admitted on all hands to belong to the future, must fall into harmony with the one I have been considering; and the question of Israel's restoration, and blessing, is settled beyond the possibility of successful contradiction. Ezekiel can not be out of harmony with the other prophets. So there is a glorious future for all the tribes confederated under one King. Much has already been done in carrying out God's purpose touching the larger section of the Hebrew family and the lesser section is looking Zionward with an earnest longing that will not be satisfied short of a home in a portion of the promised land. Poor Judah is blind to the revealed fact that the house of Israel is to aid her to return: for it is written, "In those days the house of Judah shall walk with (margin to) the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north, to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers." Jer. iii. 18. Herzl and Nordau and other leaders in the movement are silent as to the house of Israel or Ephraim taking part in the return, and resettlement of the land. This many times larger part of God's chosen people are ignored on all hands in all talks, newspaper and magazine articles, but the prophets do not pass over in silence the part that the house of Israel is to play in the drama of the near future. Their pages abound with numerous and extensive references to this latter house; and when we find the Jew in peaceful possession of the land covenanted to the fathers, we find the ten tribes in joint possession, and each tribe sharing with Judah an equal area of territory. The 48th chapter of Ezekiel furnishes us with an irrefutable argument in proof of the fact that God is not done with his chosen people after the flesh and nationally. A writer,—now dead—several years ago affirmed that the plan and specifications of the closing chapters of this prophet were intended for the time just subsequent to the return of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon, but for some reason they were not carried out and never would be. How presumptuous and daring for a man claiming to be fair and honest and writing with a view to convincing others that Age to Come believers were holding and promulgating a dangerous error; and also to settle the question in the minds of some of his brethren who were occasionally, but modestly calling attention to this disputed point. Had I been on the other side, his unfair treatment of the subject and his unsupported statements, would have prejudiced his whole case, in my mind, and raised the suspicion that truth is on the other side. This writer was the equal of any who wrote on that side and had the ability to defend the truth if it had been with him. So the only course left was for him to resort to ridicule and sarcasm. When it came to a prophecy and was afraid to venture on a course of criticism lest this should betray the weakness of his contention he simply said, This looks exceedingly Babylonish. Of the 14th chapter of Zechariah, It is mulish and smacks of pots, and so on ad nauseam. Such exhibitions of smartness and flippancy could result in nothing else than to bring the writer into contempt before all sober and sensible men. Another writer, Editor of a religious paper published at Buchanan, a quarter of a century ago, disposed of Age to Come views in this summary manner: "Beasts in the kingdom!!!! bosh it is all in your eye." Beasts, and Jews and Israelites in the flesh, would be equally out of place in the kingdom, according to the judgment of such men.

ISA. 11TH CHAPTER NOT BABYLONISH.

It has been alledged that this chapter was fulfilled at the return from Babylon. It was necessary that something should be said to destroy the obvious and natural meaning of the prophecy; so the 11th verse was brought forward as indubitable proof that the main particulars were fulfilled when the Jews went back from Babylon. "The Lord shall set his hand again, the second time to recover the remnant of his people," is the language which must bear the whole weight of the argument. God set his hand the first time to recover his people from Egypt. Very true. But how can it be true that the return from Babylon of about 30,000 Jews was the second time mentioned in this verse, Babylon not being named as the place from whence the recovery is wrought? Assyria, Egypt Pathros, Cush, Elam, Shinar, Hamath and the islands of the sea are the places named. The history of the captivity effected by Nebuchadnezzar records the fact that the Jews, and not all the tribes were carried to Babylon; the places of this 11th v. not being named as the destinations of these Jewish captives. At the end of the seventy years they returned from Babylon and not from these other places. Now, how, in the name of common sense can this second recovery be from Babylon? Neither history, nor this prophecy lends the least support to this theory. This second recovery, in the light of this 11th chapter, was to take place after the Branch should grow out of the roots of Jesse. All are agreed that this is the Christ the Son of David. Later than his first advent, was to be, according to the prophecy, the assembling of the outcasts of Israel and the gathering together of the dispersed of Judah. Judah had to be scattered to, or into the four corners of the earth before she could be gathered from thence. The Jews are still scattered. In the year 70 A. D. about 40 years after Jesus on Olivet predicted their doom Jerusalem fell and they were led away captive into all nations and they remain dispersed up to the present. See Luke xxi. 24. When the envy of Ephraim (the ten tribes) departs and the adversaries of Judah are cut off, when the former ceases to envy the latter and the latter shall not vex the former—when all this as here predicted, meets its accomplishment, the houses so long separated will be united upon the mountains of Israel being one nation with one King reigning over them. It is not possible to harmonize this prophecy with the theory that it was fulfilled when the Jews returned from Babylon.

JOHN L. WIXOM.

"Cares of This Life."

What are they? A few things that come to us by living in this world and caring for each other: many, many things, unnecessary cares, courted and married by us because we have loved them, loved them more than the sweet quiet home-love, more than the words spoken by our loving Father, more than the once sacred family altar, more than the much-needed soul inspiring prayer meeting, and made us forget the letters we once sent home every week, to the loving, lonesome mother, waiting O so impatiently to get the few words that will comfort her, has made us forget to read the RESTITUTION, or any other religious reading, but in its place, politics, as corrupt as it is, the current novels so full of wit, humor or pathos, nothing but falsehood, but O so inspiring.

What is it? It is the cares we have courted and married. The lodges, clubs, games, society, late suppers, fashionable attire, in short love of pleasure more than love for God. The admonition was not to accept such things, court them, enjoy them, spend your valuable time with them, but, "From such turn away." Why? "For the end of these things is death."

God's Son is our example of holy piety because that was the way to everlasting life, his admonition was, "Come out from the world and be ye separate," for the world's ways were sinner's ways, and the wages of serving sin, was death. Our real cares are enough to tire and perplex us, but when we take these added cares after being warned by a faithful Father, the more easy and safer road carefully marked by a loving guide, what must he think of us when we add these cares to a life that might be made so useful in the cause of truth, so valuable to the church, to those already too weak to walk the straight and narrow way, made weaker by our example.

When we might have a sweet and holy hour with God in the study of his Word, it is the lodge or some part in society that claims our time, lost to God and good, and given over to the devil to glory over, and what has it worked for your poor soul? Tired body and brains, sleepy eyes, overtaxed nerves and a fretful temper to begin the next day of home life.

Wherefore, smiles and peace should reign are fretfulness, fault-finding, cross words, jealous thoughts, coldness, unrest, and some one is suffering more even than yourselves. See the puzzled look on the faces of the little ones, wondering why papa and mama are so cross to each other, and what they have done that needed the sharp retort.

What has brought all this? The unnecessary added cares we have married. O loved ones, apply for a divorce without delay, for the "Lord has no pleasure in your death, but that you should turn from your evil ways and live." O dear ones, these things ought not so to be. We for whom Christ died, we who were bought with the price of blood, who have the blessed future of glory promised us when he comes to claim his own, not satan's, not to those who have tried to divide the inheritance with him, but his own who have been willing to enter the covenant with him by sacrifice, whatever that sacrifice might mean to us. O who will be ready to receive the glorious gift of life? "To him that is faithful unto death, I will give the crown of life."

Yours waiting for life everlasting.

Universalism.

[We give below a letter written by Brother William Mills addressed to the publisher of a paper called Present Truth. It was called forth by an article appearing in the September issue of that paper, in which universal salvation, of the entire human family, was taught. It so surprised Brother Mills to think that those claiming to belong to the Church of God advocated such a doctrine, that he wrote the letter. In place of giving it as written, they made extracts from the letter, and replied to it that way. With this explanation we give Brother Mills' letter, and the reply from the Editor of Present Truth, and our readers can judge which is Scriptural.—ED.]

To the Publisher of Present Truth—So named:

DEAR SIR, I have received sample copies, and also several copies while published by other parties, but I never felt like supporting it, for there have been so many things in it that I cannot harmonize with the Bible of truth, and whatever we cannot find "thus saith the Lord" for, we believe is man made; and we read that many false teachers have gone out into the world, and we believe there are lots of them at the present time. We think that the only way for us to do is to prove all things before we teach or support them.

I notice in your September number that you teach universal salvation to all, and do not believe in the final destruction of the wicked. I think your hope is broad enough, surely, and it would suit me all right if true. But I cannot harmonize it with the Scriptures of truth, nor can I find a "thus saith the Lord" for its support, that is plainly taught, only by the first deceiver to Adam and Eve, and who is said to be a liar from the beginning. Can all finally be saved when the Bible says the wages of sin is death, not life? Rom. vi. 23, and that his place shall not be, Psa. xxxvii. 10, that all that are not written in the Book of Life are cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death, Rev. xx. 15, xxi. 8, that the wicked shall be as if they had not been, Oba. xvi. etc.

Christ used the word Gehenna twelve times, which is translated Hell, and he says that the whole body shall be cast into gehenna fire. Mat. v. 29, 30. Now every Bible scholar knows that every thing that was cast into Gehenna fire was burnt up, like tares and stubble. We read that all nations that forget God shall be cast into hell, or sheol, Psa. ix. 17. If that is only the first death the righteous suffer the same penalty, for all go there, all die alike the first death. All go to the same place, Eccl. iii. 20.

We read that the wicked shall be burnt up root and branch, and that they shall be ashes under your feet. Mal. iv. 13. That they shall perish—consume away into smoke. Psa. 37, 20. The destruction by the flood and Sodom and Gomorrah are set forth as an ensample of those that shall afterwards live ungodly. 2 Pet. ii. 5, 6.

Christ said "broad is the way that leads to destruction and many go in thereat, but narrow is the way that leads to life, and few there be that find it. We think Christ knew what he was talking about.

You say that all on the earth or under the earth shall praise the Lord, but that will be after the destruction of all the wicked, for his place shall not be, as we have shown, neither under the earth nor above the earth, for they shall be ashes under their feet; turned to dust again, so they will be ashes or dust.

If all these passages, with many more too numerous to mention, do not mean what they say, I would ask what part of the Scriptures can we believe? For one I believe it all when rightly divided; and by God's help I trust that no mortal man shall ever make we believe otherwise.

We cannot take part of a verse or sentence and leave the rest out. If we do we can teach any doctrine taught in this generation that I know of. If men would leave these hobbies alone, and preach the One Gospel, they might do worlds of good, but such doctrines do worlds of harm. We know what we are talking about, for we have seen its effects. Oh, may God help us all to hold out faithful, and not be led astray and be deceived by every wind and doctrine of men, is our prayer.

WM. MILLS.

REPLY TO ABOVE.

We cannot spare space in our paper for a lengthy discussion, but would say to Bro. Mills, that we believe as he does that the wicked will be destroyed, burnt up, killed by the edge of the sword, perish, not be, die, be consumed, etc., but as all these texts, as well as those that speak of the sinner who dies during the millennial age for his own sins (Jer. xxxi. 30; Isa. lxv. 20) refer to penalties inflicted before the general resurrection of Rev. xx. 11-14, we do not think them final. It is age lasting destruction. 2 Thes. i. 9, Diag. When the dead small and great arise, and the sea and death and hades deliver up their dead, all these wicked are restored to life to be "judged according to their works." v. 13. This judgment is for the good of the wicked. Mat. xii. 20; Heb. xii. 6 Many will never be reformed only by judgment or chastisement. When they receive their few or many stripes we believe they will be obedient, and bow the knee, and confess Christ. Phil. ii. 10, 11. The lake of fire, or second death is the same as the refiner's fire, Mal. iii. 3, to purify those cast into it. The works of the devil—sin in man—must be destroyed, that man—the work of God—may be saved. Luke ix. 56; 1 John iii. 9; Gen. ii. 7.

The statement that "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ," Rom. vi. 23, we do not think refers to two classes, one of which gets wages—death, and the other a gift—life, but refers to one class—the whole race of Adam—who all reap the wages—death and all will receive the gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ. All have sinned, hence all reap sin's wages. Rom. iii. 23; v. 18. Jesus delivers all. John v. 28, 29.—Present Truth.

The Editor of Present Truth says he "cannot spare space for a lengthy discussion," presumably of this subject. It is too bad he cannot, for if it is truth it is the greatest piece of glad tidings that could possibly be given to men, and should not be kept back. As it is he could have saved nearly all the space his reply occupies by simply stating "We believe in the ultimate salvation of every man, woman and child, that ever did live, now lives, or ever shall live." "We are Universalists." Then he could have quoted the 48 words which constitute the "New Confession of Faith" adopted by the recent convention of the Universalist Church held at Boston, and just added "Amen, me to." That our readers may see how exactly these believers in this "Broader Hope," "Advanced Light," "Universalism" are in accord with the regular Universalist Church, we give herewith this 48 word creed:

"The essential principles of the Universalist faith are the universal fatherhood of God; the spiritual authority and leadership of his Son, Jesus Christ; the trustworthiness of the Bible as containing a revelation from God; a certainty of retribution from sin; the final harmony of all souls with God."

Separate Meetings.

Distinction is absolutely necessary between a conference for business, and a mass meeting of churches for mutual enjoyment, encouragement and edification. Both held at same time, in conjunction is proper. But delegates chosen for Conference work should be at their post at the beginning. In the Indiana Conference, the business being set for Friday and Saturday to be done by the delegates, is for them to do at the time assigned, and they as well as all others have the benefit and enjoyment of the meetings assigned for the rest of the time, usually exclusive of business on Sunday. Delegates should not think they are chosen simply to enjoy the preaching, etc. on Sunday. This destroys the Conference which is for the purpose of congregations conferring together, by their delegates as to ways and means in co-operation, to accomplish the required work, which neither alone could accomplish. It is not a supposed case to say that on Friday morning when the roll of delegates was called—none present with one or two exceptions—same in afternoon,—no business completed that day. Saturday morning not much better—afternoon more delegates present, and business goes forward. Result business of two days crowded into about one-half day, put through hurriedly, impossible for any secretary to have the minutes in any shape to be read and approved at the close, (which should be). They go forward for approval to next Conference. The secretary as best he can reports proceedings. Is criticised for this and that. Let the congregations clearly discern where the responsibility lies, and for what the delegates are selected, with a view to radical improvement. Permit me to add to secretary's explanation in last issue as to report of evangelical solicitor. He being appointed to work up co-operation of congregations in this behalf—made report of what he supposed the Conference would want to know. The ones having been visited, the result as to co-operation, the amount from each congregation, thereby showing the ratio according to membership, etc., which showed ratio among those doing with a divergence in congregations from 27 cents a month to each member down to less than 3 cents each in others. This largely owing no doubt to want of understanding. Those heretofore in the habit of doing, did nobly, others not in the habit heretofore did well, and a very few failed to report any co-operation. Taken altogether some progress has been made, as always and ever, some ill advised will oppose any reformation however good it may be. Hence it takes time. Let us not write failure. But by patient continuance in well doing be hopeful, and charitable toward those opposing they know not what, or why. By so doing they will become beautifully less as time goes on.

D. T. HALSTEAD.

[All congregations not being situated alike "it is not a supposed case" to say that circumstances render it impossible for all societies to give to any specific work (such as State evangelist) the same. The home obligations often compell a use of funds locally that other congregations not having such obligation can and do give for outside causes. The brethren and sisters should all feel it a duty, and also a privilege, to contribute all they can for the cause of Christ, but a distinction between congregations is necessary.—ED.]

Obituary.

Again has the brotherhood at Argos been called upon to mourn with the mourners. Our esteemed Sister in Christ, Mrs. Sallie Deemer, her family, and a husband, mourning the loss of a daughter, sister and wife.

Emma Deemer Logan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Deemer, was born in Whitley County, Indiana, Dec. 10, 1874; died at her home in South Bend, Indiana, Dec. 5, 1900.

Her parents moved to the vicinity of Argos, Indiana, when she was but five months old. Here she grew up surrounding herself with many warm friends, as was attested on the occasion of her burial. On March 28th, 1897, she was married to Marion Logan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Logan. They took up their residence in South Bend in the spring of 1899.

It was in 1894, the year following the death of her father, that the deceased began attending the Normal School at Valparaiso. While here she was moved to obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto her, she then uniting with the Christian Church at that place. Her faith however, directed her to look for the second coming of our Lord, at which time she expected life to be given, and the reward to be bestowed upon the faithful ones, who should attend the Christ in his reign and kingdom.

While her life was short, as has been the life of many another, yet the very fact of her existence in the natural body made it possible for her to exist in the spiritual body. For that was not first which is spiritual but that which is natural and afterward that which is spiritual. So, let us not mourn as others which have no hope. For it is not in this natural body that we may hope, howsoever long we may live, to attain unto the fullness of man's existence. Rather is this the essential basis upon which that fullness, spiritual existence, is to be built. Therefore we would direct this bereaved mother, husband and sister, those brothers and friends to him who shall wipe away all tears, replacing natural with spiritual; mortal with immortal; corruptible with incorruptible; removing the curse from off our surroundings;—filling the earth with the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

F. L. AUSTIN.

[The following is from the Shelton, Neb., Clipper, concerning one who was a brother of our sister Mrs. C. P. Leland of Argos, Ind.—ED.]

The funeral of the late Lorenzo Plumb, who died last Friday morning, occurred Sunday afternoon, the services being held in the Presbyterian church and being conducted by Prof. Wilkinson of Union college, Lincoln. There was a large attendance, notwithstanding the fact that the weather was quite disagreeable.

Lorenzo Plumb was born in Sandusky County, Ohio, June 26, 1847, where he spent his boyhood days. At the age of twenty-one he went to Iowa, remaining there three years and coming to Nebraska in 1871, twenty-nine years ago. When he came here he located on a homestead northwest of Shelton and was one of the pioneers who went through all the hardships attendant upon a residence in this part of Nebraska in the early days. He was married in 1890 at Rolla, Missouri, to Mary A. Egolf, who survives him. Three children were born to them, Charles, Lulu and Clarence, all of whom are living. They resided on the homestead taken by Mr. Plumb until a few years ago, when Mr. Plumb's health compelled him to give up farm work, and they removed to Shelton, where they have since resided. Mr. Plumb was a man who made many friends and no enemies. He was a conscientious Christian, honest and scrupulous in all his dealings with his fellow men, and his death is regretted by all who knew him. He was quiet and unassuming, and took his greatest delight in being at home with his family. He had been in poor health for a number of years, but was able to be about until a few weeks since. He was, however, confined to his bed but very little of the time during his last illness, and even the evening before his death sat up until quite late, and his death was consequently unexpected.

The Faint Taper.

"Among even genuine Christian experiences there are wide and important differences. Some are full and rich at the start; others burn faintly as though ready to expire in the very moment of kindling. Somewhat curiously, the latter not seldom turn out the best. With lapse of time, the flame expands and becomes more intense; the light is permanent and steady; the new life comes forth in freshness and beauty. As in the Church we find such minor disciples, so in the individual Christian character we find humble traits, taper-like graces, which need care and nurture to bring them to completeness, and which, once cared for, yield a rich harvest of results. In Christian experience, not less than in economics, we need to follow Franklin's rule about saving the littles. Lift up the grace that is fallen down; pour in oil upon the wounded part. Cultivate the best feelings and desires, even though for the moment they may not be predominant; a better phase of religious experience awaits your efforts and faith."

Will Brother Chas. Gardner please explain who Melchisedeck is that we read of in Gen. xiv., and in Heb. vii. 3-4, without father, without mother, without descendants, having neither beginning of days nor end of life.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Obituary.

Another dear one has gone down under the power of death, Sister Ella Hullberger, in the 20th year of her life. Died at her father's home, Dec. 2, 1900; walking around the house at 10 A. M. and at 2 P. M. sleeping in Jesus, that treacherous quick consumption had done its work. She died trusting in the power of God to raise her from the dead, lovely in her life, sweetly resigned in death. Sister Ella was brought up in the German Baptist faith, and was baptized by them a few years ago, but being a regular attendant at the Church of God Sunday school and meetings, she learned the truth, and at my last visit with her she expressed a strong belief in the hope of being raised from the dead when Jesus should return. Funeral sermon by Elder B. W. Woodward, text, Psa. cxvi. 15, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." May God comfort the sorrowing ones.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Endeavor, if possible, to keep a clear conscience and two or three clean shirts. Rise with the lark, but avoid larks in the evenings. Be above ground in all dwellings, above board in all your dealings. Love your neighbor as yourself, but don't have too many in the same house with you.

WE have during the last few weeks, sent letters to a number of those who are owing us, setting forth our condition, and asking for aid by renewals. Some have responded, and we are thankful to you for your prompt attention and uniformly kind words. We are forced to say that the large part of those whom we have addressed have apparently paid no heed to our call. Brethren, this is a wrong way to do. We told you the truth when we wrote, and it is truth now. It is expensive both in time and money to write letters. Only one is not much, but the many makes a burden in expense and time. By a little attention you can save us both the cash outlay and the labor. You certainly know when your time is out. Then please aid us by a prompt renewal. Don't let us ask again.

Please announce that I am ready to fill calls for preaching anywhere in the State of Missouri. Address me at Mountain Grove, Mo.

J. M. PRIMMER.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

Also the remainder of the edition of Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association, by A. H. Zilmer, is in the hands of this committee. About 70 copies only remain, at 5 cents each.

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

An Appeal to the Brotherhood of the Church of God.

THE RESTITUTION is a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Church of God, and we ask you to kindly read the following lines, and consider our mutual interests.

This paper gives you all the Church news, announcements of meetings and reports of them when held.

It gives notices of deaths of members in all parts of the country.

It gives exegetical articles that are of great value to the student.

It gives articles on prophecy, and all the news that bears on the fulfillment of the future part of God's word.

It contains articles that set forth the nature of mankind, and the Hope he has for any thing hereafter.

It sets forth the Gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Christ and his Apostles, and insists that this Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things that concern the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, are what constitute the power of God unto salvation to him that believeth it.

It goes further, and insists that a holy life consistent with the high profession made, is just as necessary as belief—i. e. that Faith is well, and Works are well, and necessary both of them. That Sincerity alone will never save of itself.

It advocates the restoration of literal Israel to their own land as the only consistent way of fulfilling the promises made to the fathers.

It contains articles that show the necessity for a resurrection of the dead as the only means of attaining the blessings promised the faithful.

It gives articles showing that the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus the Christ must be just as literal as his first coming or his going away was: and that the saints have no hope of reward until that event; thus making that the most important of all the important events that will occur.

This paper urges all these matters, and many others of like nature, including immersion as the only mode of baptism, and at a cost of but $1.50 per year, about three cents a week. It contains more reading matter than 14 books that usually sell for $1.00 each, and is the very best means you can have of keeping posted as to the workings of the Church and the world as relating to prophetic doings.

It is not sensational, and is not controversial in the sense that it wishes to discuss matters that are of secondary importance, when there is so much that is of prime importance to lay before our readers.

It holds that personal attacks by brethren upon others is out of place, and only tends to work harm in place of good, and urges always the settlement of differences by private means.

With these points here set forth we solicit you to give us your subscription for the coming year, and we assure you that you will be many times paid for the expense. Try it and be convinced of what we say.

If you have not seen a late copy we will gladly send you a sample free on request.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLIX. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 26, 1900. NUMBER 48.

Poetry.

Christmas Carol.

Angels sweep the golden strings—
"Lo! an infant stranger!
Would ye now behold your King?
Starlight shows the manger."

"Pritheo thee, who and whence is he,
Lying there so lowly?
Beauty in his face I see—Wonderful and holy!"

"He is God's eternal Son—
Full of grace and glory:
All things were in him begun—
All creation's story."

"Ah, then, wherefore came he thus—Human life beginning?"
"He 'The Way' revealed to us,
Free from death, and sinning."

"He, among the beasts would lie—
Touching hearts degraded—
Man, in Christ, ascends the sky,
Changed, yet not upbraided."

"He, from passion's dark disgrace,
Came to ope the portal;
Children of a fallen race,
Rise to Life Immortal!"

Letters Read at the Indiana Conference.

Dear ones assembled in Conference:

God be with you to bless every session of your meeting. O how hard we must all work, in love, in patience, with zeal and energy, for the time is short, the work much and discouragements many, so many strange unbidden, unlooked for things coming to us all the time to try us, but our Savior knew just how to help us meet the hard things by telling us to "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." O loved ones, watch, keep hold of hands, and above all take fast hold of God's hand and all will be well.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

As the days go by we are reminded that short is the time, but long the distance between the now and the annual meeting to be held at Plymouth.

We should love to be with you in person, but as we cannot we wish to be represented by letter, if we are not already too late in writing.

We shall be with you in spirit and shall see the familiar faces that have greeted us so often. We pray that the spirit of Christ may be with you, and that much good may be done in his name, that strength may be renewed in the hearts of his faithful, waiting children.

Notwithstanding the great distance that intervenes we wish to be remembered in your petitions, for the same God is over all, and we know that even in this far-off land he may be ever near.

It is difficult to realize some of the differences that exist between this part of the globe and where you are. While you have day we have night; you are putting on winter wraps while we are sweltering in the intense heat of a long southern summer, as you meet on Sunday afternoon for the breaking of bread, we are commencing our work on Monday morning. Are we Sabbath breakers?

As we traveled westward we crossed the anti-meridian and sailed from Sunday into Tuesday. Being in the Orient we are near the beginning of day.

I mention these things thinking they might be of interest to some present.

We are very agreeably situated here, as we are staying with a family who are looking for the soon coming King. They are of the Christadelphian brotherhood and are zealous workers living in all good conscience and faith. They have been very kind to us and we have enjoyed meeting with them in their Bible readings.

THE RESTITUTION comes to us semi-monthly and its presence cheers us more than any one can know who has not been from home and former associations. My work is such that I have little time for reading, writing or study, yet I have not and shall not abandon the faith.

When we feel lonely we go to the Book of Books and there we find friendships which strengthen us, and make us feel much nearer to those we have left at home.

Even in this land of pleasure and of sunshine, where the debasing influence of careless living is the ruin of thousands, where intemperance is a loathesome blight; even here we find a goodly number whose lives are sublime living examples of Christianity. It is encouraging to note the influence which a true knowledge of God has on the lives of men. Truly his children are "Epistles known and read of all men."

Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye are the light of the world." "A city set on a hill." The significance of his words never came to us with so much force as it did a few days ago while we were visiting the Light House at the entrance of the harbor. Here is a "City set on a hill." The inhabitants of the little city on the hill are servants of the Government whose duty it is to keep the light burning, and to rescue the perishing. A life saving crew!

As the keeper of the light house explained to us the powerful lens which reflects its rays of light for miles across the waves, we thought of the "Light that cannot be hid." Constant vigilance is required to keep the great lamp in order. Each day one of the many wicks must be replaced by a new one. Every moment of the night this life saving light must be watched that wind nor tide may not diminish its brightness, and the crew must ever be on the alert to rescue and save.

The conditions of the atmosphere or change in the temperature affect the force of the light and it must be turned up or down as required. If it should give an uncertain signal some poor tempest tossed barque might be wrecked on the rocks hidden beneath the waves. The words of the Master as recorded in Luke xii. 35 were suggested to us, "Let your loins be girded about and your light burning."

The life saving crew must be equipped and ever ready to man the boats, that their fellowmen may be saved from the dangers which surround them, and from which they must surely perish if the watchmen neglect their duty. The words of the Master in these beautiful figures are full of meaning. If we have been with Christ and have learned of him, then his light must be in us. It cannot be hid if we "walk in him."

The world is full of darkness, but his children are not in darkness. They are not of the night, but have "Turned from darkness to light and from Satan unto God." "God is light." We are commanded to "walk as children of light." If we obey this command, "Now are we lights in the Lord," then shall we keep the words of the Master and let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven.

How important it is at the present time, that God's children should give no uncertain signal to those whose lives are in peril from the bondage of darkness and sin!

The war cloud of the wrath of nations is upon us. The "Wicked are gathering the vintage of the wicked." The signs proclaim the coming King. The day shall soon dawn and the day star arise.

Then there shall be no night. There will be no need of a light house or lamp in the city of our God, for the glory of God shall lighten it. "The Lamb shall be the light thereof." "The nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it." "And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life.

Yours in love,
J. H. WILLEY.

As we stroll out to enjoy the awakening spring, we see the fig leaves unfolding on every hand and we know that summer is near. When this reaches you, you will be surrounding the crackling fire and enjoying the crisp November air, while we shall be in the midst of the glorious wild flower season. Each day the breezes grow more balmy, and the evergreen vegetation takes on a deeper tinge of color. We [illegible] boys coming from the bush with their burdens of magnificent flowers and ferns. It is difficult for us to think of you hastening to your [illegible] of ice and snow.

[illegible] take the memory long [illegible] back and to the meeting of [illegible], not is it difficult for the in[illegible] to [illegible] ten thousand [illegible] heartily with you to [illegible]. We shall be very near [illegible] though absent in body.

[illegible] that we need not go up to Je[illegible] to worship, for we can send up our petitions from this sunny land for the success of this meeting. We hope you will be abundantly blessed.

The march of tramping armies, the perplexity of nations, the fear of men for the things coming upon the earth, the zeal of superstition, the falling of many by the wayside remind us of the duties of the hour.

Never was there a more satisfying time for the Bible student. Prophecy is fulfilling before us daily. We are surprised at the accuracy of the details. No one can tell in advance how things will move in exact sequence of events, but we know what the outcome will show in his own good time.

I send you greeting in the closing words of the fifth Psalm, "But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice; let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them; let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee. For thou, Lord, wilt bless the righteous; with favor wilt thou compass him as with a shield."

MRS. J. H. WILLEY.

Genesis. Chap. 16.

1. Now Sara the wife of Habram did not bring forth for him; and she had an Aiguptian bond-maid, whose name was Agar.

2. And Sara said unto Habram, Lo the Lord hath shut me up from bringing forth; do thou go in unto my bond-maid: that I may produce children from her. And Habram hearkened unto the voice of Sara.

3. And Sara the wife of Habram took Agar her own Aiguptian bond-maid ten years after Habram had taken up his abode in a land of Chanaan, and gave her unto Habram her husband for his wife.

4. And he entered in unto Agar and she conceived, and knew that she had in womb, and her lady (the feminine of lord) was dishonored in her sight.

5. And Sara said unto Habram, I am being wronged by thee, I gave my bond-maid into thy bosom; and when she knew that she had in womb, I became dishonored in her sight. May God have judged between me and thee.

6. And Habram said unto Sara, Lo thy bond-maid is in thy hands; use her as may be pleasing to thee; and Sara treated her badly and she ran away from her face.

7. And an angel of the Lord found her at the fountain of the water in the wilderness, at the fountain on the highway to Sour.

8. And the angel of the Lord said, Agar, Sara's bond-maid, Whence dost thou come? and whither art thou going? And she said, From the face of Sara my lady am I running away.

9. And the angel of the Lord said unto her, Return unto thy lady and humble thyself under her hand.

10. And the angel of the Lord said unto her, I am going to multiply thy seed, and it will not have been numbered by reason of its multitude.

11. And the angel of the Lord said, Lo, thou hast in womb and thou wilt bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Ismael (Strong-Deire of mercy) because the Lord hath hearkened to thy humiliation.

12. He will be a man of the fields; his hands will be against all and the hands of all against him, and in the face of all his brethren will he dwell.

13. And he called the name of the Lord who talked with her, Thou art the God who looked upon me. For said she, I even saw the one who appeared to me before my eyes.

14. For this reason she called the well, his well whom I plainly saw; Lo, it is between Kadoes and Barad.

15. And Agar brought forth for Habram a son, and Habram called the name of his son that Agar had brought forth for him Ismael.

16. And Habram was eighty-six years old when Agar brought forth Ismael for Habram.

COMMENT.

Observe "Hagar" in the R. V. is "Agar" in the text, "Agara" in Josephus and is the root of "agarros" agar—meaning "Strong-flowing." "Sarai" R. V. is "Sara" in the text and means "Smiling Beauty." Would say again that I give these names as they are in the text "Aiguptos" (Egypt) for instance so that scholars can see how they have been changed for various reasons. A "hand-maid" R. V. was "a bond-maid" and owned by the "master" or "mistress" "lord" or "lady." There is another word for master and mistress indicating a different relation between the servant and the master or mistress in these times, that relation being expressed by "wages." If the lord married his bond-maid such a wife was accounted a "concubine" and such a marriage a semi-marriage, and such children were accounted the children of the real wife with certain privileges and legal rights. See Paul's argument in Galatians in this particular case.

In the 7th verse R. V. "Shur" is "Sour" in the text. This word probably the original form of the stem "Sur" appearing in the ancient name of the country bordering on and east of the Mediterranean Sea including Babylonia and Assyria. "Suria" or "Souria" means "the land of the Pipe or Whistle." Assuria adjoining Suria.

In the 9th verse "humble thyself" instead of "submit thyself" R. V. In the 11th verse "humiliation" again instead of "affliction" R. V.

In the 12th verse "a man of the fields" instead of "a wild ass" R. V. I don't think it would be much of a blessing to be assured that my posterity would be "a wild ass," or "as a wild ass among men." Compare the R. V. 13th verse with this translation and note the difference. For the thought is not the same at all. The emphasis is on her seeing the God who looked upon her humiliation and that too right before her eyes. There is nothing said about "looking after him." Why didn't they translate the name of the well in the 14th verse in the R. V.? Does "Beer-sahai-roi" mean, "His well whom I plainly saw?" "Kadish" should be "Kadees" and "Bered" should be "Barad."

New Testament Lessons.

"If thou, thou wishest to enter into life, keep the commandments."

These words were spoken by Jesus to the young ruler, who having come running to him, asked him "what good deed he must do to inherit eternal life?" The question was not one relating simply to rulership in the kingdom of God; it had reference to an eternity of existence, for they who are found worthy to attain to that world and the resurrection of the dead, die no more; death hath no more dominion over them;" they are not only to reign with Christ for a thousand years," but for "the ages of the ages."

But there are those who do not wish to enter into life. They care more for the pleasures of the present, than for an enduring existence. The price to be paid is too great; they cannot, will not keep the commandments. The total renunciation of self; the giving up of all earthly possessions; the taking up of the cross is too much; they go away greatly depressed, letting the life and the crown slip from their grasp forever.

"How difficult it is (for those putting confidence upon their possessions) to enter into the kingdom of God!" The riches cannot be given up though the future life be lost; they over-balance the eternal weight of glory. Then it is true, that there are those who will not "enter into life?" Jesus so teaches. He says that "he who would save his life shall lose it, and that he who loses his life shall keep it unto life eternal."

The language is explicit, unquestionable. The question is not whether or no there will be a scheme of salvation presented to the nations (who will be spared to enter the millennial age) for their acceptance or rejection, but whether any who have lived in the ages of the past and who are living at the present time will lose that everlasting existence that has been promised from the beginning to those who have obeyed God? Jesus says that some will lose it. The Apostle says that there are those whose "end is destruction." Paul affirms that "the wages of sin is death."

If none are "worthy of death" as Paul says, how can we preach; how can we write; how can we warn men to flee from the wrath to come? What effect will our preaching have? It will fall upon heedless ears, and stolid indifferent hearts!

The love of God will not spare the incorrigible sinner to curse the world to come, no more than the love of man spares the bloody murderer, and the traitor who sells his country for a paltry bit of gold.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

A Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year, to you all. I want to be counted among you in your annual gathering, for the renewing of the assurances of love and faith and hope toward God, and of earnest love to one another, though I cannot meet with any of you around the sacred board, in memory of him, the source of all our hope, our great Christmas Gift, from him, who saw and stooped to our great need. Never, it seems to me, did the near future, appear so freighted with things of deep interest to us, who are watching for the morning, and never more need of our drawing closer together in true love and helpfulness, and watchfulness, in view of our soon gathering together unto him. There are things working that few I think, even of the watchers, dream of. God is not slack. It is the world who is sleeping to her doom, and meantime he is preparing and gathering the zealous, eager ones for things wonderful beyond their highest dreams. May he have patience still with us all according to our deserving but in mercy to us for Jesus' dear sake, our righteousness. The words of the loving John in the last seven verses of his first epistle seem good to me now. Will you please read them again and pray that we may see and obey. With faithful love to every creature, created in the poor human image of God, and especially to the faithful in Christ, everywhere. I am still your sister, though unworthy.

In the hope of the gospel.

ALICE ADAMS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Again I wish to enter for a little talk. We ought, many of us to write and write oftener and build up and encourage each other all we can. We can't be too busy in this line, for we believe that the time is short in which to work and we know life is uncertain and short, even at the best. O! that we would each one do his or her work faithfully, so that we will gain that glorious reward that is worth so much time, patience and self-denial on our part. Let us meet more often in our social meetings and with prayer, exhortation and song, help and cheer each other along the pathway which sometimes seems dark to us. We know it does to one dear sister who was called upon to give up her dear husband only a few days ago. Brother Franklin Maroney who was just in the prime of life, a few months past his 27th year, stricken down with typhoid fever. He has been a member of our band since he was 21, having been immersed by our dear Bro. Wagoner. He leaves a wife and four small children. Such sorrow must come so long as the Nobleman comes not! O that Gentile times were full, and that he would come, and as A. J. Davis writes in the Dec. 5th number of our dear paper, which lies before me, "Then the murmuring waves, the troubled world, the dashing floods and the peaceful hills will unite their voices in joyful and everlasting songs and praise to him." Then there will be no sorrow, nothing to cause it. Is it not worth striving for? Surely it is. Then let us prove faithful so that our record shall not be found wanting; and may we all meet in God's everlasting kingdom, is the prayer of your Sister,

AZUBAH M. SCHOOLS.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"THERE is pleasure in contemplating good; there is a greater pleasure in receiving good; but the greatest pleasure is doing good,—which comprehends the rest."

AN old captain once said he had been many times round the world comfortably by the help of the following verse:—

"I'll not willinly offend,
Nor be easily offended:
What's amiss I'll try to mend
And endure what can't be mended."

THE Dutch uprising in Cape Colony to aid the Boer raiders is being put down by Lord Kitchener, but there is much territory to cover. Various reports come, but England will not stop now till order is restored.

"HOPE is often better than enjoyment. It is often the cause as well as effect of youth. It is certainly a very pleasant and healthy feeling. A hopeless person is deserted by himself, and he who forsakes himself, and he who forsakes himself is soon forsaken by all. Never let hope lose its hold."

THE note of the powers to China has been delivered and will reach the Emperor this week. Some writers think it will be impossible for China to comply with its terms, as she now owes to European banks the entire indemnity she paid Japan for her war, and all her available property is under heavy mortgage. This will render it all but impossible to pay an indemnity now, the items of which will foot up some $250,000,000. China seems doomed.

BEFORE another issue of our paper we will have passed out of 1900 and started on the new year. The record of the old year will be completed and closed up. If you have any good deed to do or kind word to say ere it is gone, hurry, for its hours are now numbered. To resolve is well—to do faithfully each duty that confronts us is better. To do and say the right and eschew the wrong, will surely be rewarded. Then let us take heed and press ever on, doing—saying—only what will please the Father, who sees and knows our every act, and judges rightly.

"The Trial of our Faith."

The first Epistle of Peter is to us a most precious portion of the Spirit's Word. It is pack full of precious, uplifting, comforting truths. Our attention was drawn to the subject of faith-testing; and we were charmed with the Apostle's happy introduction to it in the first chapter. After the address and greetings, the buoyancy of his hope make him run over, thus: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy, hath unto a living hope through the resurrection from the dead." He then proceeds to tell us to what hope they had been begotten, viz., "To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and unfading, preserved in the heavens for you. This is taken as proof by the religious world generally, that heaven is their home. We having gotten a long way beyond that notion, we should have a ready answer for all who make such claim. The word inheritance here does not refer to the landed inheritance covenanted to the fathers of the Hebrew nation, but what Paul speaks of as a house not made with hands, that he and his brethren expected to be clothed upon with. The idea is conveyed in other words in Col. iii. 3, where it says,—"Our life is hid with Christ in God, and when he who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. All deeds to real estate have to be recorded at the court house; they are preserved and recorded there. And as Christ is our life he holds eternal life in trust for every overcomer. It is reserved (in him,) in heaven for you, who are kept by

BEGOTTEN US AGAIN

A BUILDING OF GOD,—

THE POWER OF GOD

through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time, wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now, for a season if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations." Then follows the purpose of these temptations, viz., "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and at the appearing of Jesus Christ. The Diaglott reads: "The proof of your faith;" that is the test,—the verification by trial, that is. In the Old Testament the proof or trial of faith is frequently compared to the trial of gold by the process of smelting, or refining by fire. In Job xxiii. 8-10 we find the patriarch saying,—and a precious passage it is,—showing the utmost his father. He was in deep affliction, and had been crying out, O that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat.....Will he plead against me with his great power? No; but he would put strength in me;" that is, to enable him to bear what he might not see fit to remove. Yes, would put strength in him. Would to God, that with all our superior advantages and privileges we could ever say in the dark and trying hour,—

HONOR AND GLORY

CONFIDENCE IN GOD

HE WILL PUT STRENGTH IN ME

In the next two verses he is somewhat and because it seems as if God had hidden himself from him, so that he could not see him; but he immediately recovers himself and utters the precious words already referred to, and which we wish to make our readers familiar with if they are not so already. "But he knoweth the way I take; when he hath tried me I shall COME FORTH AS GOLD.

What child-like trust, what a heavenly, submissive spirit! In Psa. lxvi. 10 the Psalmist says, "For thou O God has proved us; thou hast tried us as silver is tried; thou broughtest us into the net; thou laidest affliction upon our loins,—thou hast caused men to ride over our heads; we went through fire and through water; but thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place." In Mal. iii. 2, we read, "But who may abide

THE DAY OF HIS COMING?

And who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap. And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver. We have read that these refiners sit and watch the molten metal till the refiner sees himself reflected in it. And might it not be that the Lord employs this figuratively to show us that his chastening is with the view of bringing out

HIS MORAL LIKENESS

In us? So we believe. Gold is the most precious metal, but faith in God's promises is far more precious than gold. As gold is tried, proved and refined by fire, so faith is refined by temptations. As the heat of fire separates dross from gold, so all alloy must be separated from faith. It is well to remember that the Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering,—well to remember that we enlisted to suffer with him, and to fill up what of his sufferings still remain; we must

FELLOWSHIP HIS SUFFERINGS.

The cross comes before the crown. We must expect to find anxiety and sorrow. We have been notified that in the world we shall have tribulation, but in the Anointed we have peace. It is well to remember that the great Physician knows, after thorough diagnosis, just what medicine we need. Let us resolve, and carry out the resolution not to prescribe for ourselves and take our own medicine. If we do it

WILL NEUTRALIZE HIS.

Let us feel safe in his hands, and say with Job:—"He knoweth the way I take,"—follow directions,—and in perfect confidence of a successful issue, says,—"When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold."

Let us then heed the admonition to gird up the loins of our mind, and being vigilant, hope perfectly for the gift to be brought to us at the revelation of Jesus Christ. Amen.

D. P. Asks if "Character Can Die."

"Can character die?" If not wherein lies the difference between the continued existence, in death, of a man's character and that of the underlying soul or life?

This question would never have been asked if a careful definition of terms had been observed. What is character? What is death? These questions answered, and the difficulty vanishes. Character is not an entity, but the sum of those peculiar mental and moral features which distinguishes one person from another. As well might we ask if a musician's style can die? as can a man's character die? Style and character belong to the same class of facts. Certainly a man's character dies when he dies, for he presents us with those marked features no more; only he it said the memory and living influence of the character may abide. And it is this pseudo-immortality connected with some great men's characters that gives plausibility to the question.

Death is the cessation of vital function. When life ceases, character,—which is nothing but living idiosyncrasy, vanishes.

"There is no other thing expressed
But long disquiet merged in rest."

"The Closing Year"

"It was decreed that the [illegible] ven should be for times [illegible] sons, for days and for [illegible] der the law of Moses [illegible] odic observances in the [illegible] sts and feasts, sabbaths and [illegible] all of which also served to mark [illegible] flight of time. The anniversaries and other periodic marks in our life thus naturally become times for retrospection,—times when we think of

WHAT WE HAVE DONE,

and what we have failed to do, and what we purpose doing in whatever opportunity may lie ahead of us. We look at ourselves to see what has been the sum of our experience and what it has accomplished for us, and also compare it with what it might have been. Such a review will be profitable if it teach us not merely to make purposes for the future, but to endeavor forthwith from the moment, more to redeem the fleeting moments than heretofore, more to apply ourselves to that work for Christ which lies nearest to our hand. The poet says:—

"'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours,
And ask them what report they bore to heaven."

To be profitable the retrospect must be fruitful in steadfast resolves. It is the object of the truth to work in us "to will and to do" that which is well pleasing in the sight of God." It may be well for all to look back to see the ground we have traversed, and then press forward for the prize of our high calling. The past year has witnessed the entrance of some into the way of life. It would be well for such to and find out exactly how matters stand with them; whether their confidence is what it was when first made free,—or whether the warmth of affection for God and Christ and truth and righteousness is what it was at the time of enlistment. Are they steadily gaining the mastery over the will of the flesh, so that temptations do not move them, nor trials daunt them. If not they should at once

POST THEIR ACCOUNTS

HEED THE SPIRIT'S INJUNCTION

to revive the things that remain, and then fix their eyes upon the mark of the prize. How fares it with those who have professed themselves defenders of the faith for several years? Is their motto still, onward, upward in the divine life? Are they growing in God's favor by obedience to the COMMANDMENTS OF JESUS?

By this time they will have had many a rude shock; and many a trying incident to test their confidence; but, if after so long a time they can say the Lord is our helper, and habitually lean upon him, the voice from above, "He that endureth unto the end will ever sustain them. [illegible] has been making sad havoc [illegible] our older brethren of late, [illegible] remain a few whose names [illegible] as household words among us [illegible] many years. The memory of the [illegible] faithfulness of God will inspire them with confidence through the rest of life's journey. Yes; his mercy, his long-suffering, his bounty and his unspeakable goodness during the year just closing will call forth fervent thanksgiving and songs of praise, as well as supplications for help for the time to come, and for the coming of his kingdom and glory.

SHALL BE SAVED,"

"Trust in the Lord."

David in Psa. cxxv. 1, says, "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever." As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever." He had good reason for speaking in this way. He had often trusted him, and never having found his promise once to fail, he is assured of his faithfulness in the future. He had been in many straits,—and bowed down with many cares, perplexed with many difficulties, surrounded with many dangers, but he was always delivered. After having been brought through so many troubles he could not doubt God's faithfulness in the future. This enabled him to say (Psa. lvi. 3, 4) "What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee; in God I will praise his Word; in God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me."

In view of the experience of this inspired witness to God's faithfulness, in addition to our own experiences, we ought to be able to unite with him in saying as he does in Psa. xxxiv. 7, 8 with the fullest assurance, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." And then take up his invitation to others, "O taste and see that the Lord is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him. O fear the Lord, ye his saints; for there is no want to them that fear him.....Come, ye children, hearken unto me; I will teach you the fear of the Lord."

We have another illustrious example of perfect trust in God, in the Apostle Paul. Listen to him in 2 Cor. i. 8-10:—"For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our troubles in Asia, that were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life; but we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raised the dead; who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver;" [and this is not all] "in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us,—ye also helping together by prayer for us."

It is beautiful to note from the 7th verse that there is a community or fellowship of consolation, as well as of suffering. He says, "And our hope of you is steadfast, knowing, that as ye are partakers of the sufferings [quoted above] "so shall ye be also, of the consolation." Hence he sends them word of their divine deliverance from the jaws of death, so that they might share the consolation and joy for the same. In these perilous times when the very foundations of society seem to be undermined by every species of villiany we need to follow closely the examples of the holy ones whose records have been graciously sent to us by God. Listen to the inspiring words of Paul in 1 Tim. iv. 10, "We both labor and suffer reproach;" then follows the reason, "Because we trust in the living God," etc. In 2 Tim. i. 12 he says, "For I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." In 1 Tim. vi. 17 we are told not to trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."

Thus saith Jehovah, "Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he UNDERSTANDETH AND KNOWETH ME, that I am the Jehovah which exercises loving kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth; for in these things I delight, saith Jehovah." Jer. ix. 23, 24.

In Isaiah xxvi. 4 we are told to "Trust in the Lord forever; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." To trust in the Lord is to expect him to do just as he promised. If we do that after complying with the conditions, we will always be able to say, whatever may happen,—none of these things move me." Let us not forget that if we deal with the Lord we must DO IT ON CREDIT. In storms and calms, in adversity and prosperity, in reproach and in honor, in sickness and health, in life and as we approach death, we must depend upon his wisdom for direction, on his power for protection, on his favor for salvation,—not only when his providence seems to smile, but always.

Infinite are the blessings and precious the promises that abound in the Word for those who trust in the Lord. They are a firm foundation to build upon; let us build thereon and we shall never be moved.

Our closing word to the household may be found in Nahum i. 7. "The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble, and HE KNOWETH THEM THAT TRUST IN HIM."

Troubles frequently meet us in the path of duty; they are designed to try our constancy, courage and sincerity; think not, I am going wrong, because tried; but wait on the Lord, and he will save thee.

The only possible victory for the church is by pushing up close to Christ.—M. E. Kauffman.

The War God.

The military spirit and the worship of soldiers seem to have come to a climax. We had hoped that America was an exception, when our people of both sexes offered the incense of their adoration to the man who returned from the war with Spain. But what has just happened in England and Canada upon the return of the soldiers from South Africa, shows that the Anglo-Saxon race is war mad. There is no dispute about, and not even any modification of the descriptions cabled across the Atlantic, of the wild and drunken orgies in the city of London, when the returning volunteers marched through its streets. Men and women lost their heads, and acted like a lot of intoxicated lunatics. And this is the fruit of our much vaunted civilization! It has come to this, that the return of the missionaries making conquests for Christ—harming no one—killing no one—and blessing every one—but exposing life and limb to dangers not much less than those encountered by the soldiers, is not only marked by a tame welcome from a few faithful believers, while a whole nation turns out and goes mad with joy over the agents of conquest, war and death! Not many years ago the Hon. Chas. Sumner thrilled the Senate of the United States with one of his brilliant orations against war, and every prominent man in Church and State applauded his Christian utterances. Hon. John Bright did the same in the British House of Commons. But it is very doubtful if these men would not be hissed into silence if they were present to make the same plea to-day! Anything that promises military glory, commercial greatness, or openings for trade will carry the enthusiastic assent of the Anglo-Saxon race —Watchword and Truth.

How Russia Grabs Land.

In the Christmas number of The Saturday Evening Post, Frank G. Carpenter, who has recently spent the better part of a year in the East, gives many facts of Russia's advance in Asia, and relates the following incident:

"The Powers have practically agreed that Manchuria is to be the property of Russia, and within a short time, in all probability, all the Chinese territory beyond the Great Wall will belong to the Czar. The boundary line between Siberia and Mongolia is being slowly pushed southward.

"During a visit to Peking some years ago I heard a tradition as to how Russia once acquired a big slice of China. There was a dispute about the boundary line, which the Russians had moved out so as to include a large amount of Manchurian and Mongolian soil. A war was imminent, and the Chinese as usual, wanted to settle matters by compromise. The Russians consented, and brought forth a map showing the territory they demanded. The Chinese threw up their hands in horror and said their lives would be endangered if they presented such a treaty to their Emperor. 'All right,' said the Russians: 'If that is so, we will take less;' and they thereupon showed a second map, one-tenth the size of the first, but in which the latitude and longitude of the territory taken were exactly the same. The Chinese looked. The space within the red lines on the map was very much smaller, and they recommended the treaty without further dispute.

"Few people realize the enormous extent of Asiatic Russia. It is about one and two-thirds the size of Europe, and twice as big as the United States without Alaska and our outlying islands. It comprises, in fact, more than one-third of all Asia, Siberia alone being half as big as our country. To this vast territory is now to be added Manchuria, with a possibility that Mongolia and Ili will soon come the same way. Mongolia is fully half and Ili about one-third the size of the United States, while Manchuria is equal to ten States as big as Ohio.

"The title to Manchuria is now practically conceded to Russia."

Mr. Zangwill, speaking at the recent Zionist Congress, said: "It has been shown again and again that in all countries of the world the Jews live either in suffering or on sufferance. They are like the little birds which the crocodile permits to enter its mouth to pick its teeth. But one day the crocodile, either by accident or design, brings down its jaws at the wrong moment."

THE RESTITUTION.

THE Christian Advocate commenting on the present situation says:

"The nineteenth century goes out in war all around the world.

'The Hague Conference led some to sing 'Hosanna!' and to cry, 'The age of peace dawns!' We sat among the doubters: for human nature unregenerated is the same all over the world.

The Christians are still cutting one another's throats in South Africa.

The Christians are not done cutting one another's throats in the Philippine Islands.

The Christians and the pagans are but pausing for breath in China.

Clouds are rising over various parts of Northern Africa, and the shadow of revolution is upon a score of nations in South and Central America and on the Continent of Europe.

An epidemic of lynching pervades this country. Prize fighting is a great popular amusement. New York loves it, and also can breed a race riot.

Society at Newport defies conventionalities, social and religious. One of the worst phases of the situation is the development of shamelessness. "First families" rush into the courts with their matrimonial troubles, and appear not able to blush when scenes which would disgrace those born in and to vulgarity are portrayed by the sensational papers.

Those premillenarians who think that the world must get worse before Christ can come are solemnly pointing to these things as portents.

At the Zionist Congress it was reported that there are now in Russia 1,034 Zionist societies with 100,000 members; in England 38, with growing membership; in Canada, in almost every town where there was a Hebrew congregation there was also a Zionist society; in the United States, 135 societies, with a membership of 10,000, in 30 different cities; in South America they are strong enough to sustain a Zionist journal in Jargon; in France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Switzerland, the societies had increased; in Austria the wealthier classes had opposed the movement, yet, specially in the country districts, the cause was advancing; in Roumania, the societies had been weakened through the exodus of Jews; and there are 42 societies in Bulgaria, so that a vast majority of the Jews are Zionists.

Speaking of the China situation, the Spectator, of London, says: "The Chinese will win. The quarrel was brought to the test of force; the force on the civilized side has proved insufficient." It maintains that this result is "chiefly due to the attitude of Russia and the United States, and regards it as not unlikely that China will escape with the payment of a small indemnity and many promises on paper. Shanghai correspondents are becoming active again. One of them says that in a Chinese theatre in that place the allies are represented by a soldier with an enormous mouth, who does nothing but talk, until his career is ended by his head being cut off."

Wilmot, the infidel, when dying, laid his trembling, emaciated hand upon the sacred volume, and exclaimed solemnly, and with unwonted energy, "The only objection against this book is a bad life!"

Poetry.

A New Year's Song.

FORGET AND FORGIVE.

Forget! for why remember
The wrongs of yesterday?
Perchance, kind words were spoken
To heal the breach today;
Then let the past forever be
A blank leaf in thy memory.

Forget the Old Year's failings.
The New will have its share;
Each one will find that hoply
He hath enough to bear
Without the memory of the wrong
That to the Old Year doth belong.

"Let bygones be bygones"—for why Should thoughts that 'gender strife
Be nourished in the bosom—
That but embitter life
And fill this world, that else were fair,
With scenes of sorrow, strife and care?

Forgive! for why should we withhold
The blessing that we need,
Or let an erring brother
In vain for mercy plead?
Oh! cold must be the heart, and rare,
That could reject the suppliant prayer.

Forgive! for Time's swift pinions
Are bearing us along,
And few may be our moments
To do or suffer wrong.
Then let us, while the power is given,
Forgive, as we would be forgiven.

Reward.

No work of life for God is lost:
The seed may be on ocean tossed,
But sometime, on a farther shore,
What it has borne is ours once more.

The rain revives the fainting flower,
So words of truth have mystic power,
And earnest words of ours may bear
Some fruit beyond of answered prayer.

God's Promises—Are They Fulfilled?

Who did God first make a promise to? Adam. Gen. ii. 17. "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Margin, dying thou shalt die. Did Adam eat of the forbidden fruit? He did. Gen. iii. 6-12, "The woman whom thou gavest to be with me she gave me of the tree and I did eat." Did Adam die? Yes. Gen. v. 5, "And all the days that Adam lived were 930 years and he died." Then that promise was fulfilled.

Who was the next promise made to? Noah. Gen. vi. 13, "And God said unto Noah the end of all flesh is come before me, for the earth is filled with violence through them; and behold I will destroy them with the earth." Verses 14 to 16 describes an ark that Noah made after God's plan for the saving of his family and the animals that God commanded him to take with him, and 17th verse says, "I do bring a flood of waters upon the earth to destroy all flesh wherein is the breath of life from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth shall die." Did God fulfill this promise? Yes. Gen. vii. 21-23, "And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land died. And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of heaven, and they were destroyed from the earth, and Noah only remained alive and they that were with him in the ark." So this promise has been fulfilled.

Who was the next great promise made to? Abram. Gen. xii. 1-3, "Now the Lord said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee; and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. So Abram departed and when he came into the land of Canaan, the Lord appeared unto him again and said, ver. 7, "Unto thy seed will I give this land." Gen. xiii. 14, "And the Lord said unto Abram. Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward. For all this land which thou seest to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." Notice the two very important promises given to Abram. Possession of certain territory described and being here on this earth, and to be occupied by him and his seed forever and ever, when they come into possession again.

Again in Gen. xv. 5, God said, "Look now toward heaven and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them, so shall thy seed be." Had Abram any heir at this time? No. Did he believe God's promise? Yes. Gen. xv. 6, and he believed in the Lord and he counted it to him for righteousness. and in 18th verse. In that same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river Euphrates." What happened to Abram at the age of 99 years? The Lord changed his name. Gen. xvii. 5, "Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram but thy name shall be Abraham, for a father of many nations have I made thee, and I will make thee exceeding fruitful and I will make nations of thee and kings shall come out of thee and I will establish my covenant between me and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee and I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. And Abraham's wife's name was changed at that time and a promise made to her, that she should be a mother of nations. and she then 90 years old. In the 21st verse we read, "But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year." Gen. xviii. 17. 18, "And the Lord said, shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do." Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation and all nations of the earth shall be blessed in him. After Isaac was born being the only heir, God tempted Abraham, to try his faith and he was faithful, so he again renewed his promise. "By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying, I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore, and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xxv. 5, 7, "And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac, and these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, a hundred three score and fifteen years. Then Abraham gave up the ghost and died in a good old age." Did he receive the land promised? No. What was done with it? The same promise was given to Isaac. Gen. xxvi., 3, 4, "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and I will bless thee, for unto thee, and unto thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and I will give unto thy seed all these countries, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. And Isaac called Jacob and blessed him, and said God Almighty bless thee and make thee fruitful and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people; and give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee and to thy seed with thee, that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham" Gen. xxviii. 3, 4. In 13th verse we read this declaration in a vision to Jacob. I am the Lord God of Abraham, thy fathers and the God of Isaac; the land whereon thou liest to thee will I give it and to thy seed." 14th verse. "And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. As God changed Abram's name, so he changed Jacob's name, in giving him the promise. Gen. xxxv. 10-12, "Thy name shall not be called any more Jacob but Israel shall be thy name. And God said unto him I am God Almighty; be fruitful and multiply. A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins, and the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land." Gen. xlviii. 3, 4, "And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan and blessed me and said unto me, "Behold I will make thee fruitful and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession. As Jacob was just prior to his death blessing his twelve sons; he gave this blessing to Judah. Gen. xlix. 10, "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah nor a law-giver from between his feet until Shiloh come and unto him shall the gathering of the people be." Who is Shiloh? Shiloh must have reference to some leader that the people will gather to. The Septuagint translates it, "Until the coming of him to whom it is reserved; or till we see arrive that which is reserved for him. Another translation is: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, till he comes to whom it belongs." As all prophecy points to Christ as such leader or ruler, then we conclude that Shiloh is Christ. And John so thought when Christ was here teaching. Matt. xi. 3, "Art thou he that should come, or we look for another?" The prophets had said the Messiah was to be born of a virgin, of the tribe of Judah, of the race of David, in the village of Bethlehem; that he was to continue forever. And in Christ we see the fulfilment of this prophecy. For we find Christ asking the Pharisees, "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he? They say the son of David." Again asks his disciples, "Whom do men say that I am?" Simon Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." He admitted that he be true. Then as Christ is Shiloh the Messiah, we find him also the Savior of the world. John iv. 72: 1 John iv. 14. How can Christ be the Savior of the world, when the promise was made to Abraham and his Seed? Because he saith not, and to seeds, as of many, but as of one; and to thy seed, which is Christ. And if ye be Christ's then are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise.

This inheritance is not of the law, but of promise, and is given to them that believe and obey. So then any one can become heirs of Abraham, and the promises made to him by believing and obeying. But if Christ is the seed, and those that come to Christ, receive the same blessings promised to Abraham, of an everlasting inheritance, here on this earth. When are they to receive it? The angel told Mary, thou shalt bring forth a son and shalt call his name Jesus, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

In Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, we find the kingdoms of this world are to be consumed by a kingdom that the God of heaven will set up, and his kingdom shall stand forever. John heard the seventh angel sound, and there were great voices in heaven saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever.

Paul explains in 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17, how this is accomplished. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

John saw Satan bound for a thousand years, and those that had not worshipped the beast, neither his image; they lived and reigned with him a thousand years. All those that so reign are blessed and holy, and have part in the first resurrection, to such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. Rev. xx. 4, 6. Where do they reign? On this earth. During this time Satan is bound so as not to deceive the nations. Then he is loosed for a little season, and he goes out to deceive the nations that are in the four quarters of the earth, to gather them together; and they encompass the camp of the saints about, and fire comes down from God out of heaven and devours them.

Then the last judgment takes place, and the nations of earth are all under one ruler, Christ, and this kingdom will stand forever. This will fulfill God's promise to Abraham.

Conclusion. God's promise to Abraham will be fulfilled when Christ comes to earth and raises those that are heirs to Abraham through faith, and with Christ establish a kingdom, that will consume all present kingdoms, become one universal kingdom over all the earth.

Then will Abraham and his seed occupy the land promised, and all nations will be blessed by a Righteous King and holy associate rulers.

Yours, hoping to become one of the associate rulers in God's kingdom on earth.

"Pay What Thou Owest."

What is the reason men and women who are strictly honest in their dealings with mankind generally, prompt to pay their store bill, doctor's bill, all notes and mortgages on time, always have ready money for half a dozen weekly papers, and at least one daily, never have money or inclination to pay for a good religious paper which teaches just what they profess to believe, and they could hardly live without, and this is just as honest a debt as any of the above named. Do they think because a man is so unfortunate as to be a Christian Editor of a religious paper, he can live and pay his debts on wind or broken promises? Remember God knows how carefully you are to pay all worldly debts, and how careless you are about his money. Do not expect him to say of you, "Well done, good and faithful servants" when you have been so unfaithful to his cause and his stewards who are sacrificing even their homes where so many owe just $1.50, or $2.00 or $5.00 as the debt may be? Make it right to yourselves, personally, and tell God what you would think of a man, if you went to him kindly and asked him for $1.50, or $2.50 which he had owed you a year, telling him you had $1.000 to raise within six weeks or lose your home, and it was all loaned out to men in just such amounts, and he would quietly turn away without making any answer, or say to you—I am sorry I cannot pay it to-day, but, really I have not the money now, will hand it to you soon. And then you should watch him go into a store and buy a new suit of clothes, several toys for the children, go across the road and pay for some weekly newspaper, call at the grocery and buy .05 cts worth of candy, .10 cts worth of peanuts, .25 cts worth of oranges? What would you go home and tell your wife? I think I can hear you say as you sit down discouraged—Wife, Mr. G. is as mean and dishonest a man as I ever saw. He spent enough in nonsense today to pay me twice over, and he told me he did not have the money to pay me. I am afraid our home must go, for my accounts are so small no one seems to think they amount to anything. Dear brother, that is just what you are doing when you keep back your Lord's money. You have signed for and had the use of The Restitution all this time, and never paid one cent for years. Some day you and all of us will fail to get our dear paper, and why? It has had to stop because there are so many small debts, unpaid. When asked to give account of your stewardship what will you have to answer? Neglect of duty Lord. Carelessness, indifference, foolish extravagances. Answer. "I know you not." O dear ones, do not be offended and say. "I'll pay for the paper up to date and tell them to stop it." No, no, that is satan telling you to do that, it is just what he wants you to do, he knows that will be one long step towards your eternal loss and ruin, he has been working for that all along, do not let him triumph, but say, I cannot get along without our paper. I'll pay for it, and get others to take it, and God will bless them and me. May God help us to do what is right in this and all other matters. for we must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

Report of Labor.

I was called by telephone on Dec. 5. to come to Michigantown, Ind., to attend the funeral of Brother Franklin Maroney, who had just died, a report of which is given by Sister Azorah M. Scroggs in this paper. Brother Maroney often expressed a wish to live, and not taste death, but be among that number that would be changed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, but death claimed him for its victim. He is now sleeping quietly in the cold and silent tomb waiting for the trumpet sounding which will bring him back again. I went from here to Warren County to fill Brother Zilmer's appointment as he was engaged in a meeting in Plymouth. From here I went to Hamilton County, Ind., and begun meetings on the evening of the 10th and closed on the 21st. As a result two came forward for baptism. I have promised to return to that County and hold a meeting at another point, in the near future, and I ask an interest in your prayers. This is a new field and I have asked our Evangelist to be with me.

Yours in hope.
G. W. Smith.

He has much to do who would please everybody.

Dear brethren and sisters:

John says, "Let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth," iii. 18, and he also said if we see our brethren have need, and shut our bowels of compassion from them, how dwelleth the love of God in us? Now I have been a regular subscriber of The Restitution since the year 1876, and I enjoy reading it now more than I ever did, for the truths taught in its columns are shining still brighter and brighter, and I for one feel like trying to hold up the hands of our good, self sacrificing brethren, who are trying so hard to send our weekly messenger, which comes always laden with heavenly manna for the children of God.

It is hurtin' to me to see so many of our brethren getting in arrears. Oh, if we could all spare enough to pay up at the close of the present year, and then begin with a clear white sheet, and never allow it to be blotted again. How nice this would be. It has a sad effect to see so many calls for that which we know we ought to be willing and ready to do for the love of the truth. My subscription is not due until March, but seeing the many calls and so few responding, I will send it in advance, hoping others will do likewise; for we cannot afford to do without our paper, for through its columns the household of faith can hear from each other and be built up in the most holy faith, and thus go on their way rejoicing. It nearly always brings some good news, of some one or more, yielding obedience to the truth. Since the close of our good meeting, while Brother Wagoner was with us, we received a letter from a lady in Cumberland, Md., saying she was coming to visit us, and wished to obey the gospel while she was here. We then wrote for Brother John Boyer, who lives some 25 miles from here, to come over and help us. He came and we had a good meeting and one more added to the little flock. She is a daughter of Brother A. H. Shiuholtz of Cumberland, Md. He is alone in the faith in that city, but stands firm amidst all opposition. His daughter surely has set a good example for other young people. May she ever adorn the profession she has made, and thus become an heir to the kingdom. We very much regret to learn that our esteemed Brother B. F. Boyer is still very ill, but we hope he will yet be restored to health.

Wishing you all a happy Christmas, I remain your Sister, as ever.

Obituary.

The death of Jacob Lemon, one of the oldest and most respected pioneers of Kalamazoo County, Mich., occurred at his home near Indian Lake, in Brady township, Wednesday morning. His age was 85 years.

Mr. Lemon was born in Orange Co., New York, April 8, 1815, and was a member of a family of 11 children. He was reared on a farm and received his education in the district schools on the rate bill system. When 16 years of age he removed to Chemung Co., and about that time he was thrown on his own resources by the death of his father by drowning. In 1835 he made the journey to the Wolverine state by boat and on foot, reaching Jackson Co., with but one cent as his financial capital. He obtained work as a farm hand and later purchased 40 acres near Grass Lake. Later for several months he drove stage on the Detroit and Chicago stage line. In 1837 he went to Illinois to buy grain and horses for a Chicago stage line.

In 1840 Mr. Lemon came to Kalamazoo County, but after a short stay he went to Iowa and Missouri and engaged for a time in the stage business and later went to New Orleans, returning to Kalamazoo Co., in 1844, when he pre-empted 80 acres of land from the Pottawatomie Indian reservation in Brady. He was surrounded by wild beasts, Indians, and a wilderness, but he soon carved out a comfortable home and at the time of his death he was the owner of an estate of several hundred acres in the vicinity of beautiful Indian Lake. He has served his town several years as supervisor.

The deceased was twice married, first to Miss Amy Spicer, Jan. 1, 1838, to whom were born four children. She died Feb. 6, 1843, and he was married October 17, 1847, to Miss Hannah Spicer, a sister of his first wife. The last marriage was blessed with 12 children, seven of whom grew to maturity. The children who survive him are Mrs. Charles Moon and Mrs. Seymour Richardson of Pavilion, mrs. Mrs. Richard Worthington and Fred Charles, Sanford and Frank of Vicksburg.

Mr. Lemon was a staunch member of the Church of God. He was successful in business and was highly respected by all citizens of the county who knew him.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

Brother Lemon began his Christian life when but a boy of 17. He was brought into the truth by Elder Levi H. Chase, over 30 years ago, living and dying clinging to the blessed promises of God. He said to me about two weeks before his death, "It is all well. I do not dread death, but rejoice in hope of the resurrection." He was very tenderly cared for by wife and family, all realizing his condition, and expecting for several months a sudden death, which came Dec. 12th, just as he was preparing for breakfast. He desired us both to attend his funeral which was held from their beautiful home, a large concourse of friends and relatives were present, Elder Woodward speaking from 1 Thess. iv. 13. We commend the family to their father's God for comfort in this hour of grief and loneliness.

M. A. Woodward.

Brother James W. Grant was born in Kentucky, Aug. 11, 1821. Died in Jasper County, Ind. Dec. 17, 1900, at the age of 79 years, 4 months and 6 days. He was the oldest of the family of 10 children of Daniel and Rebecca Grant, who died in the faith. He leaves 5 brothers, 2 sisters living in and near Rensselaer, 5 of whom are in the faith. Of his own immediate family none survive him but one son.

The church deplores the loss of a true, faithful brother. The community feel the loss of an old and universally respected citizen. He was unassuming in character, but by his honesty, integrity, purity, sympathy and kind-heartedness, made friends of all. He sleeps 'til the resurrection of the just.

D. T. Halstead.

Editor Restitution:

I am pleased to report a series of meetings conducted in my dining-room by Bro. W. A. Mason, of Toronto, Ont. He is a very pleasing speaker, and his ability seems to be beyond questioning. At first he was thought to be in possession of a somewhat queer religion, but as time advanced and Brother Mason continued in an earnest and convincing manner, the gatherings increased as did the interest. I will farther state that we were much pleased to see in our midst, Brother and Sister Roys, of Niagara Falls. They came some fifteen miles or more and were delighted with our apparent prospects, due to the persistence of Bro. Mason. Yours in truth.

Little boats always totter about on the surface of the water, going all ways, as it happens, and overturning in a breath, while the great ship sinks deeply and more deeply in and goes steadily on. The cause of its steadiness is its depth. So abiding in the great truths of God gives steadfastness of motion to the soul. Under all the pressure of error and unbelief, and false doctrines it is unmovable, abounding in the work of the Lord.

Whoever is a hypocrite in his religion mocks God, presenting to him the outside, and reserving the inward for his enemy.—Jeremy Taylor.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Notice.

We have during the last few weeks, sent letters to a number of those who are owing us, setting forth our condition, and asking for aid by renewals. Some have responded, and we are thankful to you for your prompt attention and uniformly. kind words. We are forced to say that the large part of those whom we have addressed have apparently paid no heed to our call. Brethren, this is a wrong way to do. We told you the truth when we wrote, and it is truth now. It is expensive both in time and money to write letters. Only one is not much, but the many makes a burden in expense and time. By a little attention you can save us both the cash outlay and the labor. You certainly know when your time is out. Then please aid us by a prompt renewal. Don't let us ask again.

We have a few copies of the book called "The Scriptures Opened; or Thoughts and Themes for Bible Students" by Robert Ashcroft. It is a work that has passed the scrutiny of such of our brethren as Benjamin Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Wilson, J. F. Wagoner, A. J. Eychaner and others. It contains 370 pages, strongly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering on the back and side. It formerly sold for $1.25, but we offer the few we have on hand at 75 c. each post paid.

Brother M. Joblin wishes us to say that by the liberality of the friends of Truth, he can sell several hundred copies of "Law or Gospel, Which," at 50 cents per dozen, and trusts many will avail themselves of this opportunity to do missionary work, at little expense. Address him at 624 Woodland ave. Cleveland, O.

Dost thou intend a kindness to thy beloved one? Do it straightway, before the future come, destroying thy opportunity. Has thy heart's friend carelessly or cruelly stabbed into thy heart? Forgive him; think how, when thou art dead, he will punish himself. —Carlyle.

Please announce that I am ready to fill calls for preaching anywhere in the State of Missouri. Address me at Mountain Grove, Mo.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

Also the remainder of the edition of Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association, by A. H. Zilmer, is in the hands of this committee. About 70 copies only remain, at 5 cents each.

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

Advocated in a series of Ten Discourses. A Volume of 283 pages, cloth 25 cents, leather bound, embossed, and gilt edges, $1.00. By Wiley Jones. This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones and while getting them at the low price, you at the same time will aid Sister Jones to much-needed means.

Change of Location.

The friends will please make a note of the change of address of Brother J. S. Hatch. He has moved from this state to Tustin, Orange Co. California where letters should be addressed. We commend our Bro. Hatch to the brethren on the Pacific Coast, and add if any desire his labors in the gospel field he is ready to answer calls.

An Appeal to the Brotherhood of the Church of God.

THE RESTITUTION is a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Church of God, and we ask you to kindly read the following lines, and consider our mutual interests.

This paper gives you all the Church news, announcements of meetings and reports of them when held.

It gives notices of deaths of members in all parts of the country.

It gives exegetical articles that are of great value to the student.

It gives articles on prophecy, and all the news that bears on the fulfillment of the future part of God's word.

It contains articles that set forth the nature of mankind, and the Hope he has for anything hereafter.

It sets forth the Gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Christ and his Apostles, and insists that this Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things that concern the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, are what constitute the power of God unto salvation to him that believeth it.

It goes further, and insists that a holy life consistent with the high profession made, is just as necessary as belief—i. e. that Faith is well, and Works are well, and necessary both of them. That Sincerity alone will never save of itself.

It advocates the restoration of Literal Israel to their own land as the only consistent way of fulfilling the promises made to the fathers.

It contains articles that show the necessity for a resurrection of the dead as the only means of attaining the blessings promised the faithful.

It gives articles showing that the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus the Christ must be just as literal as his first coming or his going away was: and that the saints have no hope of reward until that event; thus making that the most important of all the important events that will occur.

This paper urges all these matters, and many others of like nature, including immersion as the only mode of baptism, and at a cost of but $1.50 per year, about three cents a week. It costs us more reading matter than 14 books that usually sell for $1.00 each, and is the very best means you can have of keeping posted as to the workings of the Church and the world as relating to prophetic doings.

It is not sensational, and is not controversial in the sense that it wishes to discuss matters that are of secondary importance, when there is so much that is of prime importance to lay before our readers.

It holds that personal attacks by brethren upon others is out of place, and only tends to work harm in place of good, and urges always the settlement of differences by private means.

With these points here set forth we solicit you to give us your subscription for the coming year, and we assure you that you will be many times paid for the expense. Try it and be convinced of what we say.

If you have not seen a late copy we will gladly send you a sample free on request.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 2, 1901. NUMBER 1.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"God Knows."

Through all my little daily cares there is
One thought that comfort brings whene'er it comes:
'Tis this—"God knows." He knows
Each struggle that my hard heart makes to bring My will to his. Often when night-time comes
My heart is full of tears, because the good
That seemed, at morn, so easy to be done,
Has proved so hard; but then remembering
That a Kind Father is my Judge, I say,
"He knows." And so I lay me down with trust
That his good hand will give me needful strength
To better do his work in coming days.

"Death Does Not End All?"

The following was cut from the Chicago Times-Herald:

"Dr. Polemus H. Swift of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church spoke on the theme "Does Death End All?" It was the first sermon in a series on the general subject, "After Death What?" Among other things the preacher said:

"The last word of science, according to Professor Shaler of Harvard admits that personal immortality may be a fact. That is as far as science can go today. It may go farther tomorrow. We are permitted to weave again our cable of hope. Man has the power of thought. Now thought is not a property of matter. It is an antecedent to all organization and cannot therefore be the result of organization. Hence that in man which thinks, apprehends abstract truth, loves, generalizes, hopes and fears must be spiritual.

"It must be independent of the body, for I am conscious that this hand is no more me than the book which I hold in it. Mental and physical phenomena are wholly unlike, and consciousness must be trusted or speculative philosophy is an impossibility.

"Science teaches that there is no such thing as annihilation. Forms may be broken up, but substance remains. The elemental must abide. It is impossible, then, that the spiritual unit in man can be destroyed by the break up that we call death. The house may be destroyed. The tenant will seek another. The relation of soul to body is that of a rower to his boat. The boat may be wrecked. The rower escapes.

"It is an unfailing law that God has given to every creature time and opportunity to approximate its type and come to the perfect. The fly requires a few days, and they are given. The oak in the forest needs a thousand years to approximate its type, and the Almighty does not grudge them. The planet that is thrown off from the central sun demands a multitude of conditions and a billion years to realize all of God's ideals concerning it. These conditions and years are not withheld.

"But if death ends all then the soul—God's grandest creation—is mocked by ideals which it cannot reach, for no man has ever reached the bounds of life without feeling that he had scarcely made a beginning. The moral law demands perfection. Only in eternity can that perfection be won."

REPLY.

One would really suppose that a man claiming to be a minister, would naturally appeal to Divine Revelation for light as to what will occur after death, in place of the contradictory deductions of mortal men which they call science. It is a well known fact that many things which were considered scientific years ago, are deemed unscientific today. Science can never penetrate the mysteries beyond death. If we would be informed on those things Divine Revelation must be consulted. When ministers leave God's Word and consult science with regard to the life beyond death, to my mind is like King Saul consulting witches in place of the living God.

If this minister had consulted God's Word he would have learned that death does end all except in the cases of those who have become united to Christ in God's own appointed way. Holy Scripture is very clear in its declarations that death ends all, unless life is resumed again through the medium of the resurrection.

In the first place it predicates everything upon the resurrection of Jesus. If he had not been raised as the first fruit of the harvest, no harvest could follow. A dead Christ could have no power to release any one else from death, unless he himself had first been released. If there be no resurrection of the dead, then in truth death does in fact end all.

In proof this, I would call this Methodist preacher's attention to 1 Cor. xv. 13-18: "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ, are perished." Notice the phrase: "Are perished." That certainly means that even those who are asleep in Christ, that death ends all, in case there is no resurrection of the dead.

In place of eternal life being a gift of God through Christ, this minister is looking to science to teach him the natural immortality of man, and as yet he has arrived at nothing more satisfactory than a "may be."

He says: "The last word of science according to Professor Shaler of Harvard, admits that personal immortality may be a fact, that is as far as science can go today."

Here we learn that science today can give no more than an unsatisfactory "may be," while Scripture languages is clear and to the point, in showing that present "personal immortality" has become a "fact" only in the person of the Lord Jesus. I will call this preacher's attention to a Scripture declartion in which there is no "may be."

See 1 Tim. vi. 14, 15: "That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ; which in his times he will show who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality."

This is an unequivocal statement, that he "only hath immortality," such being the case it is certain that "personal immortality" is not as yet a "fact" in any one else. Professor Shaler's deductions, and Swift's reasoning, falls to the ground when Holy Scripture speaks.

There are but four other places in Scripture where the word immortality is found, and every one of them show that immortality is to be a future acquisition, and therefore cannot be a present possession.

1. Rom. ii. 7: "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory." If immortality was already a present fact in the natural man, it would be worse than folly for Scripture to advise one to "seek for" "immortality, eternal life." Is this not so, Mr. Swift?

Scripture shows that the gospel is the light which guides the way to immortality.

2. Tim. i. 10: "Who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

Two more occurrences of the word immortality are found in 1 Cor. xv. 53, 54, and they show that it comes to the dead through the resurrection.

"This corruptible (the dead) must put on incorruption, and this mortal (the living) must put on immortality, so when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

IS THOUGHT A PROPERTY OF MATTER?

Man thinks just as long as the breath of life vitalizes the body, or the brain substance is uninjured. Deprive him of breath, and he will at once cease to think.

This minister says: "Man has the power of thought. Now thought is not a property of matter." "It must be independent of the body."

Now, my dear sir, if this is so, how comes it that man ceases to think on the event of his ceasing to breathe? As a minister I shall expect you to be loyal to God's Word. See Ps. cxlvi. 3: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the sons of men, whose breath goeth forth; he returneth to the earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

Now, if "thought is not a property of matter," and is "independent of the body," how is it that he ceases to think in the event of his losing breath, and his body returning to his elements? Holy Writ says such is the case.

If thought is independent of the body, then the destruction of the body could in no case affect thought. Can you explain?

Psa. v. 6: "In death there is no remembrance of thee." Thought must be affected when memory is destroyed by death.

Speaking of the dead Job says: (xiv. 21); "His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them."

From these Scriptures we certainly must perceive that man loses his power to think in the event of the the body being destroyed. A strange thing if thought is "independent of the body."

Now, my friend, it is a physiological fact, that if the nerve force and the machinery of the brain is interfered with, thought is either impaired, suspended or destroyed. Cases are too numerous in the knowledge of the medical fraternity to be successfully controverted. A man may be injured on the brain, and thought temporarily suspended. A fatal injury may be inflicted, and thought will cease altogether. On this point I quote as follows:

"There are many examples on record where the skull has been fractured so that a portion of it has so pressed upon the brain that it becomes unable to act and unconsciousness has ensued, or the person is made crazy, but on removal of the pressure by a surgical operation, again permitting the brain to perform its proper functions, organized thought is again resumed.

In many instances persons have been unconscious for days or weeks through this cause, when, on the removal of the pressure, thought was resumed where it left off. As far as the operation of the brain is concerned or the power to think during the interim the person was practically dead. If, as is claimed, the immortal soul or spirit the body and independent of it is the intelligence which thinks and reasons, what becomes of it during the period of unconsciousness? Why does it not still act when the brain for the time being is paralyzed by a blow or the skull fractured? This is a reasonable question which has never yet been answered and which cannot be answered except from the scientific standpoint that thought is produced by the action of the brain.

An example on this point, with which Chicago people at least are familiar, is that of the noted lawyer, Frank Collier. In his younger days he had a brilliant mind and earned a very large income through his legal practice. Unfortunately in some political brawl his brain was injured by a blow, since which time he has been largely irresponsible and twice has been incarcerated in an insane asylum. He recently paid a visit to an eminent brain specialist in New York, who says that the blow depressed a portion of the skull so that it caused a pressure on the brain and that a surgical operation would remove the difficulty and restore it to its normal condition."

Now, Mr. Swift, how do you account for the effect on the mind caused by injury of the brain, or the destruction of the body? I will continue this in another issue.

Were the Apostles Wrong?

In the Cleveland, O., Leader, of Dec. 17, a "Reverend Doctor" of high standing in one of the popular denominations is reported as having said in a Sunday morning discourse that "the teachings of Jesus Christ in regard to his second coming had been grossly misunderstood by the Apostles; that they had incorporated their mistakes into the New Testament, and that the Church had been grossly misled," et cetera.

The gist of the argument is that they expected the Lord to come in connection with the destruction of Jerusalem; and when he did not appear in connection with that event, "Saint Jude attempted to explain the apparent failure of the prophecy by saying that one day was with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. A delightful theological subterfuge: a complete twisting of the meaning of Jesus."

Such utterances, if coming from the lips of an Ingersoll or Bradlaugh, would awaken in the heart of every devout believer of the Bible the most profound pity; but when they are boldly proclaimed from the pulpit by one in whom many have the utmost confidence as a "teacher of the doctrine concerning God," a "D. D." one is seized with amazement and grief. Such sayings remind us of the words that "there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own desires, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" 2 Pet. iii. 3, 4.

Here a preacher takes his text, perhaps from the letters of the Apostles, and then tells his hearers that these men were not only mistaken in their understanding, and "muddled" in their handling of the Lord's words, but, what is infinitely worse, deliberately practiced deceit. "Delightful subterfuge. Twisting of the meaning."

This is what those "twisters of the meaning" had to say of themselves: "A servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, separated unto the gospel of God; through the will of God; not of men, neither by men, but by Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness." They averred that they had faithfully delivered the message they had received, having "renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the Word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending themselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." 2 Cor. iv. 2. It seems that even in those days there were those who corrupted the Word of God, but they steadily maintained that "we are not as many which corrupt the Word of God; but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ." 2 Cor. ii. 17. "For our exhortation was not of deceit.....nor of guile; but as we are allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak: not as pleasing men, but God which trieth the hearts." 1 Thes. ii. 3, 4.

But no matter, Paul, and the rest of you, what you may say about yourselves; we know better, even though we call you "Saint Paul" or "St. Jude," etc. These appellations are only a matter of form; they do not really mean anything, any more than the appendages with which we moderns grace our names, have any real significance. It may have been well enough in those primitive days of "simplicity" (2 Cor. xi. 3) to implicitly believe and explicitly state the doctrine of the Lord's second coming to reward every one according to his works; but to us there is, as the "doctor" learnedly says, "no terrible judgment ahead," because the Judge will never come. The "wicked servant" in the parable said, "My Lord delayeth his coming;" but down at this advanced period of the age we are told that the world is "growing better," and the One to "turn away ungodliness" need not come. We are able to help and take care of ourselves. Pity. If that servant was "wicked" for saying his master would delay his coming, how shall they be characterized who promulgate such erroneous views and set aside his coming entirely?

Yet, after all, they are quite logical. The earth, originally intended as the abode of man (Isa. xlv. 18; Psa. xxxvii.; Matt. v. 5) is eventually to be destroyed "in melancholy grandeur" the Lord, though he faithfully promised to come again and receive his own to himself, and to exalt them to joint rulership with himself in the kingdom (Jno. xiv. 1-3; Matt. xix. 28; Luke xxii. 29; 2 Tim. ii. 12; Rev. v. 10), has gone to heaven, from whence we may never expect him to return, except as he comes to us in the guise of "a beautiful angel with a golden key in his hand"—death (see 1 Cor. xv. 26); thus obviating the necessity of the literal personal coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our gathering together unto him" (2 Thes. ii. 1). Having reviewed, revised, and improved his original plan, he now proposes to take their immortal souls to heaven when they die, instead of coming to "raise them up at the last day." Jno. vi. 39, 40. Lift up your heads, ye waiting saints; lay aside your nostrums and pellets with which you would stay the icy hand of death a little longer; discharge your physicians whom you anxiously summon to your bedside to prolong your wearied lives; hush your sighs for a few more days or years of life, if perchance you might be found living and waiting for the coming of the Life-giver. Death, who had hitherto been to you the "king of terrors," is coming to transport you to the scenes of bliss!

Logically, this is the position of our present day eschatology. Is it any wonder with such teaching there should be so very few who really love and look for the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ from heaven? 2 Tim. iv. 8. Where this is the condition, is not the application of the treatment recommended in Rev. iii. 14-22 in order, and the only thing that will produce a healthy state.

That the Apostles were not blind guides of the blind is evident from the fact that they clearly foresaw the course of events that would follow their decease. Said Paul, "That day (the day of Christ) shall not come except there come a falling away first," etc. 2 Thes. ii. 1-3. "Falling away" from what? From "the faith" (1 Tim. iv. 1); "the faith of the gospel." Phil. i. 27. Others spoke of the same subject in nearly the same words. See 2 Pet. ii. 1-3; 1 John ii. 18; iv. 3; 2 John vii. It has come; I mean the predicted defection; and thus the intelligence, veracity and good judgment of the Apostles has been vindicated. But not only this. Also the wisdom of Christ, Head of the Church, in selecting these very men to be his chosen vessels, to bear his name before the people and the nations, has been fully justified. It is evident that he fulfilled his promise to send upon them the Spirit of Truth, which should guide them into all the truth, by bringing to their remembrance things they had heard of him, and also teach them things to come.

Brethren of the one faith, let us hold to the doctrine of the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. We may not yet dispense with "sound doctrine," and turn our ears to fables. If this doctrine had any saving qualities in Apostolic times, so that they were "waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. i. 7), we may be assured that it has lost none of its power and beauty; and certainly, our salvation is now nearer than it was 1900 years ago.

Come, Lord Jesus, that this long night of sin and these hours of suspense may be ended; and that ultimately the knowledge of the Lord may cover the earth as the waters cover the deep. Amen.

Plymouth, Indiana, Jan'y. 2, 1901.

There is some fear that raiders from the Transvaal may attack Cape Town, and guns from a war ship are being put on shore.

The entire French Mediterranean fleet is ordered to mobilize at Toulon by Jan. 15. No one knows what it means, as it is a very unusual order. The quarrel between the Catholics and the French government is drawing to a climax, and a deputation from the Church has gone to Rome to confer with the Pope as to the course to pursue.

There must be hopefulness in our hearts for one that has fallen. Without trust in him it will be impossible to lift him up. We must have faith in his efforts after amendment, even though they are weak and faltering. There is always great power for good in taking the hopeful view. The confidence we show in another reflects itself in his heart, and carries encouragement with it, just as your look of sympathy brightens the weary, downcast face, and is reflected there." •

Popular applause is an empty breath. When Napoleon was returning from his successful wars in Austria and Italy, amid the huzzas of the people Bourrienne remarked to him that "It must be delightful to him to be greeted with such demonstrations of enthusiastic admiration." "Bah," replied Napoleon, "This same unthinking crowd, under a slight change of circumstances, would follow me just as eagerly to the scaffold." •

On the third page of our paper today we give some articles showing the present condition of the nations, and our readers can see what elements are at work that may cause the next world-war. We do not suppose all will agree with everything set forth by these writers, indeed it is our opinion that, if the Master does not come in a short time, that the United States will play a very important part in national enterprises. The rapid unfolding of events the last two years, and the position attained by this Country already, leads us to think that no very great changes will come without America's voice being heard, and her hand felt. However, we feel certain that with all the boasted progress in all branches, and our large enlightenment, there is no sign in the worlds of science, litature, art, invention, commerce, industry, politics, nor even that of religion, that gives even one ray of hope for world-peace. Some few writers claim to have visions of brightness ahead, but they are simple visions. Mr. Sheldon, who wrote "In His Steps," is one who has just prophecied that the early part of the 20th century will see all churches and religions denomination united in one body, and of course predicts that such a force would then easily convert the world to Christ. We assure the gentleman that he is wrong, and if he will make a study of his Bible he will find that no such "good time" is "coming," but the very reverse will be the case. The material, social, political and religious affairs of this world will go on getting worse and worse, more and more mixed and jumbled, until it is impossible that any human power can untangle the snarl.

In this condition the Lord will find the world when he comes, and assumes command. Then and not till then, can we expect real reform in any department. So that in wishing our readers "a happy new year," we will also repeat the salutation given by Bro. Joblin "May Messiah come this year," for we want to see this turmoil ended, the wrong made right, the kingdom of God established here, and righteousness and peace reign universal. Lord hasten the day.

The Year 1901

Will have dawned upon the world before another volume of The Restitution is begun. The year 1900 has joined the untold ages of the past, and the new year will pass with the same rapidity, and in its turn sweep into the land of forgetfulness hundreds of thousands of those whose cheeks at its birth were rosy with health, whose limbs were active and strong, and whose hearts beat high with hope that they would see its close, and many years beside. The fact that another year of our lives has entirely passed away; that its record has been made up; that nothing we have done can be recalled; that can now be done, should awaken in us serious reflections, and lead us to heed the Spirit's injunctions:—"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Eccl. ix. 10, for, says the Psalmist, "We spend our years as a tale that is told." Psa. xc. 9. And the experience of all verifies the statement of the prophet Isaiah, "That we all do fade as a leaf;" and suggests the wisdom of praying with the Psalmist, "Lord make me to know mine end, and what it is, that I may know frail I am. Behold thou hast made my days as an hand breadth and my age is nothing before thee; verily every man at his best estate is altogether vanity." Psa. xxxix. 4-6. We have constant reminders of these solemn facts. We cannot shut our eyes to them. Week by week we see the blinds drawn down, the crepe on the doors, and hear the tolling bell, and see the funeral processions. But in the face of these stern facts mankind are prone to forget them and act as if every body was mortal but themselves. "Their inward thought is that their houses shall continue for ever and their dwelling places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names. Nevertheless man being in honor abideth not; he is

THE MEASURE OF MY DAYS,

LIKE THE BEASTS THAT PERISH.

This their way is their folly; yet their posterity approve their sayings," and just as their fathers. "Like sheep are they laid in the grave; death shall feed on them, and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling." But says the Psalmist, "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave for he shall receive me." If during the past year our lives have been too much engrossed with the things that are seen,—that are temporal,—that are vanishing,—let us

TURN OVER A NEW LEAF.

Let us consider what the hope of the godless is. "Though he get him gain, when God taketh away his soul? (life) will God hear his cry when trouble cometh upon him?" Job xxvii. 8, 9. A singular question was asked by Jesus (Mark viii. 36, 37) and he allows the question to answer itself—"What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own life?" He allows the question to answer itself;—he loses all. If during the past year we have given ourselves over to the neglect of things relating to the life beyond, the fact of having once obeyed from the heart our faith in the gospel of salvation will not help us when the Lord comes to number up his jewels unless we repent. If we allow the things we have heard to slip away from us they cannot influence our lives: this is neglecting after once embracing it; there is no escape for such unless before the Master rises up and shuts the door, the things yet remaining, but ready to die, be revived. Heb. ii. 1-3, and Rev. iii. 2. Let us be wise, and consider our latter end.

TO PLEASURE OR GAIN

THE GREAT SALVATION

In 1885 the English Jews adopted as a new year's greeting:—"May the Messiah come this year;" this contains an invocation of Israel's God, and a recognition of Israel's Hope, and we agree with others that this salutation would be a far preferable one for those who have become and heirs according to the promise," than "A Happy New Year to you;" or "the compliments of the season." Every one who can understandingly and from the heart say, "May the Messiah come this year" is keeping his lamps trimmed and burning, and a supply of oil on hand. That the writer and readers may be found in that waiting posture, we pray. We are able to discern the steady approach of the Lord's Day by existing signs that crowd the political sky, and the moral condition of the world, but it is as true now as it was when the Lord said, "Watch, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh," that we are wisely left in the dark as to the precise time. Till the Master appear or the enemy seize us, may our chief aim be to heed the command of the Lord. "Be ye also ready." •

"ABRAHAM'S SEED

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Brethren and Sisters:—

It is a solemn fact that every one of us has been character-building throughout the past year. What sort of a record did we make? We certainly do not stand in the sight of God where we did a year ago. We have been growing in his favor, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; or we have been growing out of his favor. Yes; we are more godly, or more ungodly; more spiritually minded or less so; more prayerful or less so; more watchful or less so.

Brethen and sisters,—what do we think most? What do we talk about? How do we employ our leisure moments? An honest answer to each of these questions will help us to ascertain our present status. We were pained to hear a professed follower of the Lamb say he went to bed at 7 or 8 o'clock sometimes because he did not know what to do with himself. Think of it,—he had enlisted as whose enemies abound everywhere, inside and out, and yet he is obliged to go to sleep to get rid of the time he has been told to redeem,—to occupy. Think of it:—The last times are upon us, and the trumpet may sound at any moment, and yet he does not know what to do with himself. Professing to be an heir of all things, and anointed to sit with Jesus on his throne, and sway a sceptre over the nations, and aid in filling the earth with

A SOLDIER OF JESUS CHRIST,

THE GLORY OF GOD,

and has every reason to think the day of the Lord is close at hand and yet he doesn't care to examine the will by which the exceeding riches of God's grace is to come to him, if at all; which in our opinion is very doubtful, if he is too listless to dwell upon the

JOY AWAITING THE FAITHFUL.

What is such a faith and such a hope worth? Listlessness is dishonoring to God and Christ. The listless are not growing in God's favor,—they are growing out of his favor, if they were ever in it. If any such see these lines we trust they will well weigh the Master's words, Rev. iii. 15-17 and never forget that to the Lord that bought them. He would rather they were cold than lukewarm, because the condition only fits them for being vomited out of his mouth by and by,—and their present condition,—if they only knew it, is "wretched and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked; and have need to buy of me—the Lord the Spirit—gold tried in the fire that

LUKEWARMNESS IS NAUSEATING

THOU MAYEST BE RICH, and white raiment, (righteousness of the saints chap. xix. 8) that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear, and anoint thine eyes with eye salve that thou mayest see." And then it is lovingly added, "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous, therefore and repent,— and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and I will sup with him, and he with me; to him,"—here follows the grandest of all possible inducements;—"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father on his throne. He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

Brethren and sisters,—just within the threshold of the new year and the new century, we say to you all, may the prayer of the Apostle for the Ephesians be answered for you all: he prayed that God would grant them according to the riches of his glory to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith,—that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. And now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. •

A Shorter Prayer.

We think it was the late H. L. Hastings that published the following telling incident,—and we would not be surprised to know that he was the minister addressed. The answer reads just like what we might expect him to make under the circumstances. It was as follows:—

"Mr. C.—, an ungodly farmer, said to a minister in a New England village awhile ago: 'I think I had rather use the Lord's prayer when I do my praying, than to join with you in your offhand addresses to the Almighty. It's short you know, and it's just what Christ taught us.'

'Yes,' said the minister, 'but there's another prayer which is even shorter, and fits your case and mine quite as well.'

'Ah, what is it?'

'God be merciful to me a sinner,' was the emphatic reply.

The shorter prayer must precede the longer one: and no man can truly devoutly say 'Our Father,' until from his heart he has cried out to God, be merciful to me a sinner. We may not invert this order. The worship of an unpardoned man is impertinence and sin..... The sin-offering must precede the thank-offering. The Lamb must be slain before the bloodless gifts can be safely brought." • Kindness.

"Every solitary kind action that is done, the world over, is working briskly in its own sphere to restore the balance of right and wrong. Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence, or learning; and these three never converted any one unless they were kind also. The continual sense which a kind heart has of its own need of kindness keeps it humble." •

Communicated.

Brother Underwood:

I hope you will be able to hold up the banner of truth until Jesus comes. It must be near the time, as the Jews appear to be getting ready to return from their wanderings. If the casting away of the Jews be the riches of the Gentiles, what then will the gathering of them be but life from the dead?

Yours in hope of life through Christ.
George Mitchell.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

My hope is centered in the promises made to the fathers, a resurrection to eternal life at the Lord's coming. When he comes may we be found faithful and meet all the blessed ones. Let us hold fast to the promises written unto us. It seems that the day is not far off. I see by the date on my paper that my time is nearly out; but I will have to stop it for want of means. If the Lord wills I will try and send it before long. I shall miss it as a letter to me every week and a welcome visitor. Some kind friend sent it to me last year. May the Lord bless and keep that one. The blessed Book says, "Remember the widows and the fatherless." I am so thankful for the dear paper as I seldom hear any preaching.

Your Sister in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.
Mary M. Church.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I again inform you that I am in the land of the living, and also of the dead and dying; but am waiting for the coming of our Life Giver, who will give us eternal life. Then we will not be in the land of the dead, for there will be no dead there, nor sickness, nor sorrow, for there the inhabitants will not say, "I am sick." Now we are surrounded by sickness and death, and all manner of wickedness, and it is growing worse and worse, and will continue so until our King comes and takes to himself his great power and reigns, King of kings and Lord of lords. Then our prayers will be answered, as he has taught us, "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Then will the earth be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Yes, my brethren and sisters in the Lord's anointed, we have a good hope, a blessed hope that is big with immortality and eternal life. With this hope in view we can pray "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." O may we all be ready to hear the welcome voice, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Love to all.
C. P. Alonis.

Dear Restitution:

As it is time to renew my subscription I enclose money for the same. I have taken the paper over thirty years and hope to take it as long as I live, or as this age lasts, as I am in my 73rd year of this life. I feel as though my time is short in which to work for the Master, but can truly say my faith in the promises of God are stronger than ever in my life. Dear brethren, pray for your old brother, that his faith fail not, as I am passing through a great trial, and may God's blessing rest upon you and all the brethren and sisters who are trying to live the Christ like life, and especially the contributors to our dear paper.

Your brother waiting for our King.
G. W. Smith.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

We greatly appreciate the labors of the brethren in all branches of the work. May the Lord keep and prosper. "The time is at hand." Our prayers are continually for our people, God's waiting ones. A Happy Christmas to all, is the wish of your brother and sister in Christ.

Anthony & Eliza Busch.

Editor Restitution:

Although my subscription does not expire until March, I take pleasure in remitting early as I think all others of like faith should do in order to encourage the spread of truth as we receive it through the weekly visits of this most welcome messenger The Restitution. Hoping that the ushering in of the New Year may open up many avenues of light and cheer, that we may be prompted to fortify and strengthen our old resolves and add new and stronger works all along the line of our Christian faith, let our motto be, "No surrender until we meet the Captain of our salvation and hear the welcome plaudit, 'Well done.'"

Yours in the blessed hope.
Martha Hause.

Dear Restitution:

The time to renew my subscription has come and I gladly do so because I believe it is the best religious paper I ever read, and the reason I believe it is the best is because it harmonizes with the Scriptures which the majority of the teaching of the present day does not. I am now in my 70th year, and have been in the truth only ten or eleven years; consequently this paper is a great help and comfort to me, and really I consider it a great necessity and ought to be read by millions instead of hundreds, because of so much false teaching; therefore, I hope all who are indebted to you will pay up promptly, and that many new subscribers may be added to your number and that you may have a successful New Year, also the years to follow.

From your brother and well-wisher in the good work.
Ebenezer Fairchild.

Dear Restitution:

God bless the dear Restitution, long may it prosper. It is all the preaching I am permitted to listen to, but I feel very thankful for the dear paper and the many good words of help and advice. God bless the dear brothers and sisters who are striving for a birth-right in the kingdom of our Lord. Let us all strive as far as it is in our power to help our good old paper by keeping up our subscriptions, and helping to send the paper to others, and if we are not able to send the paper to any one, send our own to some person who we think would read it or to some brother or sister who is not so well off in this world's goods as ourselves.

I close this short letter with a Happy New Year to all. Remember us in your prayers.

H. E. Paddock.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Nineteen hundred has died and many of our dear ones have been laid away by the enemy death, but they are not lost, but are asleep in Jesus, for Paul said, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." My faith and hope is strong, and the older I get, and the nearer my home the stronger I am, and I expect to go on till the Master comes, or I fall asleep in Jesus. Perhaps some will like to hear what I have been doing during the past year. I have been busy all the time, filled as many calls as I could, and left many unfilled for want of time, as many of them were for Sunday and there were not enough Sundays. I traveled a little over 2,300 miles. Preached 102 sermons, 4 of them being funeral sermons. Baptized 14 souls into the All-saving name of Jesus Christ. Received $140.00. Expenses $60.00. My last meeting was at Morse Mills, beginning Dec. 10, and closing on the 24th, with two additions to the number at that place, making them now 23, with a good interest. The brethren are talking of building a church house at that place and I have faith enough in them to believe that it will not be all talk. They have considerable opposition from the Baptists. Their minister tells them that we are all infidels and the doctrine is dangerous, but occasionally one comes, and now and then one of them comes out and puts on Christ. We closed on the 24th with a nice little Christmas tree for the little ones. We gave them a lesson on the birth of Christ, his baptism, his preaching, his death, burial and resurrection, and that our only hope of a future life depended on Christ's second coming, a change of the living and a resurrection of the dead. We closed with an exhortation and the question, How many of us will live to see another Christmas? and the necessity of being ready to meet the Lord, whether awake or asleep. My prayer is, that we may all live during 1901 every day as though it might be our last day that we would have to live. I promised to visit them again in the spring, if the Lord wills.

Obituary.

Chester Woodworth was born Aug. 18th, 1827, in Ashtabula County, O., and died at his home in Millfield, Athens County, O., Dec. 26, 1900. His parents moved to Green's Run in Athens County, when he was 12 years old, there he lived the life of a pioneer's son with only the scant necessities of life. At the age of 24 he married Rebecca B. Johnson and settled in Millfield in the year 1851, where he continued to reside until his death. His wife died in 1875, the following year he was united in marriage with Miss Minerva J. Pratt, who with a daughter by the first wife, Mrs. H. D. Henry of Athens, survive him. His life began in poverty, was ended in plenty, the result of temperate habits and dilligence in business although an invalid almost his entire life. In early manhood he was on profession of faith, immersed. He said during his last days that at that time he understood but one item of the truth, that was the mortality of man. As the years passed he studied the Word and gained a more perfect knowledge of the glad tidings of the kingdom which Christ is to establish on the earth. In the later part of his life, having learned the way of life more perfectly he yielded obedience to the truth, understanding that a knowledge of and faith in God's promises must precede baptism. He at this time united with the people known as Christadelphians. He was a consistent Christian, a kind neighbor and a good man. His faith in a future life could not have been stronger. He was a subscriber to and a constant reader of The Restitution almost from its first publication. Before his death he requested the writer to hold the funeral services and selected John iii. 16 and 1 Thes. iv. 13, 14, 18 to be used as the basis of the discourse. He died in the most perfect faith that Jesus would soon come and wake him out of his sweet sleep. Oh that all might have this beautiful faith.

Editor Restitution:

In reply to your request of Dec. 31, and query in postal card enclosed dated Sac City, Dec. 28th, would say, that passage Ezek. xxxvii. 16, and context is a very clear and specific Messianic prophecy of the ultimate gathering together of God's chosen people out from among the nations of earth into the land of Palestine and their re-establishment and exaltation there under the Christ assertion of the kingdom of God on the earth for which Jesous taught us to pray in the "Lord's Prayer" so called—a prophecy and a consummation of prophecy with which all other prophecy agrees and to which consummation it all, in type and shadow and parable and poetical trope and mysterious oracular word points.

The word "Stick" here is merely one of the many "blunders" of the C. V. & R. V. and is an ignorant rendering of the word meaning "Sceptre" and so translated in many other places in these versions. "Hrahdos" is the word and has no possible relation to the stick upon which the "scroll" of "papyrus" or "bibliou" or "book" of that day was rolled. The context of this passage shows clearly how this word is used here, and it is the same word translated "Sceptre" in the passage quoted in Hebrews 1st chapter from the 44th (45 C. V.) Psalm. "The sceptre of thy kingdom is a sceptre of righteousness." It is the ordinary term for the sceptre of royal rule. The two sceptres in this prophecy are joined together in the prophet's hand to indicate the ultimate union of the two kingdoms of Jouda and Israel again in the power and potency of the "All-Controlling One"—"the hope of Israel" that Paul says he was being called to account for, you will remember, and that the Restitution has been contending for this twenty years or more.

Yours in this faith and hope.
Chas. Gardner.

New Year's Greeting.

Rejoice, my fellow-servants! for another year is past;
The heat and burden of the day will not forever last;
And yet the work is pleasant now, and sweet the Master's smile,
And well may we be diligent thro' all our "little while."
We serve a faithful ruler—the ever gracious Lord—
So let us help each other with a hearty hand and word.

Rejoice, my comrades-soldiers! for in this long campaign
Another march is ended now, and we may rest again.
What if tomorrow's dawning renews the march and fight,
Thus far the war has shown we may trust our Captain's might;
Some enemies are driven back, some ramparts overthrown,
Some earnests given that victory at length shall be our own.

Rejoice, my called brethren! for the race is near a run.
The goal is drawing nearer with each revolving sun;
The trumpet sounds yet louder—"Redemption draweth nigh!"
The victor's wreath—the crown of life—see there it greets our eye!
Now we must not, will not faint, but brace our loins, and on:
A short sharp struggle, and the prize of our High calling's won.

Rejoice, dear fellow-pilgrim! for another stage is o'er
Of the weary homeward journey, to be traveled thro' no more.
When the work of our Forerunner is finished, and our home
Is ready built and furnished, to meet us he will come;
Then no more clouds and shadows shall dark'n all our sky;
No more thorns and stumbling-blocks across our path shall lie.

The light which shone thro' all the past will still our steps attend.
The Guide who led us hitherto will lead us to the end.
The distant view is bright'ning,—with fewer clouds to hide;
And faith's far-piercing vision doth see the glorious Bride,
God's own majestic city—home of the white-robed kings—
The hope of which across our path a radiance now flings.

But nearer e'en than this gleams the dawning of the day,
When our long-expected Savior will his majesty display;
When forever with the Lord and the loved ones dead before,
We shall meet and reign in glory, in life forever more.
New mercies from our Father's hand with each new year may come,
But that will be the best of all, a blissful welcome home.

Doom in Sight for Traditions of the Chinese.

Should peace plans move ahead on the basis proposed by the diplomatic representatives of the allied Powers, the traditions and practices of centuries in Chinese affairs will be reversed and a revolution accomplished among a most conservative and exclusive people. If China were not helpless the outlook for a settlement on such terms would be most unpromising. It cannot be said now to point to any thing better than a long step in the direction favored by commercial interests and agitated with more zeal than discretion by the reformers in the middle and southern parts of the empire.

If it rested with the people of China to decide what should be done, the question would doubtless be referred back by them to those who must now deal with it. Possibly they might not consider themselves incapable, for modesty is hardly a native trait in any conspicuous degree, but the habit of reliance upon those in authority has become almost instinctive. The people are not wholly unaware that they are and have been the victims of a gigantic confidence game. So were their ancestors, and precedent counts for so much with them that in general they rather enjoy being bunkoed.

The trouble is that the average mind, relying for guidance on the official class, cannot contemplate without excitement or prejudice any subject that involves China with another Nation. Hence the payment of a foreign debt, incurred by methods regarded everywhere else as legitimate, stirs the spirit of revolt, while stealing and corruption, as indulged by the official class, pass as a matter of course.

Paternalism probably counts for more here than anywhere else. It has its highest form in the Government, which, as an abstraction, ennobles, embodies and typifies the family relation. The liberties taken or abuses fostered by the favoritisms of the empire, the office-holders, sometimes provoke mischief or captious conduct by those upon whom nothing has been bestowed except the right of existence, and hence rebellions occur—affairs quite within the family. On the whole, however, the office-holders do much as they like, and the people admire them and follow them as natural leaders.

When reform raised its head its advocates were not of the ignorant, unquestioning level, but men who dared think for themselves, and who foresaw in commercial tendencies political disaster for China unless she fell into the world's possession.

Their weakness was in lack of practical judgment. They tried to upset the ancient order at once, without preparing the way either at court or among the people. If the short work which the authorities made of the mindicates the present temper toward reform, it may well be supposed that even should the foreign demands find imperial acceptance the prospect of being restricted merely to adequate pay for services rendered and of having a foreign overseer always looking over the official shoulder will provoke all of the opposition that the office-holding class can command. Deprivation of rich perquisites and the indignity of being watched by persons of co-ordinate authority—probably of superior authority in matters of complaint or appeal—make more bitter medicine than can be swallowed without trouble.

To this, nevertheless, China must come. In demanding it the foreign representatives put a quietus upon the doubts cast on their appreciation of the actual state of affairs or the remedy for them. Had they prefaced the demands with the opinion that China was a perverse child, not to be trusted at all away from a task-master, the scope and intent of the demands could not have been clearer.

They mean that the old Manchu dynasty must stand aside and that the Emperor, at heart a reformer, although of old Manchu blood, must be permitted to rule, prohibited by solemn stipulation from having about him or trusting as his lieutenants in the provinces any of the leaders in the anti-foreign conspiracy; and lest, under an impulse of amiability for his own or from other pressure, he relax the policy of reform, they intend that he shall maintain here foreign troops, to keep him out of mischief as well as out of danger. With foreigners already lodged in the customs service, with viceroyal and other provincial functions to be supervised by foreigners, and with foreign troops to keep the court straight, one thing to happen to the Chinese Empire will be that the Chinese will not rule it.

In spite of the stress of Chinese affairs the imagination is taxed to picture such changes as the new demands imply. Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching hesitate to sanction them, while assenting readily enough to the money indemnity of 400,000,000 taels, which the foreigners propose. It may well be believed that the foreigners could better afford to drop out the indemnity clauses from their demands than those relating to viceroyal government, for opportunity to open the empire to trade should insure returns, as soon as the opportunity could be fully enjoyed, amply compensating for a waiver of immediate money obligations.

One need not look for motives for the reluctance of the native ambassadors, for surface reasons are sufficient. If a waiting game is to be played, or counter propositions submitted, or down cushions prepared on which national pride may fall, or delay furthered in the hope of terms specifically kind to the royal family, they can only put off the day of reckoning, if the foreigners stand by their propositions.

The terms, while apparently direct enough and intelligible to all who read them, veil but thinly a purpose to depose the Empress Dowager and her anti-foreign court. That will be a revolution largely personal in scope and character. The natives speak of their ruler as the Emperor. Current coin bears a stamp signifying that it was minted in a certain year in the reign of Kwang-Su. Actual rule by the Emperor and with a court of liberal advisers cannot, in itself, affect unfavorably the masses. It will simply put an end to a policy of intrigue and deceit which has become intolerable and consign to secure retirement those who put that policy into practice.

Anti-foreign influence must be made quite harmless as a condition of permanent peace, as an encouragement in the direction of peace. Punishment by death is the Chinese fashion of disposing of obnoxious persons.

While some of the Europeans favored this method at first and the demand for it finds frequent expression even yet, it may be doubted now if executions would be general were all the leading conspirators in foreign hands. Europe does not need to follow a style set in the Orient in this respect. Indeed, death might be a punishment more welcome to these leaders than if they were kept where they could do no mischief and be compelled to witness the shedding of the scales that have long kept China blind. By pulling the fangs of evil influence Europe can work sweeter and less uncivilized revenges than by a head-chopping exhibition. Heads have dropped in China for too many years to make that form of punishment specially terrorizing except to those immediately concerned, nor is suicide instructive or exemplary.

If the people are to be taught a lesson they will learn more, according to diplomatic attitude, by the dethronement of the Empress Dowager, the life imprisonment of Prince Tuan, as the demands now specify; and by a system of provincial rule which can provide for outside obligations while lightening rather than increasing tax and other burdens, and while furnishing fresh incentive to their instinct for trade, than by reprisals in a way so old that it has become commonplace and unimpressive.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

All Europe Unhappy.

A London correspondent to the New York Times, after giving the feeling in England over recent events in the South African situation gives forth the following gloomy picture of the condition of the nations of Europe.

It is hard work being cheerful at present, not only because we have this running sore in South Africa exhausting our vitals but because wherever the eye turns the world seems rather out of joint. No European nation can be looked upon as occupying a much happier position than ourselves. Passing by France and Germany as having each their troubles, Socialist, Anarchist, or reactionary, we find that Italy is still a seething cauldron of suppressed popular passions, and that those in high places are living in perpetual fear. The young king is kept like a prisoner, surrounded by guards, and all the severities perpetrated against the disseminators of revolutionary ideas, in no matter what form, only serve to deepen the nation's discontent.

Passing further eastward nothing but promise of trouble meets us in the dominions of the Sultan. Massacres of Armenians seem to be of weekly occurrence, and once more we are told that the ferment in Macedonia may any week involve the whole Balkan Peninsula in the horrors of war.

The Sultan is full of malignant designs against the young Turkish party, and is ready to slay, and slay until he thinks himself safe if only the surrounding powers are not paying much attention to him.

All continental Europe is busy with China, which occupies the minds of its statesmen almost as much as South Africa dominates us. We have been rather congratulating ourselves on the forward step in the Chinese negotiations this week, and again at the risk of being a kill-joy I must confess I cannot see it. After infinite labor a joint note has been manufactured, delivered, and accepted with bows, smiles and smooth words by the Chinese plenipotentiaries. But that means nothing. It does not even imply complete unity among the signatories.

I hear privately that the powers are far from being united, that they are rather drifting further apart while China seethes with revolt. Five of her southern provinces may be described in permanent rebellion now, and it will be quite impossible for a country, were it submissive throughout, to fulfil the demands made upon it.

It will be equally impossible to subscribe to the terms relating to the importation of arms or the suspension of literary examinations. It is most likely that these strike at the root of Chinese independence, and we may depend upon it, will be resisted to the uttermost, at first by shifty tactics, delays, excuses, and counter propositions, finally by fighting, for at a point the patient, meek Chinaman will fight with the utmost fury. The story of the Taiping rebellion alone would warrant us in saying that. Therefore I still think the European powers are on the wrong line of rails, and as spring comes on divisions will openly appear among them, little conducive to peace, but rather provocative to renewed conflict and possible attempts to dismember the empire.

Meanwhile China's commerce is injured, and the great financial interests which Europe, and especially England, possess in the country are placed increasingly in jeopardy.

Tendencies of Europe—[illegible] and 1900.

The [illegible] under the above caption is [illegible] from the Chicago Tribune [illegible] written by S Barling [illegible] author of works on "[illegible] Napoleon Bonaparte," etc. Our readers will get an idea of the vast changes that have taken place, and can look ahead at what is likely to occur on similar lines.

The condition of Europe at the close of the eighteenth century was like that of a mountainside at the beginning of a gigantic landslip. Cracks far extended and profound, penetrated through all political and social institutions, and already vast masses had departed from their original basis and were in precipitate fall.

The old order changeth—and mediævalism could no longer content and constrain humanity in Europe. Properly, mediævalism had come to an end at the close of the seventeenth century, [illegible] remained was its outward form, the husk, no new modes of government and of social order had sprung into existence to meet the necessities of the times; in England alone had there been progressive growth. In Austria, Leopold II., an enlightened Prince, had endeavored to force on a revolution in the relations of church and state, but had failed to carry his people with him, and nothing had been done to reform the social order in which the hereditary, aristocratic principle prevailed.

Spain was stagnant. The wars against France and the migration of the most adventurous spirits to the colonies had drained it of its best blood in the seventeenth century, and the eighteenth was one of absolute torpor.

In Italy stagnation also existed. It had been the battlefield between French and Germans, and national life had not begun to germinate. The old republic and principalities had fallen into decay and torpor.

Russia was still steeped in barbarism. Germany was broken up into electoral principalities, some under bishops and abbots, coining their own money, imposing duties on all goods brought within their own borders and only loosely allied to the central authority, the imperial crown [illegible] In Prussia was the most life showing in other directions than literature.

A vast change has come over the continent and the relative strength of its component countries. France is sinking slowly but surely. Its population is dwindling; its colonies so far from being to it a source of strength are open sores through which its life blood is draining away. Its government hardly obtains respect, how those governed and is regarded as little other than a makeshift.

Spain has sunk to impotence, as revealed by the late war with the United States, and is itself seething with internal disaffection.

Italy with a vigorous population is at present overburdened with taxation and has in its heart a disaffected Papacy longing for its lost lands and fishes which it never can recover.

Of the Latin races the Italian is the only one with which there is a promise of greater things. Italy has ceased to be broken up into principalities and is realising its nationality.

But the most important and significant transformation is in Germany. If the Jesuits be regarded as those who prompted the Franco German war, then they did that for the great Teutonic nation for which it owes them an eternal debt of gratitude. The war fused into one the whole of the population of the "Fatherland" speaking in the German tongue, except Austria and the Tyrol.

Where was a congeries of petty states is now a compact and resolved nation, full of energy, character, and enthusiasm. At present the ambition is to possess colonies, but it lacks the colonising capacity, and its colonies are like those of the French—nests of officials, drawing salaries but not developing the countries where they are.

The Austrian Empire, composed of various nationalities, speaking different tongues, and having their several aspirations, is but a bundle loosely held together by a single hand, and one may expect to see it fall to pieces, the German speaking portion gravitating towards Germany, and Hungary becoming a separate kingdom. As to the future of Bohemia, that no one can predict; it is a field of warring races, which in its strife leaves to the Jew the commerce and manufacture by which money is made and drawn from both hostile factions.

Russia stands, the colossus of the North, on feet of clay. It is impossible that an autocracy such as there exists, reposing on a bureaucracy as its basis, can live through the twentieth century without tremendous convulsions. The Slav people are what were our ancestors, in Anglo-Saxon times, and over them is thrown a veneer of French culture. No nation can rise to greatness unless it has "the seed in itself." It must grow naturally, and you cannot make a child into a man by pulling him out on a rack.

While France has been settling down on its lees and Spain has been going to pieces, while Italy and Germany have acquired their respective national unities, England has been in rapid but steady growth. The empire has enormously expanded, and so also have the wealth and prosperity of England. The unjust laws that weighed on the Roman Catholics have been repealed, free trade has become a necessity of the existence of her teeming multitudes, she has acquired colonies and protectorates, and exhibits what has never been seen before—the protected being educated to be men, after having been slaves; and the colonies encouraged to self-government without losing their attachment to the mother country.

It is sometimes thought that England has touched the acme of her prosperity and is bound to go down hill. But what is it that ruins a nation? It is injustice, want of principle. We have but to look at Egypt, at India, and see whether under our rule we have not taught natives to trust the Englishman as absolutely just, and his word as his bond—and to see how, for example, out of cowardly fellaheen we have created gallant soldiers, to be sure that the mission of England, given by providence as the great elevating, regenerating force in the world, is not exhausted, nor shows any tokens of exhaustion.

We have now the mighty continent of Africa before us, and one can hardly doubt that the twentieth century will see Africa made into a great empire, under British direction, to be in the century that follows what America is in this.

History Shows Centuries' Ends are Marked by Wars.

It has been remarked as the way of the centuries to go out in blood. This was especially true of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and in the present one may see on all sides the disposition of the world's people toward blood. It began with the war with Spain in 1898 and seems unsatisfied so far as it has progressed in China. The whole world is restless, suspicious, and is building and equipping for war as the world never worked before. Just why and when and where a great world war shall be fought belong to the future, but there are those who look for this war while the twentieth century is new.

For fifteen years before the close of the seventeenth century Europe and eastern Asia were warring, and even in the new America there were unrest and apprehension. These years were among the bloodiest in England's history. The insurrections and executions of the reign of James II., the invitation of the common people for William of Orange to come and rule them; William's war on Louis XIV. of France, all were manifestations of a more than local disaffection. In France the persecutions of the Huguenots and in Piedmont the crusade against the Waldenses were leading up to the crisis that began with 1690.

In America the colonies had unseated Governor Edmund Andros. In New York revolution had been startled by Jacob Leisler, for which he was afterward hanged. Pirates had stripped the coast of Peru of its gold stores.

Then, at Beachy Head, the French fleet defeated the English. Catinat, in Savoy, and then Orangemen, at the Boyne, won victories, and in New York the French and Indians destroyed Schenectady. There was war in Ireland, ending at the fall of Limerick, and following it the Principality of Baden whipped the Turks at Salankamen.

In the next few years troubles came to many nations. The English and Dutch fleets met the French fleet and sent it to the bottom. American colonies were disturbed by witches and burned them at the stake. England attacked the French coast and spent a year in the attack.

Then Peter the Great attacked the encroaching Turk at Azof and beat him back with heavy losses. The brief "war of Spanish succession followed. Russia, Poland, and Denmark were combined against Sweden and Peter the Great was defeated at Narva.

America had wrested her independence from the British government before the eighteenth century was near its close, but Europe was in the toils of war, as was Asia. Turkey was at war with Russia and Russia was warring with Sweden. The anti-Orange party in Holland was crushed out by Prussia. George III. of England was in a madhouse and England was in the toils of another revolution. In 1789 this storm of unrest swept the French capital with revolution. The Bastile was stormed on July 14 and the people invaded the palace at Versailles, howling for the blood of Louis.

From that time on until long after the century was ended France was in a turmoil. Austria and Russia combined against Turkey, the Austrian Netherlands were in revolt, England sent out an army to conquer Tippoo Sahib, and the Swedish fleet sent some of the famous vessels of the Russian navy to the bottom.

In 1791 Hayti was led into a revolution by L'Ouverture and threw off the French yoke. In the next year Paris adopted guillotine and the streets were red with the blood of communists. Then almost all of Europe entered into a coalition against France. At Toulon the British were beaten by Napoleon, then a minor officer in the French artillery, and thus the way opened to his military greatness. Kosciusko in 1794 led an uprising against the armies of Russia, Prussia, and Austria, but it was lost in the mightier campaigns of Napoleon, with whose deeds the eighteenth century came to an end, leaving the name of Napoleon in everybody's mouth.

The nineteenth century has been one of the bloodiest of history and it has been going out in a manner typical of all the others. The situation of the United States holding territories that were Spanish in 1898 is suggestive of the trend of the war spirit at this end of the nineteenth century.

In South Africa the Boers have been compelled to give up the unequal struggle with Great Britain, but only after both sides have lost heavily in money and men.

In China men have affected to see the cause of that coming world war which so many men, looking forward, have expected and foretold. The situation is less strained now than it was two months ago, but the war spirit of the world seems to be only sleeping. In the shipyards and arsenals of the civilized-world men are working as they never have worked before turning out arms and armaments. Is the century to go out in a world-war? Only time may prove it. And if it should, that war will have had its numerous prophets.

Acts grow out of thoughts. If a man's thinking is confined to trifling objects, his acts will correspond. So of a religious belief. If a Christian's faith be strong and ardent, a vitality will be imparted to all he does. Pure doctrine, honestly held, begets a pure life; looseness in doctrine is followed by looseness in living, the world over.

Obituary.

David Stella, who has lived in the vicinity of Silver Creek, Ogle County, since moving to Ogle County in 1842, answered the call of the grim reaper on Christmas day, 1900. He was born near Hagerstown, Maryland, March 18, 1823, his age at his death being 77 years, 9 months, 7 days. He leaves six sons and three daughters to mourn the loss of a father.

Brother Stella had been in feeble health for some time and the end was not unexpected. He has made his home with his son William since the death of his wife, eight years ago and everything that could be done to relieve his suffering was done by the faithful ones who watched over him. He united with the church about thirty years ago being baptized by Dr. Samuel Jacobs. We laid him to rest in the Silver Creek Cemetery there to await the summons of our blessed Savior to come forth in resurrection power. Praise be to God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord.

What a comfort to know that after old age and death have done their worst, there is a power of which we may avail ourselves that will finally overcome both and give our loved ones back to us. To the sorrowing friends I can but say that faithful obedience to the commandments of God is necessary to all who wish to clothe themselves with this power. The writer spoke of the assurance of God's power, taking for a lesson a part of the 11th chapter of John and also part of the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

Also the remainder of the edition of Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association, by A. H. Zilmer, is in the hands of this committee. About 70 copies only remain, at 5 cents each.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

B. Kelroy,
G. P. Allard.

We have a few copies of the book called "The Scriptures Opened; or Thoughts and Themes for Bible Students" by Robert Ashcroft. It is a work that has passed the scrutiny of such of our brethren as Benjamin Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Wilson, J. F. Wagoner, A. J. Eychaner and others. It contains 370 pages, strongly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering on the back and side. It formerly sold for $1.25, but we offer the few we have on hand at 75 c. each post paid.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

Brother Underwood;

Will you please say to the brethren and friends, that we still have on hand a fair supply of our little four-page tract, entitled "Sirs, What must I do to be saved?" and that a request with a penny for postage will bring them to your address. Yes, please send your name, request and address, and they will hasten to your home penny or no penny.

T. E. Adams.

To the brethren in Ontario and the Eastern States:

I will make engagements any where within a reasonable distance of Toronto to preach on Sunday, also on Saturday and Monday, if thought desirable. The brethren are working earnestly in the West, let us do what we can in the East in his name.

Address, 42 Gloucester St., Toronto, Canada.

I wish to enter into active work at an early date. Any that want my labor during the year will please notify me without delay.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

This book is so well known that it is only necessary to announce that it is for sale, to insure a market for it. We have undertaken to dispose of these books for the Widow of our lamented Brother Jones, and while getting them at this low price, you at the same time will help Sister Jones to much-needed money.

Change of Location.

The friends will please make a note of the change of address of Brother J. S. Hatch. He has moved from this state to Tustin, Orange Co. California where letters should be addressed. We commend our Bro. Hatch to the brethren on the Pacific Coast, and add if any desire his labors in the gospel field he is ready to answer calls.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money set loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

An Appeal to the Brotherhood of the Church of God.

THE RESTITUTION is a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Church of God, and we ask you to kindly read the following lines, and consider our mutual interests.

This paper gives you all the Church news, announcements of meetings and reports of them when held.

It gives notices of deaths of members in all parts of the country.

It gives exegetical articles that are of great valve to the student.

It gives articles on prophecy and all the news that bears on the fulfillment of the future part of God's word.

It contains articles that set forth the nature of mankind, and the Hope he has for any thing hereafter.

It sets forth the Gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Christ and his Apostles, and insists that this Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things that concern the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, are what constitute the power of God unto salvation to him that believeth it.

It goes further, and insists that a holy life consistent with the high profession made, is just as necessary as belief—i. e. that Faith is well, and Works are well, and necessary both of them. That Sincerity alone will never save of itself.

It advocates the restoration of literal Israel to their own land as the only consistent way of fulfilling the promises made to the fathers.

It contains articles that show the necessity for a resurrection of the dead as the only means of attaining the blessings promised the faithful.

It gives articles showing that the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus the Christ must be just as literal as his first coming or his going away was; and that the saints have no hope of reward until that event; thus making that the most important of all the important events that will occur.

This paper urges all these matters, and many others of like nature, including immersion as the only mode of baptism, and at a cost of but $1.50 per year, about three cents a week. It contains more reading matter than 14 books that usually sell for $1.00 each, and is the very best means you can have of keeping posted as to the workings of the Church and the world as relating to prophetic doings.

It is not sensational, and is not controversial in the sense that it wishes to discuss matters that are of secondary importance, when there is so much that is of prime importance to lay before our readers.

It holds that personal attacks by brethren upon others is out of place, and only tends to work harm in place of good, and urges always the settlement of differences by private means.

UNREST.

As back of the song is the singer,
As back of the harp is the tone,
So back of the smile of is sorrow,
And hearts are forever alone.

We reach out our arms in our longing,
But empty they fall at the side;
We call and we listen for answers,
Yet still in the silence abide.

Is it God, with his message, I wonder?
Is it time with it knell of the end?
Is it life, is it death, or the mingling
Lest something that causes back to rend.

Well, close on the coffin have covered
All we put that is dreamless, we know,
And after the midnight is morning,
And after the sunset the glow.

And out of the Now is the Yonder;
And out of unrest is the rest:
And reaching the Star, does it matter
How far was the way from the west?

Opening of the Seals. Rev. vi.

The Lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, having prevailed, proceeds to open the seals. And John says, I heard as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see. In order to understand the import of the lesson taught by the opening of the seals, we must have a knowledge of what is symbolized by the four living creatures. R. V. Also in the first chapter of Ezekiel they are called living creatures, and are evidently symbols of the divine government. See Ezekiel x. 20. This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river Chebar: and I knew that they were the Cherubim. The first chapter of Ezekiel is devoted to a description of the four living creatures, and they went every one straight forward; whither the Spirit was to go, they went; and they turned not when they went." verse 12. Being the representatives of him with whom there is no variableness, nor shadow of turning. And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning. ver. 14. And in the last verse of the chapter it is said, "This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord."

Their connection with the wheels in the vision of Ezekiel, is evidence that they are symbols of the divine government; the wheels form a circle, without a beginning or an end, and are a symbol of eternity. As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful. ver. 18. And their rings were full of eyes. The four living creatures seen by John in the revelation had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within, and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. Rev. iv. 8. Similar language is attributed to them in Isa. vi. 3. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. Things animate and inanimate praise him. How beautiful this truth is expressed in the 19th Psalm. The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handy work. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun, which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race. Again the Psalmist says, Praise ye him, sun and moon, praise him all ye stars of light. Praise him all ye heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens. Psa. cxlviii. 3-4. Let the heavens and earth praise him, the sea, and every thing that moveth therein. Psa. lxix. 34.

"Praise the God of our salvation;
Hosts on high, his powers proclaim;
Heaven and earth, and all creation,
Laud and magnify his name."

Having an understanding of the symbolism of the four living creatures, we can now see the propriety of the voice like thunder, of one of the four living creatures, saying, come and see. We recognize the voice of God by his works of creation, by the sun in the heaven, the moon, and the stars that give light on the earth: by all his works of creation, he invites us to come and see his revealment of the future. First, a white horse. Second, a rider with a bow. Third, a crown given the rider. Fourth, his going forth conquering, and to conquer.

It is now our province to find the meaning of the symbols, and to point to their fulfilment on the pages of the history of the world, as far as they have been fulfilled. This work is easily performed that relates to the first seal, because it has such a marked beginning and ending; and because the chronology of its events are plainly indicated in the revelation itself.

In proof of this, I refer to the first chapter and first verse of the Revelation where it is written, to show unto his servants things that must shortly come to pass. And again in verse three, for the time is at hand. Now, what do we understand to be symbolized by a white horse; fortunately we have an explanation in chapter 19 in relation to the rider of the white horse, and that is that, in righteousness he doth judge and make war. And in this same 19th chapter it is written concerning the bride, the Lamb's wife. ver. 8, And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. Therefore, white symbolizes righteousness, but where and when shall we find the fulfilment of this symbol? The key is found in Zech. vi. 2-6.

In the first chariot were red horses; and in the second chariot black horses; and in the third chariot white horses; and in the fourth chariot grizzled and bay horses. Then I answered and said unto the angel that talked with me, what are these my lord? And the angel answered and said unto me, These are the four spirits of the heavens, which go forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth. This is positive evidence that the color of the horse indicates the spirit manifested by the rider and his associates in the heaven, or in literal language, those who administer the government in empires or kingdoms. It is the testimony of most writers, that the date of the Revelation is about A. D. 96 of the Christian era. Therefore according to the testimony of the Revelation itself, we should look for the events of the first seal to commence in the immediate future, from the time John received the revelation.

A few extracts from Gibbon the historian, will be sufficient to prove beyond a reasonable doubt, the time of fulfilment of this symbolic prophecy. The testimony of Mr. Gibbon is of the highest order, because he being skeptical as to the truth of the Christian religion; that fact makes testimony of the highest order; he wrote without the faintest idea of the events that he narrated being used to prove the truth of the Christian Scriptures. The testimony of Mr. Mosheim in his church history agrees with that of Mr. Gibbon, as to the events of the period assigned to the first seal. I will now give two extracts from Mr. Gibbon to prove the fulfilment of the symbols of the first seal; the servants of the Deity being in the Roman empire, that is the place to find the fulfilment, because the prophecy was given to show unto his servants, things that must shortly come to pass. Rev. i. 1.

When reading the following extracts remember that the events prophecied, was to commence to be fulfilled shortly after the giving of the Revelation, that is after A. D. 96. Mr. Gibbon commences his history thus, In the second century of the Christian era, the empire of Rome comprehended the fairest part of the earth, and the most civilized portion of mankind. The frontiers of that extensive monarchy were guarded by ancient renown and disciplined valor. The gentle but powerful influence of laws and manners had gradually cemented the union of the provinces. Their peaceful inhabitants enjoyed and abused the advantages of wealth and luxury. The image of a free constitution was preserved with decent reverence; the Roman senate appeared to possess the sovereign authority, and devolved on the emperors all the executive powers of government. During a happy period of more than four score years, the public administration was conducted by the virtue and abilities of Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian, and the two Antonines. It is the design of this, and the two succeeding chapters, to describe the prosperous condition of the empire; and afterwards from the death of Marcus Antoninus, to deduce the most important circumstances of its decline and fall; a revolution which will ever be remembered, and is still felt by the nations of the earth. Vol. I. p. 1. This revolution spoken of by Mr. Gibbon, constitutes the change from the righteousness and virtue, enthroned in the Roman empire during the combined reign of Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian and the two Antonines. This period commencing with the accession of Nerva A. D. 98, and continued until the death of Marcus Antonius A. D. 180 in which period there is an exact fulfilment of all the symbols of the first seal.

One more extract from the history of the decline and fall of the Roman empire will be sufficient to identify the period symbolized by the white horse. If a man were called to fix the period in the history of the world, during which the condition of the human race was most happy and prosperous, he would, without hesitation, name that which elapsed from the death of Domitian to the accession of Commodus. The vast extent of the Roman empire was governed by absolute power, under the guidance of virtue and wisdom. The armies were restrained by the firm but gentle hand of four successive emperors, whose characters and authority commanded involuntary respect. The forms of the civil administration were carefully preserved by Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian, and the two Antonines, who delighted in the image of liberty, and were pleased to consider themselves as the accountable ministers of the laws. Such princes deserved the honor of restoring the republic, had the Romans of their days been capable of enjoying a rational freedom. Gibbon Vol. I. p. 95-96.

The bow as a symbol of the first seal indicates that there would be war, even in the period of righteousness, symbolized by the white horse. Another extract from the history of the period will show the application of the bow. The first exploits of Trajan were against the Dacians, the most war like of men, who dwelt beyond the Danube, and who, during the reign of Domitian, had insulted, with impunity, the Majesty of Rome.....This memorable war, with a very short suspension of hostilities, lasted five years.....It was terminated by an absolute submission of the barbarians. The new province of Dacia, which formed a second exception to the precept of Augustus, was about thirteen hundred miles in circumference. Gibbon Vol. I. p. 6. Thus we see that the bow was used against the Dacians; and that a crown was given to the rider—the crown of Dacia. It is also said, And he went forth conquering and to conquer. Again we read, He (Trajan) descended the river Tigris in triumph, from the mountains of Armenia to the Persian Gulf. He enjoyed the honor of being the first, as he was the last of the Roman generals who ever navigated that remote sea. His fleets ravaged the coasts of Arabia; and Trajan vainly flattered himself that he was approaching towards the confines of India. Every day the astonished senate received the intelligence of new names and new nations, that acknowledged his sway. They were informed that the kings of Bosphorus, Colchos, Iberia, Albania, Osrhoene, and even of the Parthian monarch himself, had accepted their diadems from the hands of the emperor. Gibbon Vol. I. p. 7. In the application of the symbols to the events recorded by the historian, the one making the application needs no axe nor hammer, the symbols and the events fit each other so easy and natural. Nothing but divine wisdom can penetrate the darkness of the future, and reveal minutely its secrets, as we find them revealed by the opening of the seals. What positive evidence of the divine inspiration of the holy Scriptures?

Dear Restitution:

The closing of another year finds us still waiting for the return of our blessed Lord. We all have the same hope and are working toward the same end. My hearts desire is that we may all be kept true to the Captain until the battles are won, and that each dear one be made stronger and more able to endure to the end, keeping that which has been committed to our trust.

Your Sister in Christ.

MRS. F. W. CHAPIN.

Dear Restitution:

I was born in 1842, joined the Baptists and was baptized at the age of 15. I believed in the immortality of the soul, a sky-kingdom and the everlasting punishment of the wicked. I now take God at his Word and believe that when he said that man should die, he meant what he said, and when the Master said that he would return, he meant it, and I am looking for his return, and am waiting for a chance to be baptized again in that blessed hope. I sometimes fear that I will not have the opportunity until it will be too late, for we surely are living in the parable of the ten virgins when they all slumbered and slept, and I might be classed with the five foolish virgins.

J. M. TINDALL.

Dear Restitution:

I would miss the weekly visits of the dear paper very much if I could not have it. It grows more dear to me each year of my life and I hope we will never have to do without it as it is so full of good encouragement to those of the household of faith. I can say to the dear brothers and sisters that the blessed Master grows more precious to me and mine and I do want to love him more each day of my life, that when he comes I may be one of that happy number that shall hear the "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord." Do not look back to the world dear brothers and sisters, but let us put on the whole armor of God that we may be able to stand. "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts in that day when I make up my jewels."

Wishing you all a Happy New Year I will close. Your Sister in the one faith.

MRS. SUSIE DOW.

Editor Restitution:

Thanks to all the dear brethren and sisters for the many kind words of encouragement contained in the pages of the paper through the past year. May we all do a little more the coming year to build each other up in the blessed hope. Everything seems to be shaping up for the coming of our blessed Master. May we all be ready. We are still doing a little in trying to hold forth the Word of truth. We have a fair hearing, with some interest. Expect to begin a meeting next Sunday evening at our School House to continue each evening for a week. We had expected to try to get some preaching brother to come and hold a series of meetings this winter, but we had a hail storm on June 10th, that destroyed about everything in the way of crops, so we will have to wait for the present.

Wishing all a Happy New Year. I am as ever your unworthy brother.

J. F. PIERSON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you all. We are so thankful that we can enjoy a social talk with those of like precious faith, through the columns of our much loved paper. Another year has gone with its trials and joys, and we are still looking for our blessed Lord to come back to earth to take the kingdom and dominion under the whole heavens and to reward his faithful ones. Let us be more faithful and zealous in the work of our Master in the year to come, "Not weary in well-doing, for in due time we shall reap if we faint not." "And unto them that look for him will he appear the second time without sin unto salvation," and give power over the nations. Let us work harder than ever to obtain the crown of immortal glory.

Yours, waiting for the King in his beauty.

JOHN & MARY ALLARD.

Editor Restitution:

Our little Ecclesia here in Springfield, Ohio, holds its own, and occasionally we are able to open the minds of some to the light of the glorious gospel. We have a very comfortable hall in the centre of the city, where every first day at 10:30 we meet to hear from the words of truth, and break bread. Thus we are watching and waiting for the return of the absent One that will come to make sure the covenants of promise with Israel.

Wishing THE RESTITUTION family a Happy New Year, I am as ever yours in the one hope.

Conference Report.

Another Michigan Conference gathering has made up its record, and we can but feel that God is well pleased with the work. The church at Millbrook, always alive and at work, (with here and there a few dark days, for trial perhaps) began the meeting on Thursday evening. Sister Chaffee of Grand Rapids was already there to receive and give good, and Friday morning found her leading a prayer meeting, filled with offerings of praise herself, and giving to all, the sad but helpful experiences of her life. When my husband and I reached there Friday noon the meeting was well begun, and at 2:30 I gave a practical talk from Psa. cxix. 116. Social meeting in the evening, then a sermon by Elder Woodward; he was still pale and weak from a recent illness, but forgot the infirmities of the flesh in the interest of better things.

Saturday morning Sister Chaffee led the prayer service which was enjoyed by all present. Bros. C. Winchester and F. L. Austin having arrived, enjoyed it heartily, and it prepared the way for a grand sermon from Bro. Austin an hour later. At 2:30 Elder Woodward spoke, and after a very profitable social meeting in the evening, Bro. Austin gave another very interesting sermon.

Sunday at 9:30 Sister Chaffee led the prayer service, opening with that very practical chapter of Rom. xii. The first and leading thought from all was "Be not conformed to this world" and resulted in confessing weakness on the part of several, and a determination on their part to cut down and sort out of their lives these offensive things, not conforming to them, but rather having our lives transformed by the renewing of our minds, thereby glorifying God and being better prepared for his service. May God help us all to keep those good resolves. After this service Bro. Austin gave a very instructive sermon on the Church, and all listened with rapt attention as point after point was brought out, in the growth of the infant church, from its begettal and birth to its final full growth as the body of Christ in its perfect state. After dinner Sister Woodward had an interesting hour with the young people. Then we listened to some good thoughts from Bro. Winchester from 1 Cor. vi. 3. The evening social meeting led by Bro. Woodward, then another sermon from Bro. Austin on Restitution. So vividly did he portray the past, present and future, one could almost imagine themselves past all this heartache and disappointed life into the era of God-given joy and gladness at its close. The good by hand shake was given Bros. Winchester and Austin, while all sung "God be with you till we meet again." The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was partaken of at the close of morning services. The church did nobly, raising over $45.00 to defray expenses. We believe all felt well paid for the effort made. B. W. Woodward acted as President in the absence of both president and vice president. We were sorry too that through the very feeble condition of Bro. Hoyt our secretary, Sister Jackman, could not be present. A nice letter from Bro. O. R. L. Crozier was read by Sister Woodward. They were especially pleased at Millbrook to hear from dear Bro Crozier, as he was with them as teacher and pastor for several years.

M. A. WOODWARD, Sec. pro tem.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel: the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Civility is the lowest price we pay for things, and repentance is the highest.

"Be not rashly exceptious, nor rudely familiar, the one breeds contention, the other contempt."

"Be timely wise, rather than wise in time; after-wisdom is ever accompanied with tormenting wishes."

He will come to understand who knocks by prayer, not he who by quarreling, makes a noise at the gate of truth.

"Solon being asked why, amongst his personal laws, there was not one against personal affronts? Answered: He could not believe the world so fantastical as to regard them."

"One thing pride has which no other vice that I know of has," says Feltham, "It is an enemy to itself; and a proud man cannot endure to see pride in another."

The aged oak upon the hill stands more firm and secure if assailed by angry winds. For if the winter bares its head, the more strongly it strikes its roots into the ground, acquiring strength as it loses beauty.

"Every event in this world is a syllable breaking from the lips of God. Every epoch in affairs is a completed sentence of his thought; and the great stream of human history is God's endless revelation of himself."

A deal is on foot for England to exchange Cyprus to Germany for German East Africa. Should this be accomplished and with the Boer war settled, England would be in possession of an unbroken line from Cairo to the Cape.

"Vice grows upon men in the name of virtue; covetousness is called frugality; and prodigality takes the name of bounty; pride calls itself neatness; revenge assumes to be greatness of spirit; and cruelty exercises its bitterness under the name of courage."

Mrs. Dr. L. Hicklin of Luther, Okla., says she cannot answer letters of inquiry regarding that country unless correspondents inclose stamp for reply. Letter writers should always bear in mind that when an inquiry is made requiring an answer, and it is of benefit only to the one sending, a stamp should be enclosed for reply.

Were we content to do one thing thoroughly, and in the best manner, and to let that one thing be just that which we can do best, we should attain to a simplicity in our labor which would relieve our tired nerves and replace the jaded look that we so often carry, with a serene and cheerful expression.

"If you are provident enough to foresee danger, let your prudence rather prevent it than fear it. The fear of future evil often brings present mischief. While you seek to prevent it, practice to bear it. He is a wise man who can avoid an evil; he is a patient man that can endure it; but he is a valiant man that can conquer it."

"The heavens and earth which are now." 2 Pet. iii. 7. It was the same material heavens and earth which existed in the days of Noah; but Peter speaks of a heavens and earth which did not exist in Noah's day; therefore it is not the material heavens and earth which Peter speaks of as to be destroyed. The Apostle says, literally, the then, (tote) world, with water overflowed, perished, but the present (nun now) heavens and the earth, etc."

A new complication comes to the ministers in China who thought a settlement was so near. Russia is to act alone, and deal with the Chinese representative at St. Petersburg. This is simply a withdrawal from the allies in Pekin, and again breaks the concert of the powers. Further, after notifying Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching to sign the preliminary note of the powers, the Empress Downger listens to others and issues a decree ordering them not to sign it, as she objects to some points. The outlook is not bright for peace in that direction.

It is easier to give counsel than to take it; wise men think they do not need it, and fools will not take it.

Aspinall says "Ignorance is easily misled. Untaught men and unreasoning men are always unreasonable."

It is a mother's prerogative, not merely to teach virtue, but to inspire it. What she wishes us to be, she begins by making us love, and love begets unconscious imitation."

"In your discourse, t the heed what you speak: to whom you speak: how you speak; when you speak and what you speak. Speak truly when you speak. A fool's heart is in his tongue, but a wise man's tongue is in his heart."

"In the depths of the sea the waters are still; the heaviest sorrow is that borne in silence; the deepest love flows through the eye and the touch; the purest joy is unspeakable; the most impressive prayer is silent; and the most solemn preacher at a funeral is the silent one whose lips are cold."

"A firm and gentle friendship is a great felicity. It sweetens our sorrows and assists us in extremities. A true friend is not born every day. It is best to be courteous to all, intimate with few; for though perhaps we may have joy, we shall have less occasion for sorrow."

Young men may die, old men must die, even though they have ensured their lives with Jesus, if he tarry much longer; but if they maintain their confidence to the end of this trial state, they will live again because he lives. They will hear his voice and come forth, and like him die no more.

"The ancient granaries of Palestine were caves in the limestone rock, entered by an aperture in the ground, carefully concealed by a stone covered with turf or brushwood to guard the grain from Arab depredators. Judges vi. 15. Such subterranean caves may still be seen in use on the hill of Jezreel."

Roger Bacon declared that the four grounds of human ignorance were:—"Trust in inadequate authority; the force of custom; the opinion of the inexperienced crowd; and the hiding of one's own ignorance with the parading of a superficial wisdom." Although this was written in the thirteenth century, it remains every word true at the close of the nineteenth.

"The great law of mutual benevolence is, perhaps oftener violated by envy than interest. Interest requires some qualities not universally bestowed. Interest is seldom pursued but at some risk; but to spread suspicion,—to invent calumnies, to propagate scandal requires neither talents nor labor, nor courage. Other passions have other effects to flatter them, and seemingly to content and satisfy them for awhile. There is power in ambition, and pleasure in luxury, and pelf in covetousness,—but envy can give nothing but vexation."

The trouble in France is growing and may not be long in coming to a head, considering the French nature. With the clericals have sided many who are opposed to the Republican government, and should the contemplated steps be taken against the Catholic religious societies it may result in a revolution of large proportions. The nations are beginning the new century in bad condition to meet the desires of the peace criers of the time. The white-winged dove is driven away by the war-eagle in search of his prey. Watch, brethren and sisters, for when the world is ripe for change the change will come—in the appearance of Jesus Christ, our Lord and King.

In the 15th of John, and the 20th verse we read: "A servant is not greater than his lord; if they persecuted me they will also persecute you; if they keep my words, they will keep yours also." A brother suggests that the words "kept" and "keep" seem incongruous in the connection in which they occur in the Authorized version. The word so rendered is tereo, to watch, and is here appropriately used of the watch which was set upon Christ's words—if haply they might find him tripping—and which, inasmuch as "the servant is not above his Master," would be the experience of his disciples also. Such an interpretation seems more in keeping with the context and the simple meaning of the word."

"Some things can scarcely be done except by concert of effort. One man cannot raise a barn. If he has good sense he will not lift much at the timbers till others come to take hold with him. But ceasing from sin is not a thing of this class. Sectarianism is sin."

A study of the industries of the world, and the taxing power of the nations, shows Europe in a very bad condition. It is well known that for some years it has been a race to keep up with England in her increases to naval expenditure, and Germany, France, Russia, Italy to say nothing of Spain, are each striving to excell. This is only one branch of the war budget of these nations, and other departments have kept pace, so that if ten years ago the people were overburdened by excessive taxation, it is plain to be seen that now they must be in despair. No relief is in sight. On top of this comes the stagnation in trade in many branches, owing to the famine in India, the Chinese trouble, and the South African war. These countries have taken no goods for the past year in the usual avenues, hence over production has stagnated the markets. Besides this, Europe has depended on English coal largely, and that has risen in price so much as to render its use all but prohibitive. Disaster stares manufacturers in the face in both cotton and woolen textiles in England and on the Continent it is no better. Were these nations alone in the world a change of policy might avert the impending danger, but with the United States in the field as a merciless competitor for commerce, with its inventive genius, energy, vast iron and steel industries, and cheap coal, besides our increasing money value, the older nations must even meet lower prices than formerly. With their increased cost of production, and higher taxes, this is impossible, and a crisis is before them. This is as important a "sign of the times" as war in any part of the world can be, and students will not fail to note its portent just now.

Power of Sympathy.

Jeremy Taylor well said that every man rejoices twice when he has a partner of his joy; a friend shares my sorrow and makes it but a moiety, but he swells my joy and makes it double. For so two channels divide the river, and lessen it into rivulets, and make it fordable, and apt to be drunk up by the first revels of the Sirian star; but two torches do not divide but increase the flame. And though my tears are the sooner dried up, when they run on my friend's cheek in the furrows of compassion, yet when my flame has kindled his lamp, we unite the glories and make them radiant, like the golden candlesticks that burn before the throne of God, because they shine by numbers, by unions, and confederations of light and joy."

Meddling.

David said, "Lord, my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty: neither do I exercise myself in great matters or things too high for me." This was a wise course. How many young and ignorant people pursue an opposite course, undertake to understand all mysteries, explain all doubts, pass judgments upon those around them, and so dishonor the Lord, distract the church, obscure the gospel, and bring shame to themselves, and trouble to others.

Some, too ignorant, wilful and impudent to be confided in, speak evil of things they know not of, pry into matters which do not concern them, mind everybody's business but their own, criticise, listen to gossip, and repeat scandal; and after sowing discord, "fire-brands, arrows and death," all around, find at last that they have been ignorant, hasty, mistaken, and wrong in their judgment, have meddled with things too high for them, and have brought sorrow and difficulty for themselves and others which they can never entirely remove.

When chastisement and trouble comes upon them, then they think of these things, and remember their hasty judgments and unkind remarks; but being sorry does not heal the wound, —expressing regret does not undo the mischief, and asking forgiveness even, does not restore matters to their former condition, nor them to the position they forfeited by their rash sinful judgments and hasty words.

Ah, it is better to be lowly; to watch our own ways; to keep our tongue as with a bridle; to judge nothing before the time; to avoid meddling and overseeing; remembering whoso keepeth his mouth and tongue keepeth his soul from troubles."—H. L. Hastings.

Before and After.

Shakespeare defines man as a being "looking before and after." It really forms the chief distinction between man and the rest of the animal creation; and, indeed, there can be no true manhood without it. To be morally free—to be more than animal—man must be able to resist instinctive or natural impulses, and this can only be done by the exercise of self-control. This is the power which constitutes the real distinction between a physical and a moral life, and that forms the basis of individual character." The habit of self-control is but the accumulation of continued acts of self-denial; it is but the repeated authority of the reason over the impulses,—of the judgment over the inclinations,—of the sense of duty over the desire."

Joy and Fear.

The following is what Luther said about joy and fear:—

"David says, 'Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice before him with trembling.' Let some one make this rhyme for me:—'To be joyful and to fear.' My little son Hans can do it to me, but I cannot do it with God. For when I sit and write and do anything, he sings a little song to me the while, —and if he makes it too loud, and I tell him so, then he still sings on, but makes it softer, crooning it on with a sweet little subdued voice shyly watching me all the while. So would God have it with us; that we should be always rejoicing, yet with fear and reverence toward him."

Church Combination.

"A church universal was suggested as 'Christianity's greeting to the twentieth century' at the union meeting of ministers yesterday in the First Methodist Church. The Rev. Charles J. Little of Garrett Biblical Institute, who came near being made a Bishop of the Methodist Church last May, and the Rev. H. S. Jenkinson of the Seventh Presbyterian Church united in proposing a great united church as the achievement that invites the Christian religion in this century.

'The Christian churches must combine,' says Dr. Little. 'That is the twentieth century message of Christianity.'

Dr. Little said also that the church no longer had a quarrel with science, but he asked scientists not to put fiction in place of facts.

The Rev. Mr. Jenkinson pleaded with the ministers of different denominations to forget the distinctions of Wesley and Calvin.

'We must meet the dawn of the twentieth century,' he said, 'with a united and universal church. We stand today uncertain of the future but sure of God. I see the spiritual barometer in the centers of poverty and vice going down with perilous rapidity. We must not pull apart. Our hope is in prayer and devotion and an indivisible Christianity.'"

The above is clipped from the Chicago Tribune of Jan. 8. The tendency of the times is to "Combination." Alliances—combinations—of nations, of certain lines of industries, of railroad lines, for producing goods, transporting them, and even regulating the prices on all manners of articles, and the wages paid to the producer is told by the "combine." With this "spirit in the air" it is not strange that it should spread to religious circles, and so we have seen in the past few years a tendency toward this point in the "union" meetings held by so-called "Evangelical" churches, the "minister's meetings" where ways and means are discussed for "pushing forward the kingdom of God," and such like work. All this has its legitimate outcome in this new century proposition to "forget the distinction of Wesley and Calvin," and enter this Church "combine." We think of all the "trusts" that have been formed this proposed "religious trust" is among the most sensible of all. Why should they not unite? They each believe the same doctrines that are contrary to the Bible, such as immortality of man, a sky-kingdom at death, a kingdom already set up, heaven as their future home, the trinity, etc. On all the cardinal principles they are alike, and it would seem to be in order that they could shuffle off the little difference in church government and unite. However, this may not be so easy of consummation when we consider the report of the Methodist Church for the past century, and see its boasted growth. At the beginning of the 19th Century they had 187 ministers and 64,921 members in the United States. Now they have 30,000 ministers and 2,929,000 members. But while this has been accomplished in the past century, they have had 16 separate Methodist Churches branch off the main stock, and they together report 36,424 ministers and 5,085,848 members, all having the same tenets, and varying but little on any points. With this experience before them it looks like a century's work to unite and cement all these together, let alone doing the vast work they have mapped out as their task, which proposes to add 2,000,000 converts to their numbers and raise $20,000,000 the first year of the new century.

But what of all this? What is it all for? This "Rev." Mr. Jenkinson says "We stand today uncertain of the future, but sure of God." Quite an admission indeed for one who professes to be a Bible student and a man capable of teaching the way of salvation to a part of this proposed 2,000,000 converts. He is "uncertain of the future." In other words he is totally ignorant of the plan of God for the future. He says he is "sure of God." Well, so much for him; but what makes him sure of God and uncertain of all else? The God he professes to be sure of is the same who has told us of the future, and if this "Reverend" would be capable of teaching others he must first enter the school and be taught himself. Fancy a school board employing an instructor for the pupils of their school who admitted he knew nothing of the branches to be taught. Yet such is the condition of not only this man, but all the rest of the thousands of ministers who are leading the millions of members of these denominations. They admit an ignorance of the future, yet go blindly on asking their followers to stumble on and "trust to a loving Father" to do right by them. Truly it is "blind leaders of the blind," and "both will fall into the ditch."

"The People, the Land, and the Book," is the title of a new quarterly magazine published and edited by B. A. M. Schapiro who was for a number of years Supt. of the Brooklyn Christian Mission to the Jews. The work is well gotten up and will be of great benefit to Hebraists and to all scholars and Bible students. Of course the intent is to present Christianity to the Hebrews of the day, and for this reason should be encouraged and maintained because ordinary newspapers cannot do this work. May it have a generous support. Price $1.00 a year, single copies 25 cents. 436 Carlton Ave. Brooklyn, N. Y.

The year 1900 was a holy year according to the Pope of Rome, and was marked by extra pilgrimages of the faithful to the holy city. By special order the time is extended for six months longer, and so the delegations are still visiting the Vatican. At a reception to pilgrims on Jan. 8. about 800 being in the party and headed by the English Duke of Norfolk who read an address in English the following words were uttered: "We pray and trust that the new century may witness the restoration of the Roman Pontiff to that position of temporal independence which your Holiness declared was necessary for the effective fulfillment of the duties of your world wide charge." The Pope replied deploring the situation in which he was placed and thanking the company for protesting against the present state of things. Very naturally this has caused excitement in Italy, as the Duke of Norfolk is a representative man of England, and as England and Italy are closely related if not actually allied, and the carrying out of this wish would only result in the destruction of the kingdom. Extra police precautions were taken to prevent an out-break at the hotel where the pilgrims were staying.

Hope.

Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom also we have access by faith into this grace, wherein we stand and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. And not only so but we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulations worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience hope: and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us. For whatsoever things were written afore time were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith, for the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the Word of the truth of the gospel, and if ye continue in faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven. Our Lord Jesus Christ himself and God even our Father which hath loved us and given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, and being justified by his grace we should be made heirs according to the eternal life, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast, and we are admonished to sanctify the Lord God in our hearts and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh us a reason of the hope that is in us with meekness and fear, and our lives must be rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

As those living at the close of the first century, on January 1, 101, looked back upon a full hundred years called the first century, and looked forward to a full hundred years called the second century, into which they had just entered, and which would continue until Dec. 31, A. D. 200, so we, on Jan. 1, 1901, look back upon nineteen completed centuries, and look forward into the twentieth, upon which we have just entered.

Few, if any, who read these words ever saw a new century born, and it occurs to us that as the Lord's people, daily and weekly and yearly, turn leaves of experience and repeatedly start afresh in their endeavors to copy the great character-pattern set before us by our heavenly Father in Jesus, so, too, we may specially profit by the thought that a new century has dawned, to encourage ourselves in fresh resolves to be and to do more than ever as would be pleasing and acceptable in the sight of our Lord. What more appropriate sentiments could we have than these! How could we hope better to please him who has called us out of darkness into his marvelous light, him who has lifted our feet out of the horrible pit and the miry clay, and set them upon the rock Christ Jesus, and established our goings, and shown unto us the path of life, and made us full of joy with the light of his countenance! The Lord's own expression on the subject is, "If ye love me keep my commandments;" and the Apostle, in the same strain, assures us that we are acceptable children of God if we do those things which please him, and do not find them grievous—if we do them gladly and of a willing heart—rejoicing both to know and to do the good pleasure of our God.—Watch Tower.

Thoughts in Old Age.

Days of my youth! ye have glided away
Hairs of my youth! ye are frosted and gray;
Eyes of my youth! your keen sight is no more;
Cheek of my youth! you are furrowed all o'er;
Strength of my youth! all your vigor is gone;
Thoughts of my youth! your gay visions are flown.

Days of my youth! I wish not your tears;
Hairs of my youth! I'm content you should fall.
Eyes of my youth! ye much evil have seen;
Cheeks of my youth! bathed in tears have ye been;
Thoughts of my youth! ye have led me astray;
Strength of my youth! why lament your decay,

Days of my age! ye will shortly be past;
Pains of my age! but a while can ye last;
Joys of my age! in true wisdom delight
Eyes of my age! be religion your light;
Thoughts of my age! dread not the cold tomb;
Hopes of my age! be fixed on your God.

Israel as a Nation. No. 4.

The fact of Israel's restoration to the land promised to our fathers is clearly and abundantly set forth on the pages of the prophets; and yet there are expositors of no ordinary talent who deem it a bounden duty to decry the doctrine as a dangerous heresy, hurtful to the well being of the church and calculated to destroy the piety and prayerfulness of all who embrace it. And further that it encourages the sinner in his course of conduct: for say they, "If Judah and Israel and other nations are to exist in the flesh beyond the epoch of our Lord's return to earth will not this be the same as offering a premium on sin?" Now, I must confess that I cannot see it in that light. Though nations in the flesh (the mortal state) will exist in the age to come, open and avowed sinners will be destroyed from among the people. All objections ought to vanish in the light of the plainly revealed fact. The expositor's judgment of the fitness of things is not the criterion by which to settle this question. What God in his wisdom has seen fit to reveal we are to accept, humbly and in childlike simplicity. Men's judgment of what ought to be at different stages of his unfolding plan is not always in agreement. Take two expositors of this class; both alike hold in contempt the idea of national restoration and salvation of Israel in the flesh; but touching the fact of the existence of animals in the kingdom they differ. One says beasts in the kingdom. Bosh, its all in your eye; and another, as in an article before me in Berean Quarterly advocates the restoration of animals to their primitive condition and habits. Beasts in the kingdom is a notion altogether to his liking. Elder H. would not and could not enjoy the companionship of animals in the world to come. He thought them as much out of place as an elephant in a china shop; while Elder T. would regard them as nice pets for immortal children to lead about, and play with. These two men H. and T. wrote 25 years apart. Since the former wrote there has been some change. Now, if animals may exist in the kingdom and a little child (boy Delitzh) be there to lead them and a suckling child play on the hole of the asp and a weaned child put his hand on the cockatrice' den, why may not Israel in the flesh be there? Who can reasonably object? If the one proposition is believed on the ground of a passage or two, why may not the other be believed on the far more abundant proof?

The mention of the "suckling child" and the "weaned child" is presumptive proof of the existence of Judah and Israel in the flesh or mortal state, from whom shall spring the boys that shall lead the lions and do other wonderful things. This accords well with the whole tenor of his prophecy. Isa. xl. The fact that God's chosen people are mentioned as Judah and Israel in this connection and further distinguished by what is affirmed of each house or family is proof that the church composed of immortals is not the subject of the prophecy. The church was never so divided and distinguished. And again, at the time to which the prophecy refers, when God shall assemble the outcasts of Israel and gather the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth, an ensign for the nations will be set up. This shows the existence of other peoples in the flesh besides Judah and Israel. This fact is at variance with the theory of a universal conflagration at the coming of the Lord; but helps to support my main proposition concerning Israel of the two houses. As further proof I will now quote v. 14, "They shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west; they shall spoil them of the east together: they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them." These are the enemies of Israel and it is here affirmed what Ephraim and Judah conjointly will do to them. These peoples as well as Israel and Judah will be in existence in that day; and the former will be in antagonism at least for a time, to the latter; be their enemies until forced to obey. The closing verses show how God will make and open ways for the return of portions or remnants of his people who will still, at that time, be scattered.

The 1st of 12th chapter is but a continuation of the prophecy and represents regathered Israel praising the Lord and still mindful of the fact that his anger had once burned against them, but was now turned away. It is true the pronoun is the singular is used, but this usage is frequently the style of the prophets when speaking of Israel and also of other nations. In the 3rd verse the singular i pronoun is dropped and the plural used. This whole prophecy bristles with proof of God's favor toward Israel nationally and according to the flesh. It is not possible to make it teach something else.

There is a disposition on the part of some to array other points of doctrine or speaking in accordance with the fact of the matter, to array their understanding of other points against the Scriptural proof itself, of Israel's restoration nationally. As an illustration take the 24th v. of 15th chapter of 1 Cor., "Then cometh the end; when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God even the Father; when he shall have put down all authority and power." The "then" and the "when" of this verse, as adverbs of time are limited to a very brief period indeed. They think the word "then" used here primarily as referring to the coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the dead must necessarily mean a very short space of time, an epoch if you please. The coming of the Lord marks the time. It is then the resurrection takes place. It is then the end cometh. So say these expounders. If the "then" means as short a space of time as they are pleased to imagine then the subjugation of all opposing power and the reign of Christ must be limited to the same brief space of time. It is hardly necessary for me to say to my readers that this is pure conjecture. "Then" is not a definite measure of time. There is no reason why the reign of Christ and the subjugation of his enemies should be limited to the shortest period of time imaginable, and then imagine that this reign is purely executive and means the destruction of everybody outside of the Church, and of course Israel and Judah after the flesh. This false notion is made to overrule the plain statements of the prophets. One point of doctrine must not conflict with another; and does not if the word "then" in this passage is employed according to New Testament usage, and also every day usage. Mark iv. 28 will serve to illustrate its use, "The earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade; then the ear; then the full corn in the ear." The Greek word sita occurs twice in the text. In King James' version in the first instance it is rendered "then;" the second by "after that." The word has the same meaning in both places. I have used "then" instead of "after that" to show how unfounded is the notion that everything is going to be wound up in a hurry when the Lord comes, allowing no time for his reign over the twelve tribes of Israel and over all nations—no time to extend the blessings of peace, plenty and prosperity to the oppressed and needy sons of men; (see Psa. lxxii.) no time nor opportunity for all nations to be blessed in him, and "all the ends of the world to remember and turn unto the Lord," (Psa. xxii. 27) when he shall be governor among the nations. Coming to my point of illustration: first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." Every farmer knows that between the stages here named, in the growth of wheat the spaces of time are proportionately long, especially between the plant and the head or ear of our winter varieties. The plant appears in the fall and the head the next June, months after. Wheat in Palestine requires about the same length of time to reach perfection as here in our western climate; and yet, our Savior in speaking of the different stages of growth said "First (proton) the blade or plant, then (eita) the ear," without any thought of being corrected by his auditors as to the use of the wrong word. Applying this principle then to 1 Cor. xv. 24, "Then cometh the end," there is ample time, even a thousand years for Christ to put down all rule and authority and power before this end comes. In this long period, the beginning and the ending of which are marked by resurrections, the first and the second, Israel after the flesh will become obedient, and all people, nations and languages serve the Lord. Dan. vii. 14.

The theory of universal fire melting the globe from pole to pole bars out all nations and belittles God's plan or renders it impossible for him to carry it out in the blessing of all nations as he purposed to do: making it also impossible for his original decree to be carried into effect through man's agency as he designed when he told Adam, as the representative of the race to subdue the earth; to be fruitful, multiply and replenish or fill it with a population adequate to its wide domain and its vast resources.

JOHN L. WISER.

Genesis. Chap. 17.

1. And Habram became ninety-nine years old, and the Lord appeared unto Habram, and said unto him, I am thy God. Be pleasing in my sight and become blameless.

2. And I will place my covenant between me and thee, and I will multiply thee exceedingly.

3. And Habram fell upon his face, and God talked with him saying,

4. Lo, my covenant is even with thee, and thou wilt be a father of a multitude of nations.

5. And thy name shall no longer be called Habram, but thy name will be Habraam, because I have made thee a father of many nations.

6. And I will increase thee exceedingly and will make thee into nations, and kings will come out of thee.

7. And I will establish (lit. stand) my covenant between thee and between thy seed after thee in their generations for an age-lasting (everlasting) covenant to be thy God and the God of thy seed after thee.

8. And I will give unto thee and thy seed after thee the land in which thou art sojourning, all the land of Chanaan namely for an age-lasting possession; and I will be unto them for a God.

9. And God said unto Habraam, and thou shalt watch-to-keep (esoterically) my covenant, thou and thy seed after thee in their generations.

10. And this is the covenant which thou shalt watch to keep between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations; every male of yours shall be circumcised.

11. And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your fore-skin, and it shall be a covenant-sign between me and you.

12. And every male child eight days old shall be circumcised by you in your generations; and one born in your household and the one bought with money from any alien son, who is not of thy seed,

13. Shall be circumcised, the one born of thy household and the one bought with money namely. And my covenant will be upon your flesh for an age lasting covenant.

14. And an uncircumcised male who shall not have had the flesh of his fore-skin circumcised on the eighth day, that soul will have been destroyed from his race, because he hath disannered my covenant.

15. And God said unto Habraam, Sara (Smiling Beauty) thy wife shall not be called by her name Sara; Sarra (Smiling Root) shall be her name.

16. I will bless her and will give unto thee of her a child, and I will bless it and it will be for nations and kings of nations will be of it.

17. And Habraam fell upon his face and laughed and spoke in his thought saying, Will a son be born unto one a hundred years old, and will Sarra ninety years old bring forth?

18. And Habraam said unto God, Let this Ismael live in thy sight.

19. And God said unto Habraam, Yea. Lo, Sarra thy wife will bring forth for thee a son and thou shalt call his name Isaak (on-an-equality); and I will establish my covenant with him for an age-lasting covenant to be his God and the God of his seed after him.

20. And concerning Ismael, lo, I have hearkened to thee; and lo, I have blessed him and will increase and multiply him exceedingly; Twelve nations will he beget, and I will give him for a great nation.

21. But my covenant I will establish with Isaak whom Sarra will bring forth for thee during this appointed time in the other year.

22. And he finished talking with him and God went up from Habraam.

23. And Habraam took Ismael his son and all the men born in his house and all those bought with money even every male of the men that were Habraam's house, and circumcised their fore-skins, in the period of that day, even as God had told him.

24. And Habraam was ninety-nine years old when he circumcised the flesh of his fore-skin.

25. And Ismael his son was thirteen years old when he circumcised the flesh of his fore-skin.

26. And in the period of that day Habraam and his son Ismael were circumcised, they and all the men born in his house and those bought with money of alien nations.

COMMENT.

In the 1st verse R. V. says "I am God Almighty." Text reads "I am thy God," R. V. says "Walk before me and be perfect." Text says, "Be pleasing in my sight and become blameless"—a very different thought the reader will observe.

In the 4th verse there is no "as for me" R. V.

Notice carefully the language in the 6th verse about the change of Abram's name to Habraam. For it is significant of its new meaning when changed.

"A gatherer" of nations under the head of the covenant as the reaper gathers the grain in his bosom that he reaps with his right hand.

Observe in the 7, 8, 9 and 10th verses, "Watch to keep" instead of "keep" R. V.

In the 14th verse "on the eighth day" omitted in the R. V.

16th verse "a mother" inserted and "her" and "of her" in the R. V. should be "it" and "of it" and "son" should be "child."

In the 17th verse "in his heart" R. V. Should be "in his thought."

In the 19th verse "nay" R. V. should be "Yea" and "to be his God" omitted in the R. V.

Paul interprets the Christian call to be the "called in Isaak." Why? It is in the name. Christians are called to equality and to equitable rights and conduct—in short to a brotherhood of rights. "Isaak" means "on an equality."

In the 20th verse "twelve princes" R. V. should be "twelve nations" and "I will give him for" instead of "I will make him a" R. V.

24th verse according to the text indicates that Habraam did his own circumcising instead of having it done as in the R. V. Same thought confirmed in the 25th verse.

In the 26th verse "of the stranger" R. V. should be "of alien nations."

The Old and the New.

"Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord." Acts xi. 23.

We are near the close of 1900, and we call it now the old year, and the year 1901 will, soon be ushered in. It is said on New Year's day is the time people make new resolves, then turn over a new leaf, and promise that they will forsake evil ways, bad habits, live a better, a new life. This is a glorious resolve. How many, during the year just passing, have lived up to their vow made one year ago. How many can truthfully say, I am better morally than I was a year ago. Have we in our dealings with our fellow man, conducted ourselves in such a way, that there can be seen a change for the better? Or have we allowed ourselves to drift with the element that knows not God, neither cares for him or his promises. Any one is known by the company they keep. Have we kept company with the good, or with bad? Have we set an example, that would encourage those that know not God, to leave their evil associates and be a follower of the meek and lowly Nazarene Jesus? If we have not, then we have nearly lived the year just passing in vain. Shall we, as the new year is ushered in, make these resolves over again, and go through another year, with not one to say that we have done any good morally by living? This is a serious question, "For as ye sow, so shall ye reap." Paul tells us that if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. 2 Cor. v. 17. Also Paul declares the Aaron priesthood abolished; and as a reason for it, said it was faulty. Therefore, in making a new covenant, whereby both Jew and Gentile can be saved through Christ, he had to make the Mosaic covenant old; which he did and destroyed it. For after a new will or covenant is made, the old is of no more use. So with us, if we can see our mistakes in the year just passing, let us not in the coming year make the same mistakes over again. And if we wish to change and be a new creature, let us join Christ's body, and be a new creature in fact. And then live such lives, that those we come in contact with, can see a change for a better, moral life.

Yours hoping for eternal life.

Universalism.

This term it applied to that class of men who hold the doctrine that all mankind will ultimately be saved. They may and do differ as to the time when the means by which this result will be reached. Some of the same class are teaching universal salvation under another name, calling it the "larger hope." Now brethren, listen to the true Gospel hope. If we could divest our minds of the fact that man is a responsible and accountable being or creature, we might agree with them: but the idea that the Creator must compel belief, or faith, destroys all idea of responsibility: for the creature may safely wait till such compulsive power is exercised on him, and cannot be blameworthy for not believing at any previous time, nor be worthy of praise when he does believe, for he was compelled to do it. Faith was forced on him. In other words, his salvation is that of an irresponsible machine, for the working of which only the Inventor is in any way responsible.

The idea of making laws, imposing penalties, or making promises to machines is a strange one, and hardly consists with the notion of a sane mind, and much less with one infinitely wise.

But one asks, Is a man who is dying—going out of life—saved when the bread of life is proffered him? Must he accept of said proffer, and so it becomes a gift. This is a specious presentation of the subject, but very fallacious. It is no less a gift because the man refuses to eat when the bread is set before him without money or price, and he saved from the necessity of dying. Must the donor's gift depend on the dying man's reception of it? If so, and the man dies, his death may be chargeable to the want of benevolence in the person who furnished the food. He should have forced it down the man's throat.

Is that the way we reason about gifts? God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life. He that hath not the Son of God hath not life. 1 John v. 11, 12. Such is God's record. He that believeth not the record that God gave of his Son,—shall we now be told God has not given, or made a gift, unless he compels belief? The gift is there, but it is in God's Son, and in order to actual possession of eternal life we must be in his Son by faith, and he who will not receive the Son hath not the life that is in him.

Here is a gift, and God has made it so, for all men, but the gift must be accepted and appropriated by a responsible and accountable creature—not by a forced faith; for "he that believeth not shall be condemned." See Mark xvi. 16. Condemned for what? if faith comes not till it is compelled, or forced.

Faith may be forced on a man to a certain extent, but it is not rewarded till it is tried. Even the most desperate case, that of persecuting Saul, who may be said to have been forced to believe that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah. Yet he was to have his faith tried in a most terrible manner, and he said in his trial, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." 1 Cor. ix. 27.

How so, Paul? "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, and have tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again to repentance, seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Heb. vi. 4-6.

These persons were blessed, yea they had believed and tasted the gift, and yet Paul shows they might fail of an ultimate salvation; yea, that their salvation was impossible. What then shall we think of the idea that all men are to be forced or compelled to the belief that shall result in their ultimate salvation? Is it not clearly shown by the word of the Lord, to be a mistake, and a dangerous one, too, seeing the natural result of such an idea is to lead men to wait for the compelling power to make them believe, and to quiet their minds in sin, by thinking themselves excusable for living in unbelief, because no such power has been bestowed on them?

God's free gift and man's free agency must meet in the work of a final salvation. Both must be displayed. They must unite, or no soul of man will ultimately be born into the kingdom of God. Man could not move in that direction without the free gift that moves upon him, and God's free grace can never overcome man's free will to accept the salvation of ultimate redemption. That would be for God to deny himself and confess that he made a mistake in the creation of man with a free will.

That man's free will may oppose God's free gift, and refuse to accept it is as plainly taught in the Bible as is any other doctrine. Our Lord Jesus Christ, who is one of God's free gifts, said to Jerusalem's inhabitants, How oft would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathers her chickens under her wing, and ye would not. Mat. xxiii 37. And again he said, Ye will not come to me that ye might have life. John v. 40.

No forced belief is hinted at as the thing needful for their redemption and salvation; but their ruin is the result of setting their free will in opposition to him who came to save them, and thus their responsibility is manifested and God's ways are vindicated. They are without excuse, for says Jesus, If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: but now they have both seen and hated me and my Father. John xv. 24. Where is the compelling faith to be seen in this language? Man's responsibility is everywhere recognized in the Bible; every command, threatening, prohibition and promise implies man's responsibility and liability to a failure; and let no soul of man flatter himself that his ultimate salvation is somehow secured against possibility of failure; but let us so run that we may obtain, 1 Cor. ix. 11, and remember that "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death," Rev. ii 11. If victory is not achieved by free will grace, or the gospel, there is no escape from the second death. Heaven invites, promises, entreats, encourages, councils, warns, suffers long, not willing that any should perish; but heaven never compels, or forces final salvation. No. Why will ye die? is loves last agony over the obstinate rejector of God's free grace; nothing has been left undone on God's part that could be done to secure an ultimate salvation for every son and daughter of Adam, so that if any perish, utterly and forever, the God of all grace and mercy can truly say, What could have been done more to that soul, that I have not done for it, but ye will not come unto me or my Son, that ye might have life. Isa. v. 4, and John v. 40.

Let us be wise betimes, and lay hold on the hope set before us, that we may become heirs of the kingdom; or at least, subjects in the kingdom, and thus have a share in the glory to be revealed when the sons of God are manifested; but first seek to be of those glorified at the appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ. To that honor we are now called. Let us make it sure.

JOHN FOORE.

A Christmas Letter to all the dear Readers of The Restitution:

I have been looking for the yearly love feast. We have enjoyed it so much in the past through the columns of the dear old RESTITUTION. May God speak to the hearts of his people through the words of comfort and cheer that may be given his dear children. The past year has been a year of great victory for Christ in my life. praise his holy name. He has been my Guide by day and night. He is leading, oh, so gently, and filling my heart with joy and gladness, and songs of praise. O how wonderful is our God and Father. He gives us joy in place of sorrow, he comforts and hears, heals the sick, strengthens the weak and lifts the fallen. Blessed be God, my God. Yes, he is mine and I am his, and all he asks of us is obedience and the blessed privilege of walking with God by faith. O dear ones in Christ Jesus our Lord, let us live in such close fellowship with him every day that we may ask what we will according to his will and it shall be done, praise his dear name. I love to think of good old Noah and his obedience to God. When God told him to build the ark there was no signs of a great flood, but he went to work just the same, prepared the ark as God told him to do and what was the result? The floods came and what became of Noah? Ah! he was saved, saved because he believed God and obeyed him. Dear brothers and sisters, are we obeying God moment by moment, step by step? Do we fully trust him in all things, and with all things, our joys, our sorrows, our burdens? Oh, I thank God for the privilege of casting all our cares upon him. Why? "For he careth for us." O praise him, praise him, praise his holy name.

May we all prepare to meet Jesus when he comes to reign.

Your Sister in Christian love.

CLARA J. CHAFFEE.

Self-Denial.

To deny oneself and take up our cross willingly and daily follow the commandments of God and walk in his holy ways require a fixedness of purpose that only those who are sustained by divine grace can endure. The temptations and allurements of the world are very enticing and often promise personal comfort and pleasure that for the time being involves pleasure and perhaps profit. In some cases fidelity to the dictates of conscience awakens contempt on the part of others and puts the man of God to great straits, certainly to much disadvantage and loss; but, steady to his purpose, he proceeds on the even tenor of his way, counting it, if need be, better to suffer rather than sacrifice his sense of honor and piety.—Philadelphia Methodist.

There is a vast difference between that wisdom which is "earthly, sensual, devilish," and that wisdom which is profitable to direct, which "is from above," and is "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." The former wisdom leads to perdition, and the latter leads to heaven.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 80 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

Also the remainder of the editions of Reasons of my withdrawal from the Evangelical Association, by A. H. Zilmer, is in the hands of this committee. About 70 copies only remain, at 5 cents each.

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $100.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

B. KELROY,
G. P. ALLARD.

WE have a few copies of the book called "The Scriptures Opened; or Thoughts and Themes for Bible Students" by Robert Ashcroft. It is a work that has passed the scrutiny of such of our brethren as Benjamin Wilson, J. L. Wince, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Wilson, J. F. Wagoner, A. J. Eychaner and others. It contains 370 pages, strongly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering on the back and side. It formerly sold for $1.25, but we offer the few we have on hand at 75 c. each post paid.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

Brother Underwood:

Will you please say to the brethren and friends, that we still have on hand a fair supply of our little four-page tract, entitled "Sirs, What must I do to be saved?" and that a request with a penny for postage will bring them to your address. Yes, please send your name, request and address, and they will hasten to your home penny or no penny.

An Appeal to the Brotherhood of the Church of God.

THE RESTITUTION is a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Church of God, and we ask you to kindly read the following lines, and consider our mutual interests.

This paper gives you all the Church news, announcements of meetings and reports of them when held.

It gives notices of deaths of members in all parts of the country.

It gives exegetical articles that are of great value to the student.

It gives articles on prophecy, and all the news that bears on the fulfilment of the future part of God's word.

It contains articles that set forth the nature of mankind, and the Hope he has for any thing hereafter.

It sets forth the Gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Christ and his Apostles, and insists that this Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things that concern the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, are what constitute the power of God unto salvation to him that believeth it.

It goes further, and insists that a holy life consistent with the high profession made, is just as necessary as belief—i. e. that Faith is well, and Works are well, and necessary both of them. That Sincerity alone will never save of itself.

It advocates the restoration of literal Israel to their own land as the only consistent way of fulfilling the promises made to the fathers.

It contains articles that show the necessity for a resurrection of the dead as the only means of attaining the blessings promised the faithful.

It gives articles showing that the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus the Christ must be just as literal as his first coming or his going away was; and that the saints have no hope of reward until that event; thus making that the most important of all the important events that will occur.

This paper urges all these matters, and many others of like nature, including immersion as the only mode of baptism, and at a cost of but $1.50 per year, about three cents a week. It contains more reading matter than 14 books that usually sell for $1.00 each, and is the very best means you can have of keeping posted as to the workings of the Church and the world as relating to prophetic doings.

It is not sensational, and is not controversial in the sense that it wishes to discuss matters that are of secondary importance, when there is so much that is of prime importance to lay before our readers.

It holds that personal attacks by brethren upon others is out of place, and only tends to work harm in place of good, and urges always the settlement of differences by private means.

With these points here set forth we solicit you to give us your subscription for the coming year, and we assure you that you will be many times paid for the expense. Try it and be convinced of what we say.

If you have not seen a late copy we will gladly send you a sample free on request.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

Poetry.

Be Gentle.

A look, a word and a smile,
They help through many a mile
Of toil, trouble and tears,
When the heart is full of fears
And the way is gloomy.

Be ever soft in thy speech—
You know not how far words reach—
And thy glance be kind and glad,
To aid the tired and sad
When the load is heavy.

"I Will Come Again."

"As it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment," so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time "without sin unto salvation." The second coming of Jesus the Christ has been looked forward to by all Bible writers in all ages, with great desire, and it is an event of great importance, for around it cluster all the promises of God, and our salvation depends upon his coming. The promise that "I will come again" has cheered many sorrowing and despondent hearts and given them new hope, that they might look beyond this time of sorrow, trouble, darkness and gloom when Jesus will wipe all tears from all faces.

Yes, Jesus is coming for the heavenly messenger said, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." "He was once offered to bear the sins of many." Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows, yet we did not esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before the shearer is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. He was taken from prison and judgment, and who shall declare his generation? For he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken. Even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

For three years and a half he went about doing good; "healing the sick and preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God," and the last time he was with the disciples before his crucifixion he told them to "Watch and pray that they enter not into temptation." Hear him in that memorial night prayer, saying, "Father, if thou be willing remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will but thine be done." And being in agony he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven strengthening him.

He was led before Pilate, and the sentence that was pronounced upon him was that he was a just man, "I find no cause of death in him." Yet he gave sentence that they might crucify him. They led him forth and nailed him to the cruel wood. Yet he "opened not his mouth." Hear him say, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." There upon the cruel cross he gave his life for many. A scene the sun, that bright orb of day, was ashamed to look upon, but hid his face in shame. They took him down from the cross, and laid him in the cold and silent tomb. All was darkness and gloom; but at the close of the third day he came forth clad with immortal vigor, and we hear him say, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen. And have the keys of hell and of death."

This same Jesus "shall appear unto them that look for him, without a sin offering unto salvation." Are we looking for him? If we are, we are waiting for him, and if waiting for him, we are preparing to meet him. The Apostle Paul says, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation to all men hath appeared." Teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

John exclaims in admiration, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God! What amazing love, that God would call us poor, frail, erring creatures his sons, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; and see him as he is. "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself." Glorious hope, indeed! Who would not desire him to come? "Behold, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." "Who (Jesus when he comes) will render to every man according to his deeds. To them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality—eternal life." The glory of being made like Jesus, putting on immortality, becoming God's sons in fact by "putting on the divine nature." The honors of reigning with Jesus when he comes to restore all things, and reign in righteousness. The inspired writer says, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." But God hath revealed them unto us by his Word, "For the Spirit (Word) revealeth all things. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless." "Wherefore the rather, brethren give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall." "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forebearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a complaint against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things, put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another." "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace."

Jesus said he was coming; the angels said that he was coming; the inspired penmen said that he was coming; and God said that he would send him, and I believe he will come, for God cannot lie, and I am looking for him, and earnestly desiring his presence, and I want to so live that I may be worthy to reign with him, when he speaks peace to the troubled nations, and puts a stop to these cruel wars and bloodshed, and by the arm of his might rolls back the tide of sin and evil, and fills the earth with joy and peace. I want to be among that number that sing that good song, "Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. Now, "If we be risen with Christ, let us seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God, and set our affections on things above, not on things on the earth; for we are dead to things of the earth, and our life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with him in glory." May God help us that our lives may be more consecrated to him, and that we may draw nearer to him and his Word, and that we may have more charity for one another, and "let all bitterness and wrath and anger and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from us, with all malice, and be kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven us." That when he comes we may find us looking, waiting, watching and prepared to meet him, and enter into that joy he has prepared for us.

S. C. OLIVER.

Short Sermons. No. 10.

That blessed hope, What is it? In Titus ii. 11-14, we read this, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ: who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." We note a few points in the context leading up to this "Blessed hope." The grace or favor of God, the result of that great love wherewith he hath loved us, hath appeared to all men, in or through the gospel, God's plan of salvation, which is world-wide in its mission. Matt. xxiv. 14; Mark xvi. 15, 16; Col. i. 5, 23. The grace of God does not warrant the salvation of all men, but it appears—is made known to all who hear and are influenced and led by its teaching to deny and renounce ungodliness and worldly lust, and to live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. It appears as a teacher and not as warrant or a pledge of salvation to all men regardless of their wish and ways. Those, and only those, who receive not the grace of God in vain, but receive and lay hold on the hope set before them, which hope is for an anchor to hold them to the port of life, and causes them to voluntarily change sides and conform their lives, thoughts, words and deeds to the divine requirements, having a deep, genuine longing and looking for the realization of their hope at the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. Such, and only such persons, will possess and be counted worthy to realize and enjoy that blessed hope when Jesus comes to rule in righteousness and reward his faithful waiting ones with a crown of life that fades not away. What is this blessed hope which Christians love to talk about so well? As hope is a compound, composed of a desire of good joined with and based on expectation. Hence we can truly say, it is a rich blessing, and a valuable gift much to be desired, based on the sure promises of God. Now, what has God promised to the Christian that they would be well pleased to have and hold? Just that which he does not now have, as we cannot hope for that which we already have, but for that which we have not in our possession, hence we wait for it. Paul answers it this way. In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie promised before the ages began. Man being mortal, and his life as a vapor, of short duration, dreads the enemy death, and desires and hopes for eternal life, because God has promised it, and is not like man—slack about his promises. Man dies and wastes away, but hopes to live again, because God has promised it, and pledged it in the revival of his beloved Son. We would love a home in the kingdom of God on earth, not in, but under the whole heavens, and we hope for it on the promise of God. Read James ii. 5; Luke xii. 32; Dan. vii. 27. Every man, yea, every man that hopes to see Jesus as he is, and be like him, purifies himself, cleanses himself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, even as he is clean and pure. Blessed hope all glorious and divine.

A Hebrew Nation.

Speaking of work among the Jews who assembled from all quarters of the world this last summer at the Paris Exposition the Editor of the Jewish Herald, London, has this to say concerning the "tenacity of the Jews to their indestructible destiny as a nation."

As we have to do, so to speak, with a world of Jews congregated in one particular spot, we hear from their lips religious opinions, convictions, aspirations, and phases in their beliefs, which impress one with the marvellous and astounding tenacity with which they still hold to their indestructible future destiny as a nation. No matter how low some may have fallen in the standard of their religious faith or observances, they still cling to the national idea.

Loyal to the core as they express themselves to be to the countries in which their lot is cast, and especially in those lands where they are treated as human beings, with the enjoyment of equal rights and protection, and where they are ready to bring any sacrifice, and at the call of danger ready even to die for their respective fatherlands; yet there is a solidarity among them which no power on earth, be it ancient or modern, has hitherto been able to weaken. Neither persecution in Russia nor the mental tortures they are now undergoing in the minor kingdom of Roumania, which, itself existing by the good will of the Great Powers, is breaking the very bone of its independence by disregarding the articles of its constitution—viz., religious liberty to all as a condition. Nor have the recent massacres, murders, and blood accusations in Bohemia, Galicia, and other countries, in any way loosened, nay, they have drawn the bonds of their tenacity even closer than ever. This unconquerable belief in their future is a phenomenon which cannot possibly be explained by either philosopher or economist: it needs the discovery of a special key to open such a mysterious lock, and it seems to me that this key may be found in the sacred Word by the Prophet Jeremiah, chapter 31, v. 35, 36, 37. "Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and stars for a light by night, if those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever. Thus saith the Lord, if heaven above me can be measured, and the foundations of earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all they have done, saith the Lord."

Great and powerful were the nations that oppressed God's ancient people, but where are they now? Vanished as a tale that is told; but the Jews, dispersed and scattered, still remain distinct, no matter how small their community may be in any given place of the Diaspora.

This fact of God's purposes towards that people as an everlasting nation (Hebrew Am Olam Isaiah) must not be ignored by us and by all those who try to bring them under the influence of the benign gospel. We must never attempt to Gentilize the Jews, but to tell them, nay, even to assure them, that as a nation they are still beloved for the fathers' sakes, and for the sake of Jehovah's promises to them as a nation, and that "the Scriptures cannot be broken." Whilst we who are believers do not seek to Gentilize the Jews, we do with all our heart endeavor to Messianize them; for their own prophet tells them that their "Coel (deliverer) shall come to Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob." The Messianized nations of the Jews and the Christianized nations of the Gentiles will then together raise one shout of triumph, and, receiving the Goel with acclamation, will cry aloud: "Crown him; crown the 'Messiah' Lord of all!"

Please say in the paper that if any want my labor this winter, I would gladly go if they will write me at Tinkesburg, Mich.

L. H. CHESSMORE.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the Paul "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalsaints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, and a holy life as essential for a salvation.

Quiet Influence.

There was once a poor, feeble old woman who said to her minister: "I wish I could do something for Jesus, but I am so poor and weak:" and the minister said: "You do something every Sunday. For I see you in church listening very earnestly to me, and the sight of your face helps me to preach better about Jesus."

Rev. Spencer Compton says: "During a voyage to India I was one dark evening in my cabin feeling thoroughly unwell, as the sea was rising fast, and I was but a poor sailor. Suddenly the cry that there was a man overboard made me spring to my feet. I heard a tramping overhead, but I resolved not to go on deck lest I should interfere with the crew in their efforts to save the poor man. 'What can I do?' I asked myself, and, unhooking my lamp, I held it near the top of my cabin, and close to my bull's-eye window, so that its light might shine on the sea, as near the ship as possible. In half a minute I heard the joyful cry, 'It's all right; he's safe!' upon which I put my lamp in its place. The next day, however, I was told that my little lamp was the sole means of saving the man's life, for it was only by the timely light which shone upon him that the knotted rope could be thrown so as to reach him."

If we can do nothing else, we can help those who are throwing out the life-line of salvation by letting our light shine, and our quiet influence, reinforcing the Word that is preached, may be the means of saving a soul which otherwise would be unreached.

"Doctor," said a gentleman to his pastor, "how shall I train up my boy in the way he should go?" "By going that way yourself," was the reply.

A man given to drink was once walking uncertainly in some deep snow. Looking back, he saw his six-year-old boy following after him, carefully planting his feet in the marks left by his boots in the snow, and he heard him cry out cheerfully, "Mamma, I'm walking in papa's footsteps." It smote him to the heart, for he thought of those other footsteps of his in which his boy might walk, and he resolved that, by the grace of God, he would so live that no one, walking in his footprints, would walk to ruin.

Christ the Center.

As the sun is the center of our solar system, so Christ is the Christian's sun and centre of desire. As gravitation holds the planets in their proper orbits so love holds the trusting heart in the pathway of willing obedience. As in completing the solar circuit, the earth receives the pleasing variety of seasons adapted to beauty and health, and to promote all organic life, so in our loving service of Christ, there is a pleasing and useful variety of gracious and profitable experiences. Sometimes fierce storms sweep across our pathway to drive us into the shelter of his promised grace. Sometimes the cold repulsiveness of the world's unbelief and sin chills us like a winter's blast, driving us to the central, steady sunlight of a Savior's constant love, causing springtime to burst forth in the Christian's heart, and bursting buds of developing faith and love to expand into the fruits of Christian grace. But there is no winter in the sun. And he who has the Sun of Righteousness in his heart will have constantly the springtime of his abiding love.

Caleb is the man needed in our churches in these latter days. He is the type-man for thorough-going fidelity. He followed the Lord fully. What we want to make churches vigorous and successful is, not bustle, but business; not parade and puffery, but patience, prayer, and persevering work. We want the full following of Christ with the whole heart, for the whole time, and for the whole life campaign.—Taylor.

It is best to think twice before taking upon us the burden of hatred for any fellow-being. It weighs heavier every year, and exhausts the strength that ought to go in loving and bettering others instead.

A little wrong done to others is a great wrong done to ourselves.

A man had better be poisoned in his blood than in his principles.

We feed on what we read, but digest only what we meditate upon.

"If any man speak evil of you, let your life be such that none will believe him."

"Rule your appetites, govern your passions, in order to avoid being their slaves."

No one can avoid his own company—so he had best make it as good as possible.

No one ought to be so leisurely as to neglect the good of others; nor to be so busy as to forego communion with God.

"The state of the world is such, and so much depends on action, that every thing seems to say aloud to every man, "Do something—do it—do it!"

Melanction, the learned companion of Luther, said, "The Scriptures cannot be understood theologically, without first of all being understood grammatically;" and he argued in support of this assertion in many places. Camerarius, also an eminent man of learning urges the same sentiment more than once.

Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang as the representatives of the Chinese government have at last signed the note of the powers, and are to proceed at once with the work of establishing peace. Whether this will be accomplished, or be overthrown ere next week by some turn in the affair cannot be told.

The report for "holy year" shows that 500,000 pilgrims visited the Pope during the year, coming from every quarter of the globe. Also that they paid in as gifts to the Vatican over 50,000,000 francs. This includes 200,000 francs given by the Duke of Norfolk, and 50,000 francs given by Oom Paul Kruger.

A letter from Brother Zilmer of South Bend states that his meetings are progressing in spite of bad weather and other hindrances, and that he expects they will organize next Sunday. We trust the effort will be continued as long as there is any prospect of doing good, and when the body is once in order and working that it will not be neglected, and left to die as many others have been in the past.

"We need still another translation of the Bible; not a translation which by changing a word here, and substituting another there, shall make the Book of God the organ of a sect, or the pack-horse of a one-sided theology; but a translation of the Scriptures into flesh and blood; into palpable realities; into the living, breathing acts and elements of Christian life;—a translation not into words, but into deeds, which shall commend itself to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

Last week we hurriedly made mention of the fact that the Duke of Norfolk read a memorial to the Pope in which he expressed hope that the Pope would soon be restored to temporal power. Since then we have learned more of who this man is. The Duke of Norfolk is the first nobleman of Europe. His nobility dates back to the 9th century, and he is the premier Duke and Earl of the United kingdom, and Earl Marshal and Chief Butler of England, and is one of the richest men in the nation. Is a devout Catholic, and has annually spent thousands of pounds in spread of that faith, and is at the head of every Catholic movement in the kingdom. He is the head of the family of Howards, and his castle in Sussex dates back to the time of Alfred the Great. This together with the fact that this Duke has been a high officer in the English government, will give our readers a clearer index to the deep meaning placed upon his words in this connection. Without expressing any opinion more than make record of the event, again we say make note of this, and watch.

Reader, "The man who wishes to know that a farm is his, should buy it and pay for it; and when he has done this, and put his title on record, if he gives no mortgages, and there are no judgments or claims standing against him, he knows perfectly well to whom that farm belongs. Just so you may know yourself to be the child of God. Accept what God has offered you; forsake what God has forbidden you; follow where the Savior leads you; fulfil the will of God with steady, constant, and ceaseless devotion, and you will know that you are being saved; your family will know it, and your neighbors will know it also."

An Open Life.

"It has been truly said that the only way for a man to escape being found out, is to pass for what he is. The only way to maintain a good reputation is to have a character which deserves it. It is easier to correct our faults than to conceal them. It is easier to repent of sins than to cover them. Half the labor it costs to serve sin on the sly, will enable us to serve the Lord openly and above board. Secret sin ends in public shame. Judas began with pilfering slyly, and ended with treachery and suicide, which "was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem."

"An open life is the only true one. Secret sin is the great mistake of mankind. God is for the penitent, no matter how low he may have fallen, and against the hypocrite, no matter how high he has climbed."

The Spirit's Counsel.

The Spirit's counsel in Romans xii. 21, is to "Overcome evil with good," and

In James ii. 1, to "Have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ with respect of persons."

To seek to overcome evil by evil is to perpetuate it and increase it. It is adding fuel to the fire, and giving strength to the disease. You cannot get straight with your neighbor by being as crooked as he is. Like does not cure like in the moral world. The only weapons we are permitted to wield are mercy and kindness. When not using these, our attitude must be that of patience and endurance. The worldly virtues of bravery, courage and such like, explain a great deal of the mischief and misery of mankind. Evil has promoted evil. But goodness is stronger than it. Behold David, with Saul's severed skirt in his hand, calling to the astonished king, and see in Saul's broken voice and tears how utterly crestfallen and discomfitted is evil in the presence of the good. 1 Sam. xxiv. 17.

The faith of our Lord Jesus Christ is the truest of all levellers. In nothing is the spirit of the world seen to be so utterly different from the spirit of Christ as in this, that it creates rank and privilege, and class distinction of an artificial character. Faith estimates man truly,—looks at him in the light of God, and passes by and through all the delusive artifices by which it is contrived to make one man look bigger than another. Faith governs the social notions, therefore, and puts the man in his proper place irrespective of his cloth or jewelry. Surely in this respect also, faith overcomes the world."

Profitable Meetings.

The profit derived from religious exercises, such as praise, prayer, exhortation, communion with saints and listening to the Word of the Living God; depends largely upon the frame of mind in which we came together,—the real object of coming. If we come because it is customary, or as a disagreeable duty, we may as well stay away. If we come for the sake of the social intercourse to be enjoyed, then, spiritually, we will go away as empty as we came. If the object be to hear some man, we will soon have spiritual dyspepsia,—followed by starvation and death. But if as children of God we can sing:

"Bless'd be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love,
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above," and are gladdened by the approach of the hour when out of love we go to meet Jesus in spiritual presence, and also to meet him in the brethren and sisters who reflect his moral image, we will not be disappointed. If we come remembering that God sees us through and through, and has been conizaut of all our thoughts, words and actions through the week, and then whatever of wrong has been done and not repented of, will, by hallowed associations, be brought to mind and forgiveness sought. Under such circumstances the uppermost thought will be, that it is we are listening to, in a word, he who is hungering and thirsting for the Bread and Water of Life will be filled, without reference to the speaker. Let out of which it is poured. In talking about profitable or good meetings there are natural conditions to be considered also. How could unfaithful, disobedient, half-hearted people, in the true sense, have or hold a good meeting? If God be not glorified, it cannot be called a good meeting; how much soever it may be enjoyed. In the nature of things it takes good people to have good meetings. People who

GOD'S MESSAGE

WALK WITH GOD

at home are just in their element when worshipping with his saints. But those who live in sin at home are not transformed into saints, by associating with such. And those who idle away their time, or work at something of no practical use, or who prefer a newspaper or a novel to their Bible when at home, are not changed in heart or mind by mingling for an hour or so with those that love the Lord. They are dead out of meeting, and they are dead when in it. Listen to David in the 122 Psalm. He says, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord;" and doubtless the next verses explain why: while in the spirit of the truth that had been revealed to the fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, he had by faith a glimpse of its fulfilment, for he abruptly says:—Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem; Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord,—for there are

WORSHIPPING THE LORD

SET THRONES OF JUDGMENT, the thrones of the house of David." Those that Jesus afterwards assigned to the 12 Apostles, doubtless in the regeneration. Matt. xix. 28. No wonder he was glad when the hour arrived to go into the house of the Lord, if granted such visions of the good time coming, when enrapport with the Spirit; and no wonder that the Psalmist elsewhere tells us that he paid his vows to God and extolled him, and was heard and answered, and there invites to come and hear what he had done for his soul. Psa. lxvi. 13-17. Those who can say with the Psalmist, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks; so panteth my soul after thee, O God; my soul thirsteth for God,—for the living God; when shall I come and appear before God?" are in just the mood to go into the house of God to be heard, answered and blessed.

ALL WHO FEAR GOD

A Letter.

For two months the writer has been in southern Maryland, among the farmers, making their old houses as good as new. The majority of them are Roman Catholic Christians and kinder hearted people would be hard to find anywhere. Their kindness even went beyond their solicitude for my natural or bodily wants. They were anxious about my soul. They reminded me that their church was the true mother church, that all the others were merely branches, etc. I bore with their talk until I could bear it no longer. The gentleman who made the comparison referred to, had a number of dead trees in his lawn. On some of them there were a few living branches, so I called his attention to this, and remarked that I had rather be a living branch than a dead trunk. He made no answer to this. It seemed to silence his gun. His dead trees and living branches were right at his door and he was silent. I thought of the old saying, "A ready penny is better than a slow shilling." And I started a long drawn out argument to down the silly stuff about "old mother church" I would have defeated myself, and lost my opportunity. I sometimes think that our most capable defenders of the truth would gain more victories if they did not take so long to tell what they want to say. "Before Abraham was I am," what an example of brevity in discussion. One day while eating dinner at this same gentleman's house, a terrific stroke of lightning seemed to strike the table at which we sat. The lady crossed herself most fervently with a pleading Madonna glance upward, but the husband did not seem to feel safe, so he ordered her to light a candle. I told them that my wife always turned the lights out in a storm like this. Oh my dear man these candles are blest. I thought to myself this is a new lightning rod. After the candle was burning the lightning had no terror for them. Peter said when confronted with danger, "Lord save or I perish." I at my farmer friend said "light a candle, dear." All this mark you, in good old Maryland. Send missionaries to China. Well, don't send them all. I think some of them are needed here. The priests and the preachers seem determined that the common people "see them first" before coming to God.

But I Say unto You.

Dear Restitution:

I want to talk to the brethren through your columns. I have just been reading from The Oregonian, our State paper, that "marriage should be regarded like any other contract carrying its own obligations and its penalties, and the commission of one specified kind of offense ought not to be the sole justification of its dissolution, as in the case of New York." The editor further says, "The fact is that liberal divorce laws have been a blessed release for many a woman, who under the old regime could secure a divorce for nothing save adultery. There can not be too many good marriages, but liberal divorce laws are necessary to release people worthy of a better fate from the direful moral consequences of an ignorant ill-assorted marriage that ought never to have taken place .....and that liberal divorce laws have been a blessing rather than a social bane."

It is queer our Lord did not see it in that light. In the sermon on the Mount, he said, "It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement. But I say unto you that whosoever shall put away his wife saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery; and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery."

In Mark x. 2, we read, "And the Pharisees came to him and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife?" They did this to tempt him. He answered and said unto them, "What did Moses command you?" And they said Moses suffered us to write a bill of divorcement and to put her away. And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your hearts he wrote you this precept. But from the beginning it was not so."

In Matthew they ask him, "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?" Jesus answers them about the same. He allows only the one cause. It is more safe to follow him than the courts of today. I have just read from the columns of The Oregonian that in the county adjoining ours, when the Court set the last time that there were thirty-three divorces granted. If Jesus was here today I think we would hear him say, "In the beginning it was not so." Young people would be more careful about entering into the marriage relation if the divorce law was not so liberal. If they really thought that there would be no escape, they would at least think twice before they would take the step that would bind them for life.

In the fifth of Matthew Jesus says, "But I say unto you" nine or ten times. It would be so much better if we followed the precepts that he laid down for us.

A wife if she wants the love and esteem of her husband should always be as agreeable at home as abroad. The same with the husband. The man should not always think that his wife should yield to him in all things, by no means, yet that is often the case. Yet it would be better if he would sometime yield to her wishes. If the husband finds it hard to yield to his wife, he ought to think how difficult it would be for her always to give up. This often is the first start for a disagreement, and because either will not yield it eventually ends in a separation, afterwards a divorce. Many people think because it is a law of the land it is all right. They do not even know that it is against the teaching of the Bible, and for this reason I believe that these "I say unto you" which we find so often in the Bible ought to be taught more from the pulpit than they are. Then we would not have so much ignorance concerning the matter. All kind of sin ought to be spoken against from the pulpit. Now this particular sin is scarcely ever mentioned. This ought not so to be.

Almira Brooks.

Selections.

"How Can Ye Believe?"

Faith in God and his Word is essential to man's salvation, for "without faith it is impossible to please God;" but "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God," and if we are to hear the Word of God, our hearts and minds must be in such an attitude that that Word may find ready acceptance with us.

The Savior said to some, "How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" If we are to believe God, our ear must be open to hear his voice, and no other voice must possess more authority with us than the voice of God. But when other voices are heeded, and other utterances have sway, it becomes impossible for men to believe the things which God has spoken.

Thus, when people have determined upon a certain course, and propose to proceed in it, no matter how contrary it may be to the will of God, how can they believe? If they have embraced heathen philosophies, human theories, traditions of the elders, commandments of men, and if they propose to hold fast to them without regard to the divine will, how can they believe?

When ten men have ten different theories regarding a certain matter, nine of them must be wrong in some respects. Possibly the whole ten are wrong; but it is impossible that they all be right. Now, if instead of patiently seeking to know what is right, each one sets up his own standard, and fights for his own position, how can they believe in God? How can they believe his Word? They break the force of everything which collides with their theories and opinions; and having set their stakes, fixed their ideas, and determined to defend them, they cannot receive the Word of Christ in a teachable spirit. Something else has come in to take its place, and a gospel faith can no more run smoothly under such circumstances, than a watch can run with a nail driven through its works.

If we are to have faith in God, we must close our ears to the voice of man, we must listen to hear what the Lord will say to us; and when we have once learned what God has spoken, we must receive it; we must accept his utterances, and heed his words to the veriest jot and tittle.

Let those who wish to believe, who desire to have that faith without which it is impossible to please God, see to it that they hold their minds in such a position of calmness and teachableness, that they can hear God's message, and listening to his voice receive his words. "Every one that is of the truth heareth my words." "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."—Christian.

Resurrection a Necessity.

In 1 Cor. xv, 13-18 it is written: "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is Christ not raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

These words of Paul are in strange contrast to those of modern teachers, who say that there is no such thing as "the resurrection of the body" that such a doctrine is unscientific and so cannot be true.

Now if they are correct then there never was a resurrection, and so Christ never rose from the dead; the Scriptures are unreliable, and all preaching and faith is vain; and there is no such thing as eternal or future life, and they which are fallen asleep in Christ (Christians) are perished.

Christ said: "I am the resurrection and the life;" but if there is no such thing as resurrection then he never rose, and he can never raise any one else. Then what did he mean?

According to most of the modern teaching there is really no necessity for a resurrection, as at death man continues to exist as a "disembodied soul." This may be a very nice theological theory, but it is unscriptural and untrue.

The church is filled with the traditions of the "fathers," and their teachings are readily accepted even though they be found contrary to the Word of God. Many reason with themselves that "it must be so because it has been believed and taught so many years."

In the days of the apostles the subject of the resurrection occupied a large share in the preaching. It was then considered of the utmost importance and they went about preaching "through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." If it was true then, it is so now, and just as important. Why, then, has this teaching been discarded? Is it not because it conflicts with a doctrine taught from the traditions of men?

Resurrection is important because without it those who have died can never have eternal life. The death state is not a condition of life as some would teach, but a loss of life. To have eternal life, then, the dead must live again, and they will.—C. F. Ladd, in Herald of Life.

Poetry.

The Zionists.

To the land of Palestine,
Zionists of Abram's line,
Moved by power that's more than mortal to command;
In a mighty moving mass,
Now in multitudes do pass,
Surely something more than common is at hand.

Nineteen hundred years and more,
Since God drove them from its shore,
Casting Israel's beauty down unto the earth;
Many bitter tears have flowed,
Over Salem's lost abode,
Spoiled and smitten by Jehovah with a dearth.

Without king or priest or God,
Prophet, ultur, or ephod
Spoiled of Jacob's patrimony and bereft,
Grieving o'er their lost estate,
And their house left desolate,
Not one stone upon another being left.

Veiled and scattered, anguish torn,
Double sorrows they have borne
Long among the nations, whither they have gone;
They are fed with bread of tears,
Drink by measure tears for years,
From the hated Gentile cup until the dawn.

But report is travelling forth,
Mong the nations of the earth,
That the sons of Jacob now doth onward haste
To the land with fields so lean,
Ephrel gleans again to glean,
And rebuild the places desolate and waste.

From the nations far away,
Jews are coming ev'ry day,
And their numbers are increasing more and more;
Leagued in compact they combine
To possess fair Palestine,
"Buying fields for money" prophesied of yore.

From the miry Gentile sloughs,
Israel's withered fig tree boughs,
Come with weeping, spreading forth their feeble hands,
With a wail of sorrow sore,
Stumbling o'er the stone that tore
Into parts, the staves of Beauty and of Bands.

Near the Temple's site the race,
Throng the Jew's wailing place,
To herself with lamentations their sad state;
Some in worn and tattered dress,
Some in costly robes do press,
And embrace, then kiss the wall they venerate.

In this narrow wailing place,
Direful sorrow leaves its trace,
For the branches broken off in unbelief;
Come each week on certain day,
With uplifted arms to pray
For their future restoration and relief.

Through the cloudy day and night,
Nineteen hundred years of night,
Jews have waited, now with train and quick-eared pace,
Israel comes with travel-staff,
Restoration joys to quaff
In the goodly land, God promised to the race.

Oft God's prophets do predict,
And in glowing words depict
Israel's restoration to the pleasant land;
When again she is installed,
"Hephzibah she will be called,"
And become a crown of glory in God's hand.

As a seer of great renown,
God did set Ezekiel down
In the center of the valley full of bones;
As the Spirit led him round,
Midst the bones upon the ground,
Unto him Jehovah spoke in certain tones.

"Prophesy upon these bones," Laying long among the stones
"In the open valley where they're very dry,"
Come, O wind, with might and main,
"Come and breathe upon these slain,"
God has heard among the nations Israel's cry.

Shaken bones are coming forth,
From the East, West, South and North,
Surely naught can stay the stream of passing fleet;
Up and down and too and fro,
All around the land they go,
Land of promise soon to fill with tribes complete.

God will kiss for them once more,
Gather Israel and restore;
Surely His determined purpose will be done;
He is sowing now each grave,
All of Israel he will save,
Sticks of Judah and of Joseph he'll make one.

While the nations stand in pause,
God will fully plead their cause,
Turn their faces back to Zion hitherward;
Hope suspended doth revive,
Israel's bones are made alive,
God of Israel soon will be their re-reward.

Soon their exile will be o'er,
Of their fullness how much more,
When God sets his hand again the second time;
Their backslidings he will heal,
Set them on his arm a seal,
Uniting Israel then will say "This God is mine."

Judah's sins shall not be found,
God will soothe and heal her wound
When refreshing seasons of the Lord appear;
Israel God will cleanse from sin,
Spirit new will put within,
During times of restoration drawing near.

Morning dawns, and with a zest,
Over vale and mountain crest,
Restitution signs now beat a reveille;
Calling Israel with tat-too,
To their tents with fowling cue,
Pitched on hills of Judah and of Galilee.

Turkey's hordes they will defy,
They have called, God will reply,
To the far-off tribes of Israel lying mute:
Czar nor Ottoman shall win,
God will punish Northern sin,
Jews and land he'll free from Gog and Sultan brute.

Graves in Israel await Gog, who comes with pompous gait,
To the valley where the nations God will flog;
Fixed events then due withal,
Gog on mount and field shall fall.
Surely they shall call the valley Hamon-Gog.

O'er these branches broken off,
Do not glory, boast nor scoff,
Moved with goodness and severity was God;
On the Jews it fell severe,
Brought the Gentile nations near,
Grafting both into the stem of Jesse's rod.

Jews will weep when Christ they see,
Mourn their sin with humble plea,
"As one mourneth for his only first-born son;"
"Every house shall mourn apart,"
Bitter grief will pierce each heart,
When they supplicate the earth's anointed one.

Thus the twig which God will lop,
Cropping it from off the top
The high cedar of the mountain of the Lord,
Will with glory Israel fill,
From his fount on Holy Hill,
Re-adjusting Beulah with his measuring cord.

Israel then will own her King,
Who will untold blessings bring,
Stipulating a new covenant with them;
Write love's law upon their hearts,
Put it in their inward parts,
Make them stones of glory in God's diadem.

Lessons on the Mission Work of Paul.

LESSON I.

Be able to name all of the Pauline Epistles.

The contention over circumcision arose soon after Paul and Barnabas returned from their first missionary journey.

What was the contention? What views with regard to circumcision did Paul and Barnabas hold? Then why did Paul circumcise Timothy upon his second visit to Lystra?

How was this question finally settled? Where was the conference held? Who were some of the principal speakers? What was Peter's view? James' view?

What greeting did this conference send to the brethren in general? By whom in particular was it sent?

Name the four things that the disciples were to observe to do. Does this do away with baptism, communion, etc., because they are omitted in this letter?

Why did Paul object to having John accompany them on their journey? Who accompanied Paul on this journey? Why?

LESSON IV.

Read through to the experiences of Paul and his companion, and including them in our present lesson, as they occurred at Philippi. Acts xvi.

Note the distinction between John's baptism and baptism in the name of Christ? How long did Paul stay at Ephesus? What were some of the miracles which Paul did at this place? What is an "exorcist?" Did they resemble in any particulars the sorcerers of the Old Testament?

The 17th verse gives some hint at the purpose of the special power given to Paul.

Tell of Demetrius and the commotion he caused. What points did he make in his speech? Who was Alexander?

Who made the closing speech of the chapter?

LESSON IX.

Chapter xx. and review.

Learn all you can of the Temple of Diana at Ephesus. In chapter xx. verse 1, what "uproar" is spoken of? Fully analyze the first verse as to its meaning.

Locate Asson, Mitylene, Chios, Samos, Trogyllium, Miletus. What were some of the things that Paul said to the elders of the Ephesian church? Where could you find some of the things that he afterward wrote to them. Commit to memory verse 32.

LESSON X.

Observe xx. 36, and xxi. 5.

Locate Coos, Rhodes, Patara, Phenicia, Tyre, Ptolemais, Cesarea. Find out all you can about Philip the Evangelist. See Acts vi. 5; viii. 26-40. Tell about Agabus. In verse 12, did the brethren act in the spirit "Thy will be done?"

Who was Tertullus? Lysias? Drusilla? Festus? What was the accusation brought against Paul? Before whom was Paul tried? Was the Judge a Jew? Did Paul contradict Tertullus in anything? Note in verse 18 that Paul mentions his purification before entering the temple at Jerusalem. See xxi. 20, etc. What measure of liberty was given Paul? From reading this chapter, what opinion do you form of Felix? Why? How long was Paul kept there?

LESSON XIV.

Did Festus act the part of a fair man? What was the substance of the conversation he had with the Jews at Jerusalem? Where was Paul at this time? What was the nature of the complaints made against Paul? How came Paul to appeal to Cæsar?

The xxvith chapter should be carefully studied. In it he shows much of the gospel hope. Compare Paul's speech with that of Stephen in the 7th chapter. Analyze in particular the 6th and 7th verses. What was Paul's hope? What was the promise made to the fathers? Who were the fathers? What does he say of the hope of the twelve tribes? I desire that this whole chapter be carefully studied.

Relate some of the things that Paul spoke to the Jews of Rome. How did these Jews regard Paul? Study verses 30 and 31.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE STUDY OF THESE LESSONS.

The foregoing lessons are the result, rather than the course of work pursued by the Bible class of the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois.

The outline of questions as given is intended to be suggestive, and in no way conclusive. Much may be added by which these lessons would be greatly improved. Much outside work was brought in to supplement these lessons. Without this, they would be of little value. Little value will come from them without a careful and persistent study of the map. Draw your own map and indicate your progress in study by dotted lines on the map. This will enable you to fix in your mind the regular order in which the events come as well as to connect the events with the places in which they occurred. For illustration: At Troas, Paul in a vision heard the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us." Here, too, he preached all night and brought to life the young man who fell from the third story window. Were these occurrences during the same visit or during different visits? By studying the map you can settle the question.

The lessons are not designed to be doctrinal in their nature. The object is to give the learner a good knowledge of Paul's experience as set forth by the Acts of the Apostles. Having thus built a good foundation in knowledge, we have a sure defense for the doctrinal.

There can be no doubt as to the amount of good received by the class in consequence of this work. We have found it to be a very reliable way in which to study the Word and to retain it in its connections.

Submitted in love,

SAMUEL J. LINDSAY.

Our Letter Drawer.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I write with pleasure to give you a report of our meeting held at Freedom, Neb. I thought the brethren would like to hear from us. Elder Prime of Edison, Neb. has been with us from Dec. 28th, to Jan. 6th. We heard some good, encouraging sermons. How they strengthen us and put us on our guard, to look forward to the time when there will be a grand meeting. We had good attendance, considering the cold weather. Some we know had their eyes opened to the truth, and we hope and trust that they will obey before it is too late. May these good meetings continue until Jesus comes, when we shall be gathered in a more glorious meeting, of which this is but a foretaste. Brothers and Sisters, let us love one another more than we have done in the past year. Just think! Jesus is near at hand. May I be one in that number. Pray for us that we may all be found faithful and that we may meet one and all in the kingdom of God. This is the earnest desire of a Sister.

FLORENCE E. SHLEECK.

Dear Restitution:

Our hearts were made glad by a visit with Brother D. M. Hutler, of Muscatine, Iowa. Brother Hutler had been holding meetings near Vancouver, Wash. From there he came to Scholls, Ore., which is sixteen miles west of Portland. The meeting commenced Dec. 8th and continued to Dec. 16th. On account of inclement weather the attendance was not very large. We expect another visit from him some time in the near future. He fearlessly proclaims the whole counsel of God. May he continue to labor in the Master's vineyard, sowing the good seed, teaching the glad tidings of a soon coming King to take the reins of government. I wish there could be means provided to keep so able a brother in the field.

Your Brother in Christ.

SAMUEL LAWRENCE, JR.

Dear Restitution:

We, here at Lanark, Ill., as a little band of believers, are trying in our weak way to live in harmony and peace among ourselves, and with the truth as set forth in the Scriptures. We meet together every first day at half-past ten o'clock, to worship our Father in heaven, by reading and examining his Word, with love to God our Father, and good examples to others. I think, though all the world seems to be in turmoil, we have reasons to rejoice, looking for his Son from heaven, our Savior.

SIMON P. RENNER.

Dear Restitution:

We enjoy the paper very much and hope all will pay what is due. I read with interest the reports of the work in the west. We are an isolated family here in Factoryville, Pa., there are no others of the one faith here, but we try to let our light shine by loaning papers and giving tracts; but few will read them. Pray for us that we may ever be faithful to improve every opportunity to do good.

A Sister in the Lord's work.

MRS. B. COLEMAN.

Editor Restitution:

The year 1900, which is now in the past, has been an eventful one in many ways. Look at the status of the governments of the world one year ago—then look at the present condition, marshalling their forces and preparing for the great slaughter which is impending; and what is it for? Alas, how few realize that they are preparing for the battle of the great day of God Almighty. Greater changes are likely to occur in 1901 than were witnessed in the last year. May we all watch and be ready.

As ever, in hope.

RICHARD CORBALEY.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

It is with sad hearts we write to you that that great enemy, death, has visited our little home and taken our little darling Fay from our arms, aged 9 months and 11 days. She was taken sick the 6th of December and died the 13th, and we laid her to rest on the 14th of Dec. to await the soon coming of our Lord and Savior. Pray for us, brothers and sisters, that we may be found worthy of a place in his kingdom, where all will be happiness forevermore.

GILMORE & LOU JOHNSON.

Editor Restitution:

We are expecting Brother and Sister Woodward to be here at Waterville, and at Wenatchee, Wash. to work with us this winter. Pray for us that we may all be on the Lord's side, laboring when he comes, and so may we be ready to enter into his rest which is glorious. Dearly beloved, if we would be of that little flock of overcomers that are to rule with him, we must be willing to give up all for him. Brethren, let us pay up and not compel Brother Underwood to use valuable space to dun us. Yours praying for all men.

PLATT M. CORBALEY.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

"In the world, but not of the world." John xvii. 14, 16. Soon after I obeyed the gospel these words entered my mind, but I did not see the bright light. I thought truly I am in the world, and of the world, of the dust of the ground; but ah; after I had fought the good fight in trying to lead others from darkness into the marvelous light, and use the influence of the true Word of God in the Sunday school class, and in their meetings, and as a friend warn them of their erring ways, then see them scoff at me and persecute me with evil sayings, and threaten of indicting me from their church; then think have I "come out from among them," 2 Cor. vi. 17, am I "unspotted from the world" (worldly ways) Jas. i. 27. Jesus says, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen ye out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." 1 John xv. 18, 19, "The sons of God (the people of) the world knoweth not." 1 John xxxi. Now when we stand alone in the midst of God's enemies, battling for God then can we see the true light. "In the world but not of the world." Dear ones, stand firm and fight the good fight till we gain the prize of the high calling.

Yours in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

L. J. SWEET.

Obituary.

Grandma Maxey died Jan. 13, 1901, at her home in Plymouth. She was the daughter of Sherod and Matilda Welch, and was given the name of her mother. She was born in Kentucky, May 17, 1819, and was over 81 years of age. In an early day she moved with her parents to Rush Co., Ind., and was married to Nathan Maxey in March, 1837, at Augusta, Indiana. They came to Marshall Co., in 1852 and since that time she has seen the varied developments of the wild land of the Indian to the fruitful fields of the present time.

Early in the history of the Church in this part of the country she with her husband became members, Brother Maxey having died several years ago. They were of the staunch order of defenders of the faith, firm to the last. They fought, as did Paul, a good fight, and with the righteous of all ages we feel sure that they will be rewarded when Jesus comes, and the angel calls them to come forth.

She leaves here to mourn their loss, four children, J. W. Maxey and Mrs. Mary E. Burch of this City, Jacob Maxey of Oklahoma and John A. Maxey of Kansas, besides a number of grand children and great grand children.

The funeral services were held in the Church of God, Brother A. H. Zilmer officiating, after which she was laid to rest in the Stringer cemetery, there to await the resurrection day. May we each strive to emulate her example of Christian patience and love, and meet her again where no sad farewells are spoken.

Goodness expands the heart, and makes it humble. The larger, the better, the nobler your heart is, the more you will be inclined to make allowance for others, and the more you will say and feel: "God be merciful to me a sinner!"

Obituary.

Died at St. Joseph, Mo., of congestion of the liver, Sister Catherine Williams. Catharine Harrold was born in Henry Co., Ind., April 16, 1841; died Dec. 19, 1900, aged 59 years, 8 months and 3 days. She was a daughter of William and Rebekah Harrold, deceased. She was married to Elliot M. Jackson, Nov. 15, 1858 in Grant Co., Ind.; to them were born four children who all survive her. Her husband died June 22, 1865. In the fall of 65 she moved with the rest of us to Harrison Co., Mo., where she married T. J. Williams, March 19, 1870; to them were born 8 children, 7 are yet living, one died in infancy. Her husband and six children were at her bedside when she died, the others living so far away they did not reach her until she was dead, as she was only sick a few days. She leaves a husband, 11 children, 13 grand children, one half sister and many friends and relatives to mourn her loss, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we believe that Jesus died and rose again; so them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. She died as she lived, ever looking to Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith. Not long since she wrote me, Dear Sister: It will not be long until that bright morning will dawn and we will see our Savior, for I believe he will soon come. But the night of her weary illness and suffering are ended; she has shed her last tear, has heaved her last sigh, uttered her last groan and sweetly sleeps in Jesus in the Blythedale cemetery by three other loved ones to await that morning when the saints who sleep will be called forth to meet the Lord in the air, so shall they ever be with him. For after sorrow comes the gladness, after mourning comes the rejoicing, after the storm comes the calm, after the darkness comes the sunshine: yes, sunshine of that eternal day. May we soon be there.

Yes, dear sister, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel,
But as death hath thus bereft us
God can all our sorrows heal.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in the grave so low.
Though no more will join our number,
Here no more our sorrow know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When again our Savior comes,
In his kingdom joy will greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

B. KELROY,
G. P. ALLARD.

We have a few copies of the book called "The Scriptures Opened: or Thoughts and Themes for Bible Students" by Robert Ashcroft. It is a work that has passed the scrutiny of such of our brethren as Benjamin Wilson, J. L. Wines, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Wilson, J. F. Wagoner, A. J. Eychaner and others. It contains 370 pages, strongly bound in cloth, with gilt lettering on the back and side. It formerly sold for $1.25, but we offer the few we have on hand at 75 c. each post paid.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

Brother Underwood:

Will you please say to the brethren and friends, that we still have on hand a fair supply of our little four-page tract, entitled "Sirs, What must I do to be saved?" and that a request with a penny for postage will bring them to your address. Yes, please send your name, request and address, and they will hasten to your home penny or no penny.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. Read X PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 23, 1901. NUMBER 4.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"We Establish the Law." Rom. iii. 31.

Notwithstanding much has been said and written on the so-called "Law Question," i. e., whether we, as believers in the gospel of Christ, are or are not under the law—that is whether it is to be our rule of action: there are still a great many with whom there exists a degree of uncertainty that possibly after all we may be under the law.

Of course, when I speak of the law, I mean the law of the ten commandments. And I deem it proper to show what the Scriptures say as to the relation to the law, of those who hope to be saved through faith in Jesus Christ. I invite the reader's attention to the 7th chapter of Romans, where the Apostle says at verse 6: "But now we are delivered from the law, being dead to that in which we were held." What "law" does he mean? Let us hear the Apostle himself. "Delivered from the law.....that we should serve (God) in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." But Paul, what "letter?" The letter of the law which was "written and engraven on stones." 2 Cor. iii. 7; Ex. xxiv. 12; xxxiv. 28, 29. There is no mistaking here as to what law is meant. It is the one that is called in the last mentioned Scripture "the ten commandments," for this was the only law that was written and engraven on stones. But we will hear the Apostle further: "What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid." Rom. vii. But what law is he talking about? He continues, "Nay, I had not known sin but by the law: for I had not known lust except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." v. 7. And what law was this? It was that "written and engraven on stones," which are the "ten commandments or words." See also Rom. xiii. 9.

This ten commandment law is the one from which the inspired Apostle positively and distinctly declares we are "delivered," have full release, so that those who have been baptized into Christ, in obedience to the gospel, are "not under the law, but under grace." Rom. vi. 14, 15. And again, "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone that believeth." x. 4. How can he be the "end of the law?" It is said that he is the object of the law; but the law itself continues still in force. The Apostle is here speaking of Israel, "who have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge." What were these zealous people doing or trying to do? "Being ignorant of (not knowing) God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness (which is that of the law. Phil. iii. 9), have not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God" (that of faith). Rom. x. 4. This righteousness is "manifested without the law" (or apart from it). Rom. iii. 21. And how manifested? "Revealed" in the gospel, through faith, as it is written, "The just by faith shall live." Rom. i. 17. But "the law is not of faith" (Gal. iii. 21); righteousness, however, is of faith, and that is the difference between the two. Here lies the secret of the matter. Faith is prompted and moved by love. Gal. v. 6. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor," and "is the fulfilling of the law." It does everything that the law requires; fulfils the righteousness of the law, and more; but above all, it has a different motive. The law said, "Cursed is every man that continueth not in all things written in the law to do them," and this "curse" meant that the transgressor must die without mercy. In this way those under the law were kept in constant fear and dread, and were, as the Apostle very properly said, in "bondage." Gal. ii. 4; iv. 9; xxiv. 25; v. 1. And even in this bondage, while the law provided for the remission of sins had been permitted through ignorance (Num. xv. 27-29), yet "the law made nothing perfect," and hence there was "a remembrance again made of sins every year." Heb. x. 1-3; Lev. xvi. But in Christ a new order of things prevails, as he has given us an example. He showed mankind how to love righteousness (right doing; "for he that doeth righteousness is righteous." 1 John iii. 7) and to hate iniquity (Heb. i. 9) from principle; and not even death was able to deter him in the performance of his Father's will. "Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience through the things that he suffered" (Heb. v. 8); yea, and was obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Phil. ii. 5-11. What was his motive in doing all this? His love to the Father and to principle, it is true; but no less also the Father's love to him. The Father set joy before him ("fulness of joy, and pleasures forever more," Psa. xvi. 11); but its obtainment lay in the path of suffering, of testing of loyalty even unto death. And in order to this "He endured the cross despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. xii. 2. Yet he did this, not only for himself, but "suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow his steps." 1 Pet. ii. 21. And again, "Forasmuch as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves with the same mind; for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1 Pet. iv. 1, 2.

And what is the motive power that should move the followers of Christ to action? Fear of an angry God? Oh no, but the love of God which places before us poor mortals the possibility of obtaining eternal life in God's kingdom and a joint-heirship and joint-rulership with his dear Son. 1 John ii. 25; 2 Tim. ii. 12. Where this is the moving power, there is no waiting to be told that it is wrong to have any other than the true and living God; or to make any image to worship; or to take his name in vain; or to neglect to take time to worship him; or to refuse to honor his parents, or fail to observe any other duty either to God or man. He loves to do right, and love is the fulfilling of the law, the law of right and duty. And so the letter which says, do or not do certain things is entirely superfluous to him whose "whole heart, soul, mind and strength," are captivated and engaged with the love of God, and who loves his neighbor as himself.

This, then, being the case, the old covenant, or law of the letter with its ordinances of divine service, its priesthood, altars and sacrifices were changed; it passed away, to give place to the new and higher law of the spirit—the law of love, in which the whole man is presented to God as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, through Jesus Christ.

But what about "establishing the law?" The Apostle says that through faith we establish it. Bear in mind that God once established or appointed the law as a rule of action for Israel, until Christ, the promised Seed (of Abraham, Gen. xii. 7.) should come; and anything man can do to either establish or annul God's law, would count for nothing. What was the object of law? What purpose did it serve? It was a schoolmaster to Israelites with a view to Christ, that we might be justified by faith. Gal. iii. 24. That, according to Paul, was the object of the law. Faith is the only principle upon which God will justify anyone, and this the majority in Israel at the time of the giving of the law, did not have; "for unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them, but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Heb. iv. 2. Hence, in order to compel them to be separate from other nations and before faith came, they were "kept under the law, shut up (by the law; held in bondage) unto the faith which should afterward be revealed." Gal. iii. 24. Did the law accomplish this? Most assuredly! It served to show the exceeding sinfulness of sin, to convince the transgressor of his wrong, but above all it separated Israel from the nations, that through them Christ, the Object of faith, might come as the Seed of Abraham. And so the Scriptures record that "when the fullness of time had come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption." Gal. iv. 4, 5. For unto them pertained the adoption. Rom. ix. 4; Deut. xiv. 1.

Do we make void the law by saying that we are not seeking justification and life through the law (Gal. iii. 21,) but through faith in Jesus Christ? Not at all. But as our text says, "we establish the law," as a most effectual means toward the end God had in view. But after that faith is come, let this be distinctly borne in mind, "we are NO LONGER under a schoolmaster," but are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. Gal. iii. 25, 26.

Genesis. Chap. 18.

1. And God appeared unto him, as he was seated at the foot of the mambrene oak at the door of his tent at midday.

2. And lifting up his eyes he saw, and lo, three men of prominence were standing above him; and when he saw, he ran to meet them from the door of his tent, and bowed with his face to the ground,

3. And said, lord, if I have found favor in thy sight, do not pass by thy servant; (born in the house the kind of a servant).

4. And let water be taken and let them wash your feet, and refresh yourselves under the tree.

5. And I will take bread and ye shall eat; and after that ye shall go on your way from which ye have inclined out unto your servant; and he said, Do even as thou hast said.

6. And Habraam hasted to his tent unto Sarra, and said unto her, Haste and mix up three measures of fine flour, and make cakes baked in the ashes.

7. And Habraam ran in among the cattle and took a tender and beautiful calf, and gave it to the man-servant and hastened the doing of it.

8. And he took butter and milk and set it beside them and they ate; and he stood beside them at the foot of the tree.

9. And he (the man called lord,) said, Where is Sarra thy wife? And he (Habraam) answered and said, Lo, in the tent.

10. And he (the angel he proved to be) said, Returning I will come unto thee during this season (year probably) to an hour, and Sarra thy wife will have a son; and, Sarra being at the door of the tent behind him heard.

11. Now Habraam and Sarra were elderly advanced in days; and the female menses had ceased occurring to Sarra.

12. And Sarra laughed saying to herself: It hath not yet occurred unto me until now; and my lord is an elderly man.

13. And the Lord said unto Habraam, why is it that Sarra laughed saying herself, Shall I in truth bring forth? And I have become old.

14. Shall an oracular word be impossible with (in the estimation of) God? In this period shall I return unto thee to an hour and Sarra will have a son.

15. And Sarra denied, saying I did not laugh; for she was afraid; and he (the angel) said unto her, No, no, but thou didst laugh.

16. And the men stood up and away from there and looked down at the face of Sodoma and Gomorra: and Habraam was going his way along forwarding them;

17. And the Lord said, I may not hide from Habraam my house-servant what I am doing.

18. And Habraam will become a great and vast nation, and all the nations of the earth will have been blessed in him.

19. For I know that he will co-ordinate his sons and his household after him, and they will watch to guard the ways of the Lord to do righteousness and judgment, so that the Lord may bring upon Habraam all the things that he hath talked in relation to him.

20. And the Lord said a cry of Sodoma and Gomorra hath become immoderate unto me, and their sins are very great.

21. I have come down therefore and am going to see whether they are coming to an end according to the cry that cometh unto me, and if not, that I may know.

22. And turning away from these the men went to Sodoma: and Habraam was still standing in the presence of the lord.

23. And Habraam drew nigh and said, Thou wilt not destroy a justified one along with an irreverent wilt thou? And the justified one will be as the irreverent.

24. If there be fifty justified ones in the city wilt thou destroy them? Wilt thou not spare all the place for the sake of the justified if they be in it?

25. Thou wilt in no wise do as this word is, that is destroy the justified along with the irreverent wilt thou? And the justified will be as the irreverent in no wise. O thou who judgest all the earth, thou wilt not be doing in a judicial way wilt thou?

26. And the lord said, If there be in Sodoma fifty justified persons in the city I will spare all the city and all the place for their sakes.

27. And Habraam answered and said, Now I have begun to talk unto my lord, and I am earth and ashes.

28. And if forsooth the fifty be reduced to forty-five justified persons, wilt thou for the sake of the five destroy all the city. And he said I will not destroy it if I find there forty-five.

29. And he continued to talk to him and said, And if there be found there forty? And he said, I will not destroy it for the sake of the forty.

30. And he said, Is it something, lord, if I shall talk? And if there be found there thirty? And he said, I will not destroy for the sake of the thirty.

31. And he said, Since I have leave to talk to the lord, and there be found there twenty? And he said I will not destroy if I find there twenty.

32. And he said, Is it something if I shall talk, lord, yet once for all? And if there be found ten? And he said, I will not destroy it for the sake of the ten.

33. And the lord departed when he had stopped talking to Habraam, and Habraam turned away to his place.

COMMENT.

1st verse R. V. says "oaks of Mamre" again should be "the oak of Mamre"—in another place the lofty oak, a well-known land-mark of that day. "At midday" instead of "in the heat of the day" R. V.

2nd verse R. V. says the men "stood over against him." Should read "above"—the word is "epanoo"—indicating that they either stood on higher ground as they approached or that there was something super-natural in their appearance.

3rd "my" inserted by R. V. "lord" a common form of respectful address to any superior.

Observe that although these were "angels" really they looked like men and didn't have wings probably. The whole context shows that Habraam supposed them to be men of mark and was showing towards them the usual eastern hospitality—one of the many instances of old Covenant record where "men entertained angels unawares." Do we ever do it in entertaining strangers now?

4th verse R. V. inserts "little" and it would not have been eastern courtesy for them to have washed their own feet—as R. V. gives the translation "Refresh" rather than "rest" too.

5th verse R. V. inserts "morsel" and "comfort ye your heart," no such thought in the text, but instead of it the text says "and ye shall eat" and "forasmuch" not in the text spoils the sense and changes the thought of the next to the last clause of the verse. Reread it.

"They said" R. V. should be "he said." There is no record in the whole account of more than one of the men doing any talking.

6th verse R. V. says "make ready," should read "mix up"—also "fine meal" should read "fine flour." Then "cakes" merely should read "cakes baked in the ashes" or "on the hearth." "Knead it" R. V. inserted, not in the text.

7th verse R. V. notice the differences of reading "took" instead of "fetched"—that is "picked out" the housemen did the rest of the work.

In the 8th verse the reader will observe there was only one tree even in the R. V.

In the 9th verse "they said" should be he said (the "lord" first addressed namely).

In the 10th verse "to an hour" omitted in the R. V.

In the 12th verse R. V. says "shall I have pleasure." There is no such thought in the text.

In the 13th verse R. V. inserts "a child" was "which am old" ever good English?

The 14th verse R. V. is not a translation at all; but an interpretation. Compare and see. "To an hour" also omitted by the R. V. in this verse.

In the 17th verse R. V. makes the last clause and all of the 18th verse a question. It is an affirmation and not a question. Also "vast" instead "mighty"—multitude rather than might is the idea.

19th verse reads "For I know that he will etc" and not as in R. V. "For I have known him unto the end that he may, etc." This makes the conclusion drawn in the last clause of the verse clear.

In the 20th verse the R. V. changes, "the lord" (the angel) to "the Lord" (thus leading the reader to suppose that there is a change of person at this stage of the narrative. There is no "because" in the 20th verse and the R. V. omits "hath become importunate unto me."

21st verse R. V. reads "I will go down now and see;" text reads "I have come down and am going to see" R. V. says also "whether they have done, etc." Text says "Whether they are coming to an end"—a very different thought and much more suggestive. And "I will know" instead of "that I may know."

22nd verse R. V. and from here on makes Habraam to be talking to "the Lord" instead of to his angel as at first. This is entirely unwarrantable and is theological bias. Besides it contradicts the specific Scripture that "no man hath seen God at any time." It is easier to infer that Habraam continued to go along with the three, or that two of the men went forward and the other tarried to talk with Habraam.

In the 23d "justified" instead of "righteous" R. V. Habraam was pleading for Loot and his folks.

"All" omitted by the R. V. in the 24th verse "al' the place."

The whole of the 25th verse R. V. is garbled and only an approximate translation. Read and compare.

In the 26th verse R. V. "all the place" omitted.

The thought of the 27th and 28th verses is substantially given in the R. V. also in the 29th. In the 30th verse there is nothing said about the Lord being angry, observe this. The thought of the 31st is preserved in the R. V. There is nothing about being angry in the 32nd verse either in the text. The 33d verse R. V. gives the thought well enough perhaps.

The Lesson of Patience.

Patience is not an easy lesson. It cannot be learned in a day. It takes most people years to master it, while some seem never to be able to learn it.

Yet it is an important lesson. Not to achieve patience is to carry both a weakness and a peril through one's years. An impatient man is always weak. He is not master of himself. He is like a driver of spirited horses which he cannot control and which run away with him. He is not able to rule his own spirit.

A strong man is he who has achieved self-control. He may have fierce natural passions and impulses, but if he is master of these he is strong. People sometimes speak of temper as an infirmity, something that is depraved, and ought to be destroyed or eradicated from the life. But temper is not in itself an evil thing. A man without temper is wanting in an essential quality of power. A person who cannot be angry is one without spirit. What we call a "bad temper" is one which cannot be controlled. It is a wild horse without a master at the reins. It is a ship with great engines, but without a helmsman. What is needed is not to crush and annihilate the temper, but to get it under the mastery of the will, to bring it under the yoke of Christ. Then that which heretofore has made so much trouble and wrought so much mischief by its violent outbreaks becomes an element of strength and a quality of beauty in the life.

A man bought a tract of land in a mountain region. On it was a wild stream which rushed down in a fierce torrent, through deep chasms and gorges, carrying destruction to the valleys below. The owner built a flume in the torrent, and now it flowed quietly down the slopes and turned great mills in the valley. Thus the wild stream became a source of useful energy, and its power, no longer destructive, became useful. That is what we should do with a bad temper—tame it, bring it under discipline, and compel it to use its energy for good, and not for evil. The secret of such a change is in getting the mastery of one's self. We have high authority for saying that "he that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city."

There is peril, as well as weakness, in the lack of patience. Many people in single moments of impatience have lost what they have been ten years in gaining. Ofttimes in an outburst of temper one says a word which can never be recalled, and which does irreparable hurt to a tender heart, perhaps hopelessly destroying a friendship.

In such moments, too, crimes are committed, from whose dark shadow the guilty one can never emerge. One with an uncontrolled temper is never safe, never knows what bitter word he may speak, what terrible thing he may do in a moment of anger.

It is most important, therefore, that the lesson of self-control should be learned, that we become master of our own life. This is a part, at least, of what patience does for us. Until we do get this power we are at the mercy of every wind that blows and of every storm of feeling or passion that arises.

One of our Lord's words sets this truth in very clear light. In the Common Version it reads: "In your patience possess ye your souls." In the Revised Version, however, it is: "In your patience ye shall win your souls." Thus we are represented as engaged in a struggle for our very life. If we fail in patience we should lose all. But if we are patient, that is, if we get the full mastery of our own spirit, and learn to endure and to wait, to meet the trials, sufferings and losses with faith, and in quietness and confidence, we shall win our life. Thus everything turns upon our achieving patience.

The time to begin to learn patience is in life's earliest years. Parents and teachers have a great responsibility in this matter, for it is in the home and in the schoolroom that the lesson must first be taught. Young people are naturally inclined to impatience. They are eager for results and do not like to wait. They are quick to resent injuries, real or imagined, and are not disposed to forbearance or forgiveness. They have strong feelings and passions and have not yet acquired the self-discipline which enables them to restrain themselves in temptation. They are impulsive and impetuous, and are easily discouraged by trials, not having yet learned by experience that it is faith which gives the only true victory, and that faith is always victorious.

Enough has been said here to indicate the seriousness of the subject. Patience is among the noblest of the virtues. It is divine in its beauty. God is wonderfully patient—if he were not, there would be no hope for any of us. Jesus was patient in all his life—with his disciples, with the thronging multitudes, with his enemies, in pain, in suffering, in all trial. If we would be master of our own life, if we would attain nobility and beauty of character, if we would be overcomers in trial, temptation, and suffering, if we would win our own soul, we must learn the lesson of patience.

Queen Victoria is Dead.

"Victoria R. I. by the Grace of God Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and Empress of India," died at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, at 6:30 P. M. Tuesday, Jan. 22, 1901.

For some months she had been very weak, and a break down of her constitution was threatened, but she had gone bravely on until last Saturday it was evident to the physicians she could not last long, and the members of the household were summoned. She lingered on and was able to recognize all as they arrived, until the last day she laid unconscious and at last peacefully, without pain or suffering she breathed her last.

To attempt to write a history of Queen Victoria would require a volume of hundreds of pages, and would be a history of the progress of the world for over a half century, and we can only venture to give a few of the important events of her long life and reign.

Alexandrina Victoria was born at Kensington Palace, London, May 24, 1819. She was crowned as Queen on June 28, 1837, being then a little past eighteen years old. Her father, the Duke of Kent, died Jan. 23, 1820. She was married to Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, on Feb. 10, 1840. Her first son, Albert Edward, was born Nov. 9, 1841, with the title Prince of Wales, and heir apparent to the throne. Sept. 1, 1842 she first visited Scotland. June 26, 1846 the famous Corn Law was repealed. Feb. 28, 1854 war was declared with Russia. May 1, 1859 was a national thanksgiving day for the suppression of the Indian Mutiny. In 1861 the Duchess of Kent, her mother died. Dec. 14, 1861, her husband the Prince Consort died. March 20, 1863 the Prince of Wales married Princess Alexandra. Feb. 29, 1872 the Queen was shot at by Arthur O'Connor. She was proclaimed Empress of India May 1, 1876.

For over 63 years the Victorian reign has lasted, the longest of any sovereign who has occupied the throne. Living, Queen Victoria was the ruler of the greatest empire of the world—dying, her old Scotch attendant said, "O, mon, she is just a dear old woman dying; all Majesty is gone out of her"—dead, she is a woman commanding the love and respect of not only her millions of subjects, but the whole civilized world, is bowed in grief, and acknowledge their loss.

She lived to an old age and was useful to the last. She has seen her Empire expand in Asia, Africa, Australia, and over numberless islands until it reaches the enormous figures of 12,150,000 square miles, nearly twice the size of the Russian Empire, and counting a population of 388,500,000. While England is a constitutional monarchy Victoria has always taken a prominent part in the affairs of government, and her hand was felt in all enactments affecting religion, education, industry, commerce or politics which has made Great Britain what it is today.

As a Sovereign Queen Victoria performed her duty with intelligence and sound common sense, coupled with a simple dignity that inspired respect in every one affected, and in consequence goes out as the best beloved, and will be the longest remembered of all the rulers of that unique empire upon which "the sun never sets."

It is not only as monarch, however, that Victoria will be remembered. Her home life counts for as much or more than that of ruler. When she came to the throne in 1837 the royal family of England was small and the line of succession centered in one girl of 18 years old. Now her children, grand children, and great grand children number seventy-three, she having lived to see the third generation of successors to the throne. Her eldest daughter is Empress Dowager of Germany, and her grand son the present Emperor, and among her grand sons and grand sons-in-law are a reigning Czar and a Grand Duke. Her descendants will wear the crowns of not only Great Britain but of Greece and Roumania also.

Queen Victoria ruled her home as she ruled the empire, with a gentle love and graciousness, with a moral and upright example, that created a model for all womankind. She was never a great scholar yet the education of her children was as carefully planned and worked out as any other line of domestic duties, that of Albert Edward being such as would fit him to take the sceptre. The English Government is so fixed that at no time is she without a ruler. The law being that the moment the Sovereign dies the next in succession is vested with authority, though the coronation ceremonies may not take place for months after. By this means the Prince of Wales is now King Edward VII. though he will not likely be crowned for some little time. He is a man concerning whom much has been said, but little is known to the world, from the fact that he has never interfered in any of the affairs of state while his mother lived. He comes to position with abundant education, the example and precept of his mother and the advisers she has had, and at the ripe age of near 60 years, in which he has had ample opportunity for observing well the progress of his empire and the movements of other nations. There is no good reason, therefore, why the new King should not be able to so conduct affairs as to reflect credit on his mother and himself, and to the satisfaction of the people he is placed over.

THE PASSING OF THE QUEEN.

Answers the cabin and the hunter's shed
The voice of mourning in the royal halls:
The shadow crawls up on the crowned head,
From out her gabled hand the sceptre falls.

Well, wrap her in the banner from her walls;
The word of sorrow, why should it be said?
Hark! up and down the earth gray honor calls
And the long glories gather round her bed.

Through all the years her people have been fed,
Yea, the ox has found in her stalls;
To islands of the sea her lines have spread,
Proud sons of song have sung her madrigals.

Come, robe her not in white and stand and weep;
Wrap round the banner-fold, and let her sleep.

There being five Wednesdays in this month, our next paper will bear date of Feb. 6, 1901.

"Nobody is so weak but he is strong enough to bear the misfortunes he does not feel."

"The fruits of the Spirit cannot eminate from carnal minded unkind people. Jesus says we may know what kind of a heart a man has by what he does."

It is a misfortune to have that feverish tendency to be critical which some exhibit—that unhappy nervousness about other people's failings. It destroys happiness.

"Jesus will not pass over an unrighteous life." Christ will not go the length of ignoring the actual state of the case; he will not accept an individual who has proved himself unworthy.

God only hears the prayers of those who are pleasing in his sight; the prayers of the wicked are an abomination; and there are wicked people who have taken the name of Christ upon them."

Cumer likens the kingdom to a net cast into the sea, which draws all manner of fishes both good and bad; therefore, we must not come into the community drawn together by the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom with the idea that it is a perfect thing.

"It is an easy thing to do good to those who do good to you; the world does this; but the goodness that Jesus expects, and will only approve, is a goodness done to those who cannot give a recompense. This is what Jesus commands, and we are his servants only if we obey."

It was to save the Laodicean Church from the ejectment; it was to save her from this catastrophe that the Spirit counselled her to buy gold and garments of him, and to anoint her eyes with salve that she may see. The divine object of rebuke, is repentance. Rev. iii. 15–19.

"The character of a gentleman cannot be separated from that of a Christian, without the destruction of the latter. A gentleman may exist who is no Christian; but a Christian cannot exist who is no gentleman. A gentleman never wounds the feelings of another wantonly."

The word "husband" is derived from the Anglo Saxon words, "hus" and "bond," which signify the "bond of the house," and it was anciently spelt "housebond," and continued to be spelt thus in some editions of the English Bible after the introduction of printing. A husband, then, is a housebond,—the bond of a house—that which encircles the family into the union of openness of love.

Christ saves men by undeceiving them, and controls their will by enlightening their understanding and winning their affection.

It is a moral impossibility to love everybody; but we can be kind to everybody; that is another thing. It is possible to take a benevolent interest in people. God does not love the wicked—neither does Jesus, for he is coming to destroy them; but he is kind and patient for the present, and so must we be.

The Papal income for the last year exceeded the expenses by about $3,000,000, which is added to the contingent fund which now amounts to over $30,000,000, a large part of which is invested in American securities. This shows that Pope Leo XIII. is a better financier than his predecessor was.

"Associations of the Hebrew Book are worth considering. From the first chapter to the last, the book of Job is the book of the tent and the desert, as truly as Ecclesiastes is the book of the palace, Proverbs the book of the city, Canticles the book of the garden, Romans the book of the forum, Hebrews the book of the altar, and the Apocalypse the book of the temple."

The Protestant Standard says:—"Defection from the faith of our fathers is of daily occurrence. In these days the stage from faithlessness is reached without any stoppages at a half-way house. Men hate truth, because truth will not tolerate error. To be popular in these days it is absolutely necessary to amalgamate truth and falsehood. The man who will not deviate from the path of virtue and rectitude, is a bigot, whilst the hypocrite, who is everything to all men is the idol of the multitude."

The Bible.

The following lines recently met with in an old English Magazine are too good to be thrown into the waste basket, we think,—and trust our readers will be of the same opinion:—

"Study it carefully,
Think of it prayerfully
Deep in the heart let its pure precepts dwell;
Slight not its history,
Ponder its mystery,
None can o'er prize it too fondly or well.

Accept the glad tidings,
The warnings and chidings,
Found in this volume of heavenly love;
With faith that's unfailing
And love all prevailing
Trust in its promise of life evermore.

With fervent devotion,
And thankful emotion,
Hear the blest welcome, responded to thereall;
Life's purest oblation,
The heart's adoration,
Give to the Savior who died for us all.

May the kingdom of love,
Soon come from above,
And Christ to the nations be given;
Then the ransomed shall raise
Joyous anthems of praise,
And earth be transformed into heaven."

The Divine Pronoun.

As illustrating the divine source and character of the Scriptures, we find the continual use of the divine first personal pronoun, we transcribe the following, in which it occurs thirty-six times in one chapter:—

LEVITICUS XXVI.

I am the Lord your God.
I am the Lord.
I will give you rain.
I will give you peace.
I will have respect unto you.
I will set my tabernacle among you.
I am the Lord your God.
I have broken the bonds of your yoke.
I will do this unto you.
I will even appoint over you terror.
I will set my face against you.
I will punish you seven times.
I will break the pride of your power.
I will make your heaven as iron.
I will bring seven times more plagues.
I will send wild beasts among you.
I also walk contrary unto you.
I will bring a sword upon you.
I will send the pestilence upon you.
I have broken the staff of your bread.
I will walk contrary unto you.
I will chastise you seven times.
I will destroy your high places.
I will make your cities waste.
I will bring the land into desolation.
I will scatter you among the heathen.
I will send a faintness.
I also have walked contrary unto them.
I will remember my covenant.
I will remember the land.
I will not cast them away.
I am the Lord their God.
I will for their sakes remember the covenant.
I brought forth out of the land of Egypt.
I am the Lord.

When we would convince men of any error by the power of truth, let us pour the balm of love upon their heads. Truth and love are two of the most powerful things in the world; and when they both go together they cannot be easily withstood. The golden beams of truth, and the silken cords of love twisted together, will sometimes draw men on with a sweet violence whether they will or not. Who of us who essay to speak for God would not be more effective workers for him if these hints were always acted upon? If we love God it is because he first loved us; and the manifestation of his love that drew us toward him was made in his amazing redemptive scheme. Let us try to use his love as the motive to obedience.

"Concordat."

How many people know the meaning of this word? Get your dictionaries and see, for you will likely see it often in the near future. Abstractly it is an agreement, a compact. Its secondary meaning is simply this: An agreement between the Pope, representing the Roman Catholic Church, and a temporal government, regarding the rights of the Church in the territory of the latter. Bonaparte acting for France, and Pope Pius VII. made a "concordat" in 1801 and it has lasted until the present time. This has been a "thorn in the flesh" to France for some years, and a bill is up for consideration in the Chamber of Deputies that is aimed at the abrogation of this compact in so far as it refers to the "religious communities." On Jan. 21 the bill was endorsed by a vote of 298 to 226 after a sharp debate. Count Albert De Mun speaking against the bill said "You have begun a religious war, and this will weigh heavily on you. As to us, we shall continue to combat you." M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the Premier, in speaking in favor of his bill said "These congregations have not only drained the money of the country, but have drained its conscience. Never have they been more dangerous than now. They are trying to gain control of universal suffrage, and to that end, are creating a new electoral government. We are tired of this slavery, and demand emancipation."

A letter from Rome written some days ago gives the position of the authorities there on this question. The headlines say the "French Religious Association bill is thought to mark a crisis in Church history." We append the letter that all may understand this important matter fully. No student will lose track of anything that so affects the Papacy. Watch.

The bill on religious associations in France is the cause of great uneasiness and anxiety. Ever since the beginning of the Dreyfus case the Holy See has gaged with infinite tact its diplomatic function in the whole body of French affairs. Though the Vatican was enlightened and well informed about the origin, the character and the objects of the anarchy, the Pope has shown a merciful reserve, and has opposed to all traps a calm, imperturbable front. In spite of its prudent conduct and calm firmness, Rome saw at the end of the affair the anti-clerical thunderbolt. Some day, perhaps, we shall know the amount of sagacity and pacifying action employed throughout by Leo XIII. to put off the settlement of accounts.

The hour seems to be at hand. What pressing skill and apostolic care the Holy Father has brought into play to ward off the outbreak of the storm I shall tell some day. Leo XIII. has no illusions of any sort about the drama which is beginning. It is the final attack on the policy of appeasement. The attack is both against religious peace in the interior and foreign action and against the sum total of Roman interests. The breach of the religious peace is the sign of the disappearance of the last French foreign privileges, whether at Rome or in the Orient.

The recoil of this "kulturkampf" against the congregations would bring about through the close connection of the causes a remarkable evolution in the relations of the papacy with the powers. The new position taken by the Holy See would bring about an incalculable displacement of forces on the chess board of politics. On account of the adhesion and "particular friendship" of the Pope for France, and of the close, permanent collaboration which were offered to the republic, and which the latter, therefore, rejected, the great and solemn debate of the House on the bill assumes at once the character of universal importance.

Such is the historical nature of the French religious question.

What disturbs the Holy See is the fact that M. Waldeck-Rousseau is a living enigma. It is not known how far his views extend, whether he will check action against the congregations or whether he will put through at once the law against the religious communities. Consequently, the outcome of the discussion is not known. Will it drag or will it be rushed through? No one can tell. For some days past it has looked as though the government were less violent than at the beginning. There is a lull. From the mode of procedure it looks as if M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the President of the Council, who has the absolute say in these matters, will insist on the rejection of the plan of separation, by which means the final decision of the question would be put off to a pretty indefinite period.

On the basis of a hostile intervention against the religious communities, it seems as if the government intends to make a marked distinction between different classes of congregations. Unless something unexpected turns up, which by the way, is likely, the Jesuit order seems marked out as a sacrifice. As concerns her religious communities, an arrangement with Rome would determine their legal existence. It would be an endeavor to extend the concordat. In the shadow of the parliamentary proceedings, a bilateral agreement would be made, and upon the "attack" would be built a "reconstruction." It would be rash to say now what the Pope would do eventually, or, assuming that there should be negotiations, to mark out the outlines of the new concordat.

At the last council at Baltimore, Pope, Bishops, and canonists defined clearly the relations between the congregations and the hierarchy. What will M. Waldeck-Rousseau's idea be?

The fact that he is a lawyer and a political man can throw light on that. It may be feared, perhaps, that in his mind he may wish to break the organization of the congregations, and stopping beyond the exact limits of jurisdictions may render agreement impossible. So far as incomplete information gives any idea of his real scheme, the President of the Council is believed to have the firm intention of restricting the influence of the "regular clergy" on the plea of giving new life to the essential organism of the church. Whether it be his tactics or a pretext or a clearly defined plan, that is the form in which it is believed the innovation will be presented.

The result of the first brief explanation is believed to be that Leo XIII. will permit no discussion of the plan, that he will tolerate no further anti-ecclesiastical action, however slight. No one would have supposed that Leo XIII. is so uncompromising. The reason is that, with his strict conscience, sure that he is right and that he is the stronger, Leo XIII. has come to the conviction that he has gone beyond reasonable bounds in the benefits he has conferred on the republic. Because he saved the protectorate and helped to form the Franco-Russian alliance; because he rendered impossible the "nationalization" of the colonial apostolate against a new form of hostility against France; because he brought round to the support of the republic the Right and the clergy, thus bringing down upon himself the insults and vengence of the republic's rivals; because, finally, he has put on its side all his power and aid, and rejected the most enticing compensations offered by Germany and the other powers, must Leo XIII. be requited with such insults and ingratitude? From the heights where the mind can take in the whole horizon, the religious debate seems thrilling, dramatic, big with consequences. It is a turning point, a barrier, a date. On its results the future depends.

Some of our readers are interested to know about the doings of Dr. John Alexander Dowie, so we give this account of his first meeting since his return to the United States. Our brethren who are conversant with the work and life of the Apostle Paul can judge of the likeness between the two. Comment is not necessary.

"Dr." John Alexander Dowie, General Overseer of the Christian Catholic Church, yesterday made his first public appearance in Chicago since his return from a five months' proselyting tour abroad. He addressed an audience of 8,000 persons in the Coliseum, half of the number being members of the church, who took an active part in corroborating their leader's statements by responding to his frequent calls for rising votes. Outside the big building many hundreds fought for admission after the doors had been closed.

The public exhibition served to introduce the additions and improvements which have found their way into the church ceremonial since the overseer's study of foreign customs. Dr. Dowie appeared not in full dress suit which he was wont to affect a year ago, but in robes resembling the vestments of the Episcopal Church.

After all the church dignitaries had arrived and donned their robes, Dowie made a spectacular entrance, alighting from his carriage and with his personal retinue sweeping in triumphal mein between a double row of guards who battled with the crowd. A few minutes later the processional was formed and Dowie introduced his recently acquired ritualistic ceremonies.

With the first peal of the improvised pipe organ on the platform the vested choir of 250 members began their slow progress from the rear of the hall, chanting as they marched. At sight of the "overseer" his followers rose as one person and cheered loud and long. Dowie smiled and bowed his way to the platform, where, after an effort, he succeeded in restoring quiet.

He spoke casually of the legislative bill proposed by the State Board of Health to curb faith healers, invoking a blessing on the Legislature for its guidance. He said he would send Elder Piper back to Mansfield, Ohio, this week to fight the people who oppose him there.

Dowie compared his position to that of the Apostle Paul. "He was even like me," he said, "in physique, for he was short of stature and had bandy legs and a bald head. He was defamed by the powers of Jerusalem, I by the Chicago press. But I want to say right here that I contemplate founding a Chicago daily paper which will lick them all. Zion can do it, but we are going to take our time about it. Chicagoans, beware of the fate of Paul's persecutors when you persecute me! As to my making a business of my religion, I admit it. I am a business man in the ministry. God called me from business to preach, but I have stuck to my former habits also."—Chicago Tribune.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Poetry.

What Shall it Profit?

What shall pleasure profit?
When the Christ appears?
Ho'ried gold and rubies,
Of the wasted years?
Will thou or earth's pour lovers,
Its joys and fancies gay,
Sell the future riches?
Give thy soul away?

Charm may siren voice a
With their varied strain;
And the band of friendship,
May weave the golden chain.
Per what is wreath of hand,
To lend aweet the tomb,
What the smile of flowers,
On the day of doom?

All thy treasured riches,
Bubbles fair of sin,
To the coming King-dom
Will not let thee in.
Not life, nor kingly glory,
Count thou with these things buy;
Pleading at the judgment,
Vain will be thy cry.

The First and General Resurrections.

In 1 Cor. xv. Paul first makes a powerful argument to prove that there will be a resurrection of the dead. After establishing the proposition by incontrovertible facts and an unanswerable argument, he proceeds to speak at length of the first resurrection. Nothing that he says in that chapter relates to the general resurrection except the argument by which he proves that all who die in Adam, will be made alive in Christ.

The following statements, "it is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption." "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body" do not refer to any member of the human family except those who will have part in the first resurrection. That Paul is speaking of those who will be members of Christ's bride is shown by verse 51, "Behold I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed."

So in 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17, Paul is speaking of those who will have part in the first resurrection and become members of the bride of Christ, and the living saints who will be changed [illegible] become members of the same.

Again it is said in Rev. xx. 6, "blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power." Please note that it is not said that those who have part in the first resurrection will be protected from the power of the second death, but the statement is that the second death hath no power over them. Why are they not subject to the powers of the second death? because they have been made immortal and cannot die. Death will not only not have any power over them, but it cannot have any power to affect them in any manner whatever. Therefore all who win a place in the first resurrection win everything. They will be free from the power of death; free from the power of sin, free from all manner of disease, free from pain, and if they shall have lived as they ought, they will be almost free from temptation.

All who have part in the first resurrection will be given immortal, incorruptible and spiritual bodies, which cannot be contaminated or corrupted in any way. We have no evidence that our Savior shed tears at any time after his resurrection. His sympathy and love for fallen humanity was greater and sweeter, if that was possible, than it was before; but it did not bring tears to his eyes. He had passed into that state where there are no tears, no sorrow and no suffering.

When the saints shall become his bride and members of his household, they too will have got beyond the time of their troubles. They will then share with Jesus all blessings vouchsafe unto the only begotten Son of our Heavenly Father and the bride which the Father has selected and prepared for him. None others will share such blessings; none others will ever rank so high or bear so intimate relations to the Father and the Son. Think of it, my dearly beloved in the Lord, are we worthy to occupy such a place? God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, is selecting a bride for his only Son. It is the only bride that he will ever select. The Father's house will only be blessed once by a bride and bridegroom. Only one marriage ceremony will be performed there. Only once will the walls of his mansion resound with the wedding march. Once and once only will the marriage bells ring out upon that heavenly air, and carry the glorious news to the uttermost parts of the world.

With what delicacy and modesty is all this performed. The Savior, like a modest lover as he is, is sent out by the Father to select and prepare his bride and return with her to the parental roof, viz. the marriage ceremony will be performed in the presence of the Father and all the holy angels. The angels accompany him. They approach the earth, when Jesus like a bashful lover, stops and sends the angels down to earth to gather the members comprising his bride and take them to meet him in the air. It is all done so quietly that the world is not aware of it. The first meeting of the bride by the Bridegroom is so sacred that it must not and does not occur in the presence of the gapping crowd, but it takes place beyond that etherial blue which will shut out the gaze of the vulgar and profane. Oh what a meeting that will be! I imagine I can see Jesus take good old father Abraham by the arm and introduce him to all the other saints, and then will come Moses and Mariam, David and Daniel, and then the one dearly beloved above all others, Mary the Lord's mother, I can almost see Jesus when he looks into her sweet face, all radiant with smiles and blushes, and says, by the expression on his countenance, how beautiful is my mother; and how I love her above all others because she is my mother. The motherhood of man is only excelled by the fatherhood of God.

After the marriage and the wedding festivities the Father will say to his children, now go to the house which I have long been preparing for you. There is much sin and wickedness in that world now, brought there by man's worst enemy, but I will at once bind him and cast him into a pit and keep him there for a thousand years, so that he cannot deceive the nations any more. By diligence you will soon be able to bring that world back to its pristine beauty and glory. Be faithful, be diligent, my children, and lo, I am with you even unto the end.

The bride and the bridegroom must be equal, otherwise it will be an ill-sorted match. The bridegroom is pure, the bride must be pure. The bridegroom is clean with good cleanly habits, the bride must be clean with good cleanly habits. The bridegroom has an immortal, spiritual body, the bride must also have immortal spiritual bodies.

My dearly beloved, do we, will we fill the measure? Have we each a wedding garment suitable for the occasion. Let us remember it must be of fine white linen, without spot or blemish. Read Rev. xix. 8, 9. Is our daily walk so upright and our Christian characters so clean and pure that we can truly say, our righteousness is like clean, white, fine linen? Are we prepared to pass through the golden gate which leads into the bride's chamber and there in the presence of our heavenly Father request him to accept us as one of that number, who shall comprise the bride of his only begotten Son. Jesus is in the personal presence of his Father, may not his bride have to face that ordeal, and be blessed with that privilege?

It would be worth a whole life-time of self-denial and self-sacrifice to have the privilege of standing afar off and watching the saints with Jesus in the lead, approach the beautiful gate. See them as they come all resplendent in their beautiful white robes, as they draw near the Savior beckons with his hand and they all stop. Looking to the east Jesus says, There is my Father's house, my beloved ones, the Father waiteth there, and they enter in through the gate into the bride's chamber and the door is shut.

Israel as a Nation. No. 5.

OVER POPULATION.

I have before me a copy of the World's Crisis of Nov. 28, 1900, containing an article from the pen of Wm. Sheldon. In this he sets before his readers a very formidable objection (?) to the restoration of Israel after the flesh to the land of Palestine. Of course no age-to-come believer, be he heterodox or orthodox teaches that little Palestine is to receive and hold one hundred millions of Israelites to begin with, and the prospect ahead of them of a rapidly multiplying population, swelling the number to countless millions at the end of the thousand years, so that a thousand Palestines would not hold them. Palestine is but a very small part of the land to which the tribes are destined by the providence of God to return. We will let the writer above notice here at first Palestine, a country no larger than the state of New Hampshire, is the spot on to which according to our theory God is going to crowd more than a hundred million Israelites to start with. His objection based upon over population may appear to the great majority of his readers insurmountable, and sufficient in itself to silence all argument on the other side. Now in the face of this objection and all others that can be brought forward a class of honest careful painstaking Bible students will hold that the twelve tribes of Israel according to the flesh will some day, not very distant, dwell in the large land (not little Palestine) promised to our fathers—and hold this on the ground that God has said so by his inspired prophets, "self-explosive" as the theory may seem to be. If God did not intend for us to believe in the restoration of Israel, why did he so teach through his prophets? The writer of the article under review believes, and has again and again stated, and others of equal ability have stated that the closing chapters of Ezekiel, portions of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Zechariah, Amos and Hosea do refer to a restoration of the tribes according to the flesh; that God did, in truth, contemplate their national existence in the land under national covenant and blessing, but hold that this was to have been carried out at the return from Babylon, or should have had a beginning then, but through failure on the part of Israel to comply with the conditions the scheme went by default. What would have been the result long before now if they had carried out the conditions as God desired they should? Over population as sure as two and two make four! Little Palestine! with a population many times more dense than Holland and no room left for field, vineyard or garden on which to raise the food necessary to support the millions reached by the multiplication of so prolific a people through a period of more than twenty-three hundred years. Now, the objection of over-population which Elder Sheldon urges with so much force against our theory (God's theory) of Israel's restoration may be urged with equal force against his own. It was very fortunate for Jehovah that Israel refused his counsel; otherwise the question of over-population up to the starvation point would have confronted him. Now, Elder Sheldon, if God at the time he made those promises and gave those prophecies in reference to Israel's national restoration had been perplexed with the contingency of over-population, he would not have been so rash as to reveal the plan or even conceive the purpose of Israel's restoration, seeing it would necessarily result in a condition of things truly appalling—poverty and wretchedness; and ultimately the starvation of millions. You may say the plan was not carried out, therefore the dreadful consequences were averted. But you admit that the glowing promises and prophecies, and the beautiful and orderly arrangement for re-settlement of the tribes were expressive of his beneficent wish toward them. If so, in his wisdom he must have foreseen the direful result—as to which there is not a whit's difference between your theory and ours, for the prophet says in recording God's promise, "I will place you and multiply you." This multiplication of the Israelites, as far as we can know, is left to go on indefinitely. Would it not be wiser, and more in accord with the spirit of humility to let the good Lord look after the question of population? instead of framing an objection out of it with a view to emptying whole pages of prophecy all meaning. If one of these wise objectors to Israel's national restoration had been present at the time the captive prophet was giving revelations as to the future of Israel we may suppose him to object thus: "Now Lord, if all the tribes refuse your counsel and you disperse them among the nations, then of course you will have nothing more to do with them nationally, and in consequence over-population of "little Palestine" will not trouble you—but, if they should act the part of wisdom and heed your counsel you have promised to restore them and to multiply them indefinitely and never pull them up but plant them for ever. Do you not see that the little country will in a short time be burdened with a population vastly beyond its capacity to sustain?" Elder Sheldon, with your view of the subject, to be consistent you would thus be obliged to object. When urging over population as an objection against our view of a still future national restoration of Israel you try to save the veracity of the prophets and of course God's Word, by saying, "it is all conditional and blame the agents some believers for so seeing it in that light. This is saving the veracity of the prophets at a fearful rate. So we will go on believing what God promised to do for Israel in the future. As far as the objector states facts about the ten tribes we agree with him; but he does not stick to facts very long, but falls to guessing, and his guesses are fairly and squarely in the face of Scripture teaching: and yet he expects his readers to accept, without questioning, his groundless assertions. This is a very cheap and easy way of disposing of the troublesome question. This point must be reserved for my next paper.

Mistletoe Glen.

Mistletoe Glen, is a dear little book for children, just issued from the press of "The Mennonite Publishing Co., Elkhart, Ind.

8 vo. beautifully bound in cloth—$1.00. The young authoress, Miss Neva Quackenbush, Warsaw, Ind., is a lovely Christian girl—a beloved Sister in the faith.

She has written this book with a sincere desire to do good, not only to the little ones into whose hands it may fall, but to others and to the cause of truth, by the means that may come to her through its sale. She has traveled quite extensively in our country, both in the north and in the south, and being thrown much into the society of children, has made them her study, putting the character of the little ones of her acquaintance, with life like realism, into the home-life of her "Busy-Bees." We enjoy the book; the mishaps, the holidays, the nutting party, and even the attempts at rhyming by the little ones. We like Uncle Thomas and Aunt Nancy. They are real beings, whom Sister Neva saw in the South. "The Spider and the Sweet Pea Vine," is a quaint picture from nature. The visit of Florence and her sister to the Fairie's home, is the story of the beautiful things any child with wide open eyes may see in the woods.

The evenings spent by the "Busy Bees" listening to the story of Bethlehem's babe, are just such evenings, in their restful, quiet, and full enjoyment, as Neva has enjoyed in her own blessed childhood.

Joe boy, and Nell, and Ruth and little Paul, are painted from life: we seem to know them all. They are not perfect children, but they want to be. And orphan Dorothy, how honest she is in her trustful confidence in God.

Buy the book for the little ones. We think it will help them to be good and do good.

S. Roxana Wince.

The above is a review of the little book written by our young Sister, Neva Quackenbush. We have a copy and while we have not read it so closely as has Sister Wince, yet from our examination of it we have no hesitation in most heartily recommending it to every household, especially where there are children. It is very neat in appearance, and no child could read it and not be benefitted thereby. It is a handsome gift book for the little ones. Send to the author Miss Neva Quackenbush, 727 East Center St, Warsaw, Ind., and get a copy and help the children who read it and help our young sister. The price is $1.00 post paid.

The Living God.

God is sweetness, meekness, gentleness, tenderness, abounding in mercy and loving kindness, pitying the miserable and naturally holding forth a helping hand toward them; yea, he is universally thus. There is not one miserable soul, not one perishing creature upon the face of the earth, but as he hath wisdom and power to help it, so he hath tender bowels and a heart thereunto. And it is not for want of something to be done on his part that souls perish, but the failing always was and still is on the creature's part. God loveth all his creatures and cannot but be good to them. He is outwardly good, he is inwardly good, but what stands with his love and mercy? He does not forget himself; he does not lose his nature in the manifesting of his righteousness, wrath and severity against sin and sinners.

Oh, that thou could'st dwell in the knowledge and sense of this; even that the Lord beholds thy sufferings with an eye of pity; and is able, not only to uphold thee under them, but also to do thee good by them. Therefore, grieve not at thy lot, be not discontented, look not at the hardness of thy condition; but when the storm and tempests of vexation are sharp, look up to him who can give meekness and patience, can lift up thy head over all and cause thy life to grow and be a gainer by all. If the Lord God help thee proportionately to thy condition of distress, thou will have no cause to complain. But to bless him

Obituary.

Richard Fowler died at his home in Port Angeles, Washington, of erysipelas, Dec. 12, 1900. Father was born Feb. 24, 1840, in Newry, Co. of Down, Ireland, at the age of twelve he came with his parents to New York City, where he resided until 1870 when he went to Kan., and in 1892 he came to Port Angeles. He served in the Civil War three years and nine months, being among the first to go. He belonged to the 82nd N. Y. Vol., he was wounded twice and spent six weeks in Libby prison; he was always a good Christian he was raised in the Episcopalian faith, and in 1874 joined the Advent Church, and was a firm believer until death, and died in hope of a resurrection to eternal life. He was twice married; his first wife died at Lawrence, Kan., in 1885. He leaves a wife, a sister, and a large family to mourn his loss, but we do not mourn as those who have no hope. He repeated the 23rd Psalm and sang "Nearer my God to Thee," a short time before he died. The funeral services were held in the M. E. Church, the pastor preaching the sermon. He was a kind and loving father and husband, and loved and respected by all who knew him.

"We shall sleep but not forever
There will be a glorious dawn:
We shall meet, to part, no never.
On the resurrection morn."

M. E. Fowler.

From the Waupaca, Wis., Record of Dec. 5, 1900 we learn that Dr. John Scott died at his residence in that city on Dec. 1, after a long illness. A letter from Bro. Scott received last October told of his failing health, so we were not surprised to learn of his death. He was born in New York State, April 24, 1835. He was a prominent member of the G. A. R. having served in a New York regiment, and being badly wounded at the battle of Fair Oaks. He went to Waupaca in 1867 and was married to Mary A. Vanduzee who survives him. Bro. Scott stood high in his profession, and gave attention to details in his work always. As a Bible student he was unusually keen and clear, making a special study of prophecy. Somewhat over a year ago he commenced a series of articles that were to be given in this paper, but was never able to finish them. He died in full gospel faith, and was buried on Dec. 3.

Illinois Brethren.

It was almost unanimously decided at our last State Conference to make Oregon, Illinois, the permanent location for the Conference. In addition to this it was decided to build a building having a dining hall and sleeping apartments. About half of the necessary funds was subscribed at the conference. An Appeal to the Brotherhood of the Church of God.

The Restitution is a weekly paper devoted to the interests of the Church of God, and we ask you to kindly read the following lines, and consider our mutual interests.

This paper gives you all the Church news, announcements of meetings and reports of them when held.

It gives notices of deaths of members in all parts of the country.

It gives exegetical articles that are of great value to the student.

It gives articles on prophecy, and all the news that leans on the fulfilment of the former part of God's word.

It contains articles that set forth the nature of mankind, and the Hope he has for anything hereafter.

It sets forth the Gospel of the Kingdom as preached by Christ and his Apostles, and insists that this Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things that concern the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, are what constitute the power of God unto salvation to him that believeth it.

It goes further, and insists that a holy life consistent with the high profession made, is just as necessary as belief—i. e. that Faith is well, and Works are well, and necessary both of them. That Sincerity alone will never save of itself.

It advocates the restoration of literal Israel to their own land as the only consistent way of fulfilling the promises made to the fathers.

It contains articles that show the necessity for a resurrection of the dead as the only means of attaining the blessings promised the faithful.

It gives articles showing that the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus the Christ must be just as literal as his first coming or his going away was; and that the saints have no hope of reward until that event; thus making that the most important of all the important events that will occur.

This paper urges all these matters, and many others of like nature, including immersion as the only mode of baptism, and at a cost of but $1.50 per year, about three cents a week. It contains more reading matter than 14 books that usually sell for $1.00 each, and is the very best means you can have of keeping posted as to the workings of the Church and the world as relating to prophetic doings.

It is not sensational, and is not controversial in the sense that it wishes to discuss matters that are of secondary importance, when there is so much that is of prime importance to lay before our readers.

It holds that personal attacks by brethren upon others is out of place, and only tends to work harm in place of good, and urges always the settlement of differences by private means.

With these points here set forth we solicit you to give us your subscription for the coming year, and we assure you that you will be many times paid for the expense. Try it and be convinced of what we say.

If you have not seen a late copy we will gladly send you a sample free on request.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

Report of Labor.

In response to a call from Salem, I left home Dec. 28, and went to that place, and thence to Howell Prairie where, although among strangers I found a cordial welcome.

A few pleasant days were spent with Bro. Amos Barker from whom we had been separated for three years, during which time he had resided at this place, and by public effort, and in private teaching had succeeded in reaching the ears of three faithful ones who loving the truth desired to be obedient to its command. Sunday we buried Sister Anna McCleave, and Mrs. Hattie McCleave in the watery grave. Bro. McCleave decided to wait a few days on account of ill health.

The day following we met with these dear ones and a few others who love the Master, and partook of the broken body and shed blood of our Savior. In the testimonies and prayer service which followed we felt that God was very near to us. As we beheld the streaming eyes and listened to words of praise and thankfulness, we were glad to be there, and Brother Barker should feel encouraged to press on with renewed energy in spreading the truth.

We held four meetings, when on account of bad weather we closed, and I bid farewell to these brethren, proceeding to Eugene, where I called on Bro. Belshaw, but did not find him at home. His youngest daughter proved a royal entertainer, showing me about the city, which is nicely located and has considerable of interest.

Jan. 3, we started for California in time to get caught in the great snow blockade of the Siskiyou and Sacramento mountains. We started up the mountains with eight engines and nine coaches and reached the summit without much trouble. Here we found eleven feet of snow, then for fifty hours we battled with snow and landslides, eating when and where we could, and making the most of a rough experience.

Grand and beautiful were the mountains in their wealth of snow, reflected in the moon's clear rays. A few hours more and we were among the green fields, the palms and the oranges. We will report future labors. May the merciful Father watch over these who have taken his name upon them, and be a source of strength and joy to them.

Pray for us in our work.

EDWIN E. GROAT.

Please say in the paper that if any want my labor this winter, I would gladly go if they will write me at Galesburg, Mich.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400 00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel; repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Habit.

"Habit at first is but a silken thread,
Fine as the light-winged gossamers that play
In the warm sunbeams of a summer's day;
A shallow streamlet rippling o'er its bed;
A tiny sapling, ere its roots are spread;
A yet unhardened thorn upon the spray:
A lion's whelp that hath not scented prey;
A little smiling child, obedient, led.
Beware! that thread may bind thee as a chain.
That streamlet gather to a fatal sea;
That sapling spread into a gnarled tree;
That thorn, grown hard, may wound and give thee pain;
That playful whelp his murderous fangs reveal;
That child, a giant crush 'neath his heel."

Death Does Not End All. No 2.

As to whether death ends all or not, depends upon the party dying either being in or out of Christ. Death will most surely end all in the case of those who will not fall in with the overtures of mercy as revealed in God's Word.

Those who wish to further consult the statements of Mr. Swift, pastor of the Wesley Methodist church, will find them in Article No. 1, in the issue of Jan. 2.

Among other things Mr. Swift said: "Man has the power of thought. Now thought is not a property of matter."

We find here two statements.

1. That man thinks.

2. That thought is not a property of matter.

The statement that "man has the power of thought," is an assertion which is sustained both by science and Scripture.

But the affirmation that "thought is not a property of matter," is both unscientific and unscriptural.

Now, as it is admitted that man has the power of thought, then in order to show thought is a property of animated matter, it will be necessary to show from the Scriptures that man is in fact material, and not immaterial. Now, if it can be clearly shown that man is material, (and it is admitted that he has the power of thought,) then it will be proven that thought is a product of organic animated matter.

In God's Word, you will find that the noun man, is never applied to either the "spirit in man," or the "spirit of man." It is never applied to an immateriality, but to the literal, visible, physical organism, which we commonly call man. If we refer to the account of the creation of man as recorded in Genesis, we read: "God formed man out of the dust of the ground." Then God formed or built man out of the dust of the ground, that being the case, then Paul's comment was correct, when he said: "The first man is of the earth earthy." It is a law of nature, that like begets like, and if the "first man is of the earth earthy," then his descendants must likewise also be "of the earth earthy." It is that which is of "the earth earthy," to which the Scriptures apply the noun man, and never to the word spirit. This is further confirmed by the phrase in Genesis: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

Man ceases to think when he turns again to dust, Psa. cxlvi. 3: "Whose breath goeth forth; he returneth to the earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

This is but a natural result if "man has the power of thought," as Mr. Swift says; and the noun man is applied (not to the spirit) but to that which is of "the earth earthy," therefore, when he turns again to earth, "in that very day his thoughts perish," as Holy Scriptures says. Do you in your heart really believe God's Word, Mr. Swift?

If you believe that thought can be generated independent of organic living matter, please demonstrate it by example. If your theory cannot show a practical demonstration, it is worth but very little.

We further find that imperfect thinking is a result of an unhealthy condition of the physical system. Even an impoverished condition of the blood, mixed with a poor circulation, will materially affect sound thinking.

Why is it that people who possess "large and deeply convoluted cerebrums," do superior thinking to persons not so highly favored, if thought is entirely independent of organic animated matter? Is it not a fact well-known to scientific men, that thought is never produced apart from organic living matter? Then why do you affirm that thought is not a property of matter?

Mr. Swift says that thought is "antecedent to all organization, and cannot therefore be the result of organization."

If you can show that thought is antecedent to all organization, it would destroy the theory that it is a result of organization, but you present no demonstrable proof. Scripture and demonstrable proof, are all on the side of thought being a result of organized animate matter. The Scripture previously quoted from Psa. cxlvi. 4, shows that when man becomes disorganized, by turning again to dust, "in that very day his thoughts perish." In fact, Holy Scripture distinctly affirms that "the dead (disorganized matter) know not anything." That certainly is an absolute negation of all thought, consequent upon the disorganization of animate matter.

Our avenues to knowledge and thought are through the five senses, and those senses are never active, except through animate organization. What could we learn even by judgment and deduction, apart from those senses? As for instance, when sight discerns objects, distance by judgment may be measured from object to object.

If the soul, or spirit, is uncompounded, and inorganic, and has neither form, substance, weight, or size, and is immaterial, it is in fact a most complete nonentity—nothing.

Give the best definition you can of the word nothing, and you will have the modern conception of the words spirit or soul.

Can you conceive of an inorganic immateriality evolving thought? Such a conception is neither Scriptural or scientific.

Now, I must confess, that my aspirations with regard to the life to come, reaches out after something more real than an inorganic immateriality. I cannot conceive of such a condition being worth striving for. To me, it seems equivalent to a complete annihilation.

We see no manifestation of life except through some organic environment. Mortal life is manifested through an environment that is subject to dissolution. Eternal life will be manifested through an environment that will be imperishable. We know nothing of life apart from its proper environment.

I cannot see what pleasure any one can take in anticipating a future said to be inorganic and immaterial, something (or more properly a nothing) which is phantom-like, not having longitude, diameter or circumference, weight or size, and does not occupy space. That is about as near annihilation as we can possibly arrive at.

Preachers who spend their time preaching such an etherial, gaseous, phantom-like non-existence, ought to be generally known as annihilationists, for we cannot conceive of such a condition as being an existence at all.

Mr. Swift does not seem to have conceived the thought that spiritual, or more properly spirit-beings are just as real as a person in the flesh. It is not necessary in order to be a spirit-being that we must become an inorganic immateriality. Let us consider the case of angels. See Heb. i. 7: "Who maketh his angels spirits." See also verse 14: "Are they not all ministering spirits?"

Here we have spirits, who have real, literal, organic beings. They were so real, that they took dinner with Abraham, and eat fat veal, which an inorganic immateriality could not do, and yet these angels were "spirits."

With regard to the future life Jesus said that those who should be accounted worthy of the resurrection, should be made "like unto the angels," neither shall they die any more. They could not be made like unto the angels if they were made like phantom ghosts. They will be real material, spiritual beings.

After Jesus rose from the dead, he also was a real spirit being. Thomas was invited to handle him. He also did eat material food, just like he used to do in the days of his flesh.

A person may take pleasure in contemplating a real future life. For such a life with all its attendant blessings we can work with a will. I will now close this paper by quoting a verse from the pen of A. J. Eychaner:

"We hold all substance, what denotes
The mystical sectarian gains:
An immaterial soul they choose,
An immaterial heaven and hell;
For such a soul we have no use,
In such a heaven we could not dwell."

TOWARD THE LIGHT.

"I am the light of the world.....while I am in the world. John viii. 12; ix. 5.

The first word of Jesus this side his open tomb was: Rejoice! That was his salutation to the holy women as he met them running, full of fear and great joy, in obedience to the angel in the tomb, to "Go quickly and tell his disciples and Peter: he is risen from the dead." Jesus said to them, "Be not afraid, go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, there shall they see me." When he had assured them of his identity, he said: "All authority is given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."

Those timid men did their work well, supported by his assurance, "Lo, I am with you alway." In one life-time they compelled the Greek and Roman world to study the new religion. A discussion and struggle of nineteen hundred years, and other religions are on the defense for existence. All mixtures have been tried; all degrees of dilution have proved insipid. Movements in many quarters have long been on foot to rejuvenate and regenerate Christianity. One of the latest suggestions is a Pan-Christian Church, proposed by some Methodists. Probably before all the Methodist sects get into the Pan something more practical will claim attention. Would a Christian trust (without more faith), or a sect syndicate do better than the World's Evangelical Alliance, formed about fifty years ago to "convert the world?" If they had believed the Bible—and it was preached at them strong from the start—they would have known that the world could not be converted. Willful, ignorant Christian preaching and prayers against the Bible will be no more effectual than the prayers of the prophets of Baal. The "week of prayer"—the first week in January—for 50 years has proved this. Jesus had said that the wheat and tares should grow together till the end of the world, and Paul and Peter that the last days would be "perilous" days of "scoffers;" and yet all the leading sects of Protestant Christians have for more than 50 years combined and defiantly persisted to preach and pray against Jesus and his Apostles. As the world and self-confessedly the Christian sects, have been growing worse all the time, would not a change of exercises be in good taste—to practice earnest repentance, and honest study of the Bible on the subject?

But the Pope comes to the rescue of the Protestant sects with a beautiful ode in Latin, concluding with a prayer that all Christians may finally be united under one creed and in one fold," Chicago Record, Jan. 14, 1901.

Too much conflict of interests for "one fold," and too little faith in the Bible for "one creed." Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and Catholics—many unreconcilable sects of each and many hundreds of other sects, with many years of graceless quarrels piled up—what a happy family. Of all impossible things, that is the most impossible and yet that is the stuff simple Christians have been deluded with ever since Daniel Whitby invented the temporal millennium 300 years ago. And that folly, exploded thousands of times, is still preached from the most popular pulpits—because people like to pay for being deceived.

"But they are changing their creeds;" yes, how? Toward the Bible? No; against the Bible. "Impossible of belief," say the Methodists. Presbyterian revision is in the hands of an ex-president of the United States, a justice of the United States Supreme Court, and two other gentlemen. It is understood that the change, if any, will be in the wording, not in the meaning, of the creed. "Damnation of Infants" is in the creed. See Christian Herald, Jan. 9, 1901, p. 32. "A lady who was once a Baptist, but is now a Presbyterian.....says she has discovered that that church believes in the damnation of infants, and as her three children have died she is distressed beyond measure by the aforesaid doctrine." She wrote the editor, Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, about it. He admits it is there, and says: "The Presbyterian Church will at the next meeting of the General Assembly send flying that passage in their creed, and goes on to joke how it may have got in while the "holy fathers were preparing a creed for the Presbyterians for all the centuries.....It may be that some 'practice hand put in its work while the old theologians were asleep in their chairs after their exhausting labors in explaining the Eternal Decrees." Cruel comfort for a mother distressed for her children. The great and good Talmage, creed-blinded against the Bible and sect-bound against humanity, could do no better. Yet he is kind enough to admit as the first article in his Christian Herald for Jan. 9, Prof. W. W. White, D. D.'s sensible scheme for "A College for Bible Teachers." Nothing is more needed. Nothing is more intractable than men highly educated on purpose to teach the Bible. No others are so imperious to the plainest Bible truths. We are glad to see an effort made at the top. If they can climb over Plato, they will see in all the Bible an effulgence of glorious truth they had never dreamed of. Prof. White says: "While at Yale as far back as 1887, I began to realize how prevalent is the ignorance of the Bible even among theological students and ministers, and to appreciate the importance of the study of the English Bible."

Though enjoying his theological work, four years in Xenia Seminary, two years with Mr. Moody in the Chicago Bible Institute, and two years for the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. to work among college men in India and Ceylon, he "felt cramped and convinced that he ought to give himself more exclusively to English Bible work." Attending "fourteen representative conventions of students and missionaries in all parts of India and Ceylon, one of the strongest impressions he received was the need (confessed by scores of missionaries of all denominations) of a more thorough knowledge of the Bible on the part of those going to the foreign field." To supply such a need at home and abroad he is founding "a Bible Teachers' College" at Montclair, N. J.

The faculty includes such distinguished names as Rev. Francis L. Patton, D. D., L. L. D., President of Princeton University; Prof. Marcus Dods, D. D., of the Free Church Theological College, Edinburgh, Scotland; Rev. Henry G. Weston, D. D., President of Crozier Theological Seminary; Professor Bosworth, of Oberlin; Prof. Jacobus, D. D., of Hartford Theological Seminary; Prof. Rogers, of Drew; Rev. W. M. McPheeters, D. D., President Southern Theological Seminary; Prof. Balantine, of Springfield Bible Training School; Rev. John H. Barrows, D. D., President of Oberlin, and others.

"Our students assured represent not only America, but India, Burma and China also.....We propose that the student shall let the Bible be its own interpreter. We propose to reverse the usual order, and have men go to the Bible itself before they go to helps, to make up their own minds independently of the opinions of others."

Good so far. Many thousands have been doing just that thing more than 50 years, with great benefit to themselves and others. That is the only way to be fair with the Bible.

Dear Restitution:

I cannot afford to do without the dear old paper, as I am almost alone in the faith. I distribute literature and get some almost convinced of the truth, yet they will drift with the tide of the world. If we could get some of the able brethren to preach here at Lick Branch, Ark., I think some good could be accomplished. I would be glad if some brother would call on us.

Yours in the faith.

J. J. MAY.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

Thanks to all the dear brethren and sisters for the many kind words of encouragement contained in the pages of the paper through the past year. I am alone in the faith in this city and could not do without THE RESTITUTION; for it tells me of many things which I am longing to hear, it tells me of many words of our Savior's coming to restore his people and set up his kingdom. Let us have our lamps burning, so that when he comes we may be counted among his children.

I am as ever, yours in the one hope.

Away back in the early days of the proclamation of the kingdom of God by Joseph Marsh, John Thomas, H. L. Thomas, C. F. Sweet, B. V. Reed, L. H. Chase, J. M. Stephenson, R. V. Lyon, C. R. Chowa, J. B. Cook and many others whose lives were spent in the cause of the truth, and of whom some, like the autumn leaves touched with the cold chilling blast of winter, loosened their hold on the parent stem, and dropped to mother earth, waiting and sleeping until the spring-time, when the refreshing dew of heaven's power, manifested through the coming Man, shall cause them to come forth in immortal youth. In those early days of the writer, he started on his journey for the highland of glory. Many changes have taken place since then to encourage and strengthen our faith, that we are nearing the closing of Gentile times. We have passed our seventieth mile post, and a little in the distance can be seen the next finger-board, pointing the way to the age of restitution. God grant the old man with all the faithful an abundant entrance there.

THOS. CROSKRITE.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

For you who are gathering together from all over the country to attend our annual Love Feast, I have a most comforting text, it is this:—"The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him, but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him." Ezra viii. 21-23. Ezra in marching from Babylon to Jerusalem, with the released captives, needed not to ask of Artaxerxes a band of soldiers and horsemen to help him against the enemy. There was a higher Power to whom he could appeal, and on whom he would allow no doubt to be thrown. He had only to "proclaim a fast at the river Ahava, that he and his people might afflict themselves before God, and seek of him a right way for themselves, their little ones and their substance." We can rejoice with Ezra, that neither do we need to apply to earthly rulers for an escort to protect our released ones, while we are marching to the New Jerusalem. "Our God is a sun and a shield, to all who put their trust in him." Let us look to him in fasting and prayer, that he may show us the right way, lay his loving hand upon all of us for good, and bring us,—in this new and anxiously looked for century, to the glorious kingdom we have been waiting for. In hopeful attitude.

Editor Restitution:

In my weakness I will try to write a few lines to the love feast of the year 1901. I can say with Paul, "I am not ashamed of the gospel for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth it." Peter says, "repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." I am glad to say that I had the happy privilege of hearing the most of Brother Wagoner's discourses while in Virginia. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. I was much edified and built up in the most holy faith. Oh, how I was made to rejoice when we gathered around the water's edge and saw him plant my dear father, and husband, and another sister in the watery grave to walk in newness of life. May you all pray for my dear husband as well as myself, that we may have a part in the first resurrection, for on such the second death hath no power. Oh, what a happy reunion when husband and wife are made to see the truth alike, and be united in the one faith, and realize that there is no other name under heaven whereby they can be saved, but the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. The time draweth near when he is coming to be King over all the earth. Zech. xiv. 9. But who may abide the day of his coming? who shall stand when he appeareth? Sing and rejoice; for lo, I come and will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord. May we all share in the blessings of that time. Let us strive one and all to be ready to meet him and receive a crown laid up for those that love his appearing. Pray for God's blessing upon you all until he comes.

Editor Restitution:

The year 1900 has gone and I am still among the living, and with all the trials of this life I am still strong in the faith. I believe in the One God and the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who was begotten by the power of the Word of God, and was born of the Virgin Mary, and that he is the Seed of the woman that will bruise the serpent's head, and that he died and was buried, and was raised from the dead never more to die again, and hath power to give eternal life unto all that will come unto him, and that he will come again to reign on earth, and that all that are faithful will be made kings and priests and reign with him. I think the signs of the times bespeak his coming near. I am keeping my eyes on the powers in the East. Those that are watching these things can see what is coming, but the world is blind, they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. It seems that it is no use to talk to them but I always put in a word for my Lord and Master when I can and try to show them what is coming on the world, but it seems that the time is here that if you are not into every thing that comes along you are not working for Christ or the good of humanity, but everything has its day and thanks be to God the day will come when the faithful and true will be blessed with all the good that is promised to those that love him and have kept his ways. THE RESTITUTION makes its weekly visit to me. I do not see how I could do without it for it and my Bible are all the preachers I have. It is a pleasure to me to read the many good articles in it. I like to read Brother J. L. Wince's articles on "Israel as a Nation," for without their restoration our hope is vain. It does me good to know that they are making ready to go home. We can see a shaking among the dry bones. I like to read the many letters from the ones of like precious faith. Let us keep our lamps trimmed and bright, so that when the Bridegroom comes he will find us ready to enter into the marriage supper and be with Christ forevermore. It seems to me that some are running too fast and are trying to do the work assigned to others. I fear they will find out their mistake when it is too late. We all have a work to do but we can only do the work assigned to us and that is, to keep his commandments and teach others the way of life and salvation, and there is a better that will follow that will gather together the Bride for the marriage of the Lamb.

Submitted in love of the truth.

Who is wise? He who is willing to learn from every man. Who is mighty? He who conquers his own lusts. Who is rich? He who is contented with his lot. Who is to be honored? He who honors his fellow men; as it is written: "I will honor them that honor me." 1 Sam. ii. 30.

"The tombs about Alexandria contain the dust of once proud princes as well as the dust of the plebians. Much of this dust has been taken out and sold as a fertilizer, and is known in the trade as "Egyptian guano." Four thousand years ago no pains or cost was spared to honor this dust now so dishonored."

Baron Wilhelm Von Rothschild, head of the banking firm of Rothschilds died Jan. 25, at Frankfort, aged 73 years. He was a peculiar man in many ways. When traveling he was accompanied by his own cook and cooking utensils sufficient for an entire household. He would never eat food unless it was cooked in a vessel blessed by a rabbi.

"It is said of a Highlander that he bought a barometer and afterward complained that it made no improvement in the weather. Self-examination will be of no advantage unless it reveals our failures and deficiencies, and invites us to improvement. The examination of symptoms without the doctor's remedy is useless."

"There is no pain like that of burning. Put your finger in the candle for a moment if you doubt this. Fire is the most destructive of all elements. It is of all elements the most opposed to life. Christ will burn up the chaff with an unquenchable fire,—it consumes utterly all the fuel and goes out. It does not burn on and on forever."

The extension of Russian influence and power in Asia, is pushed forward without delay of any kind. A Russian embassy to Tibit was received with great friendliness by the Dalai Lama, the spiritual head and temporal ruler of Tibit, and a special delegation sent to St. Petersburg was personally received by the Czar. The London Observer commenting on the incident says:—"The incident shows with what ceaseless energy the diplomacy of England's great rival is at work. Not even the Chinese crisis, which engages the attention of Russia so strongly, has prevented her from pushing her interests on the road to India. And Tibit is of the utmost importance to the masters of India. Warren Hastings knew it, and he opened friendly relations with the Dalai Lama a hundred years ago; but somehow the connection was not continued. Tibit is rich, and its trade is worth much; yet although India is near, the trade of Tibit goes to far-off Russia. Russia has managed in such a way that her own emissaries are welcome in Tibit, while Britons are refusal admittance, and the Asiatics are led to think that England is a waning power."

The love of the world ignores God, fixes on the present only, and has relation to the mere surface of things.

"With Christ the things of God were all in all—his very meat and drink. On the more concerns and relations of ordinary life, he set very little value."

On the 20th of January it was our great joy to induct another into the Anointed Jesus for the remission of sin. And we now introduce to the church scattered abroad,—Sterling Groves, aged 16, who has been raised by believing parents, and has had the privilege of attending the Sunday School, and is well rooted and grounded in the truth. He has been looking and longing for the time to come when he would be admitted to the household of faith, and this inspires the hope that he will be a faithful soldier of Jesus Christ, and receive a crown of life at last.

"Take care of your thoughts. Sin begins in the heart. If you can keep your thoughts pure your life will be blameless. The indulgence of sinful thoughts and desires produces sinful actions. When lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin. The pleasurable contemplation of a sinful deed is usually followed by its commission. Never allow yourself to pause and consider the pleasure or profit to be derived from this or that sin. Close your mind against this suggestion at once, as you would lock your house against a robber. No one becomes a thief, fornicator or murderer at once. The mind must first be corrupted. The wicked suggestion must be indulged and revolved in the thoughts, until it loses its hideous deformity, and the anticipated gain or pleasure comes to outweigh the evil of the transgression."

Some one with a taste for statistics gives out this result. In the United States in 1801 there were 2,340 churches with a value of $1,500,000. In 1901 he finds 187,481 churches, valued at $724,971,372. In this country are found 26,000,000 church members, and it cost to keep up their different interests the sum of $287,047,800 during the year 1900. In the world last year were found about 500,000,000 so-called Christians, and it cost to maintain their work, $1,000,360,494. Another fellow gathering figures together tells us that the city of Chicago has 6,371 saloons, which if placed side by side would line a street on both sides for a distance of 15 miles. These saloons sell liquors to the amount of $57,000,000 annually, and they pay the City a revenue of $3,162,170 each year. If the empty beer kegs were placed end to end those used in a single year in this one city would reach from Chicago to New York.

A special dispatch to the Chicago Tribune of recent date has this concerning the Jews in Palestine:—"Nissan Bahar, the founder of the elementary technichal school at Jerusalem, under the auspices of the Israel alliance, passed through London today on his way to New York and discussed the future of Zionism in Palestine. He said the concession by the Porte to native Jews and others who had been domiciled for a long time in the Holy Land to become owners of rural land was of great importance, but he would advise those who contemplated buying land to do so quickly, for if any extensive purchases were made on orders, secret or open, they would be sent to Palestine and would result in the withdrawal of the concessions. Speaking of the present position of the Jews in Palestine since the change of ownership occurred, Bahar said:—"It cannot be denied that the colonies are passing through a severe crisis, but I am not without hope that the difficulties will be settled satisfactorily. You see, the colonies have been transferred from a paternal hand to an administrative one. Baron Edmund Rothschild looked upon the colonists as his children. They regarded themselves in this light. They have been accustomed to receive help, and help from without is weakening. In a way can only be found of speaking to their hearts it is quite possible to make the colonists self-independent and ever ready to make a sacrifice. It is not difficult to lead them, for they are accustomed to do what they are ordered.' Bahar denied that, owing to dissatisfaction many colonists were leaving the country, but he admitted that some workmen desired to establish themselves in Egypt and elsewhere. As to the actual working of the Jewish colonies wherever the land is well cultivated he said one may be sure it belongs to Jews.

Emperor William of Germany was 42 years old Jan. 27, and was appointed a Field Marshal of the British army by King Edward, who then gave him with his own hands the insignia of the Order of the Garter set with diamonds. This the Queen had intended presenting him on his birthday. These acts are presumed to more closely unite the two Monarchs, and make any rupture between the two countries impossible.

Under the heading of "Doubt in Divinity Class some prominence is given to the "shock" the professors have received at the skepticism found among the students of the Divinity Classes at the Chicago University. These professors are "surprised and grieved" at the state of mind found among the young men who are supposed to be fitting themselves for the pulpits of their various churches. This University has been endowed and received so many gifts since its conception only a few years since, and has made so much stir in the educational world, especially of the middle west, that it has drawn to it very many students. From the first, when Dr. Harper began his work with this school, he took the stand as one of the advanced class of "Higher Critics." Much of the Bible was uninspired, and the whole book was the work of unscientific and unlearned men,—men who were far behind the scholars of today in scientific methods of thinking. This sort of teaching started with the President of the institution, and has been kept up all through its history, and while the professors say they see no reason why such old condition in any way reflect upon the fitness of the Bible writers, to do their work, yet the students get from them no idea of reverence for the Word of God, nor love for the God who inspired the writers. So we find them exactly as we should expect, and we wonder at the professors being "surprised" when they are informed that these "scientific" students are skeptical regarding the resurrection of Christ, the immaculate conception, Christ walking on the water, feeding the multitude etc., and boldly say "If the Christian Bible is not up to the standards of modern scientists, would it not be advisable for scientists to formulate an up-to-date Bible to take the place of the old." It is useless to attempt to change these students now. Their whole education has been along lines that filled them with the idea of this day science, and a continual comparison with the crude learning of the ancients. The only legitimate outcome we can see is just what the professors now find. Instead of being "shocked and grieved" they ought to be proud that the students under them were able to so completely compass the instruction given them. If these professors and students will turn to that unscientific and out-of-date book they will find one writer there who was able to look on down to this very time and draw a pen-picture of themselves with most "surprising" accuracy. It is surprising to us that they never noticed the words for they are in a prominent place—the first few verses of 2 Tim. iii. will fit nicely.

Religion by Proxy.

The Rev. J. Clifford, M. A. a London Clergyman, in a recently published roll, says:—"Members go in and out as though they could never have any interests in common, speaking to nobody, helping nobody, lounge at their ease through a sermon, giving their money as they pay their income tax, pay a preacher to offer prayers for them, a missionary to visit the sick for them, and if they could, would pay some one to die for them and go to heaven, whilst they stayed here to enjoy the good things of this life." This is severe. But what if true?

England and the Persian Gulf.

"The St. Petersburg Viedomosti, and several of its Metropolitan contemporaries are greatly exercised by the news of 'another aggressing surprise sprung upon us (Europe) by the English in the Persian Gulf Provinces.' Indian garrisons are stated to have been permanently established at Chakat and Chabar, two small towns in the Persian Province of MeKran, under pretense of guarding the Indo-British telegraph line running to Bushire. The Anglo-Indian authorities declare these garrisons will remain in permanent possession. This high-handed procedure of the British government, says the Viedomosti, 'is another step toward the accomplishment of England's policy for procuring for herself the domination of the Gulf of Oman.'"

Czar Crushes Pan-Slavism.

The above heading is given to a letter of recent date in a daily paper, and it goes on to show that the squelching of this formerly all-powerful society by the Czar is a great aid to the cause of peace, as it removes one of the factors that was instrumental in bringing on the Russian and Turkish war of 1877.

The Slavs are those people occupying a large part of Eastern and Northern Europe, including Russians, Bulgarians, Roumanians, Servo-Croats, Poles, Slovenes, Czechs, Wends, Slovaks etc.

It will be seen at a glance that a uniting of these races under one head would create a power of vast proportion, and the most powerful part of them being under Russian rule, naturally enough the rest would be drawn to look for the head in the ruler of Russia. Or to put it differently, the Czar would never allow any other head to be proposed.

"As the face of it the movement was one of purely benevolent and charitable aims. It styled itself indeed the Slavonic Charitable society, and the following extracts from its constitution would at first sight appear to indicate that it had no political object in view. Thus the first paragraph of the constitution states: 'The Slavonic Charitable society has for its aim the promotion of the development of Slavonic solidarity, and the intellectual union of the foreign Slavs with Russia. 2. In conformity with the said objects the activity of the society is devoted (a) to the assistance of churches, schools, establishments for the improvement of the people, and literary institutions in non-Russian Slavonic countries; (b) the promotion of the education and instruction of young Slavs of both sexes in Russia; (c) the moral and material support of foreign Slavs desirous and capable of working for the attainment of the objects of the society; (d) the assistance during temporary difficulties of Slavs who may be suffering from such popular calamities as famine, inundation, etc., and equally of needy Russian people who have been working for the Slavonic cause; (e) the organization of meetings, reunions, and associations for the promotion of the Slavonic cause.' Paragraph 13 provides that 'the direction of the affairs of the society lies with the committee.' Paragraph 44 explains that the income of the society is derived from 'the return on the invested capital funds, yearly subscriptions of the members, contributions, church collections, etc.'"

It will readily be seen that such a Society as here indicated could not be solely a Charitable institution, but must result in political propaganda, the real aim being to absorb all these races into Russia. For years this Society has been of vast power in Russia, dictating to the throne rather than being governed by the Czar, and besides being responsible for the war of 1877, has been the cause of numberless disturbances and anti-Jewish outrages. The old Czar listened to the behests of this Society, but the present ruler has changed affairs very materially, and gradually has worked to belittle its position and get rid of it. A decree has just been issued proclaiming as null and void all acts of the Pan-Slav committee since Feb. 1899.

This action removes the dread from Austria that the millions of Slavs belonging to Francis Joseph's Empire are to be weaned away, and absorbed by Russia. The ultimate carrying out of the scheme could have no other result than the disruption of Austro-Hungary, the overthrow of the Sultan, and the conversion of the kingdoms of Greece, Roumania, and Servia, as well as Montenegro and Bulgaria as Russian provinces. With such a prospect naturally this Society had the support of the Russian imperial government as it proposed to extend his domains to other countries. Quite as naturally steps were taken by these other countries to shut out the representatives of this Society, and for years it has had the effect of a counter movement being operated.

The present Czar sees that the best work in extending his empire has been done in other directions where emmissaries of his government have been free to enter adjacent territory and mingling with the people manage to disaffect them, and in fomenting trouble among themselves, get to act between factions, and so gradually absorb them. This plan has brought better results than an open attack, and now by the crushing of this Pan-Slavic Society, and the removal of apparent danger, he is allowed to establish consulates in these countries, and so have representatives there all the time under government protection. Is this but another scheme of the Czar, and does he hope to in this way get in as I do the same work that has been done in so many places in Asia? The Russian Bear will "bear" watching closely by every Bible student.

"The Law of Veracity."

The law of veracity is violated when we state as true what we do not know to be true.

When we leave an untrue impression.

When we do not use reasonable diligence to correct a false impression.

When we do not use that amount of precaution which is necessary to a correct apprehension of the truth.

When we exaggerate or extenuate any of these circumstances.

When we purposely arrange the facts of a case misrepresentation in such a manner as to deceive.

When with intention to deceive we accompany a statement with a look of the eye, a tone of the voice a motion of the head, or anything which may influence the mind and conduce to a wrong impression.

When we answer a question evasively, so as to deceive, under the secret pretense that the inquirer has no right to know the truth.

When by word or act we create an expectation which, though we intend to fulfill it, we afterwards fail to fulfill without due care to explain the cause of the failure.

When we do not fulfill a promise in every respect precisely as we supposed the recipient of the promise understood it.

When we fulfill a contract or promise in every particular except as to time, and make no effort, show no disposition to give early notice that the delay was unavoidable.

Figurative or Literal,—Which?

If there be anything in the Book of God that we can rely upon as being strictly literal, and emphatically meaning just what it says, it is the whole set of promises, from first to last, that go to make up the gospel. If those promises are not literal, the Great Jehovah has not dealt fairly with man; and, as the result, we are totally without a foundation for faith or hope. If these promises are not literal, it is cruel to expect man to understand them. And yet God does expect man to understand, believe and obey them. This is proof enough that the promises he has given us to believe in order to be saved, are absolutely literal. The first promise of the whole list is just as literal as the rest; and seeing it contained the germ of all the rest, and even reached on to the consummation of Jehovah's plan, when the power of evil will be effectually crushed, it would seem of double importance that the first intimation of God's remedial scheme for man should be stated in

UNEQUIVOCAL LANGUAGE.

Let us read it;—"And I, (Jehovah) will put enquity between thee (the serpent) and the woman, and between thy (the serpent's) seed, and her, (the woman's) seed, it (the woman's seed) shall bruise thy head, and thou (the serpent) shall bruise his (woman's seed's) heel." Do all our readers believe the serpent's heel will be bruised, and that the woman's seed will be the bruiser? How can you say no; when this verse says he will? And if you do not believe the first promise, of what use is it to believe the second and third? If you do believe it of course you cannot claim that it means something else. If it means something else you would need to believe something else. And the same principle applies to all the great

FOUNDATION PROMISES

of the Gospel made to the fathers of the Hebrew nation. When God told Abraham to walk through the land of Canaan in the length of it and the breadth of it for he would give it to him and his seed for an everlasting possession, and when we are told in the 11th of Hebrews that he sojourned in the land of promise as a sojourner in a strange country, which he should receive for an inheritance; and after it is said that they all of that after or future inheritance,—and when we are distinctly told that the reason why they received not the promise was that God had provided they should not be made perfect without us, see Heb. xi. 8, 9—xiii. 39, 40, we are fully warranted in believing that all the good things covenanted to the fathers were the real

DIED IN FAITH

THINGS MENTIONED

in his will, or covenants of promise, and point to nothing else. And this being clearly seen on the face of the record before us,—and supplemented by the testimony of the Martyr Stephen, Acts vii. 5, that although the land was promised to Abraham by God, not enough was given him to set his foot upon, and when in addition to all this we are told in the 3rd of Galatians that Christ was made a curse for us in order that the blessings of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles, and that those who are Christ's, are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise, we think no reasonable and intelligent person can doubt the literality of all God's propositions.

We can nurse in our bosoms the comfort of our privileges, without giving a chief place in our lives to their responsibilities; therefore we must not make number one our standard.

Report.

On Monday evening, Dec. 10, the writer began a series of meetings at Inwood, Ind., continuing (except Sunday) until Saturday evening Dec. 22. Home duties and local work prevented devoting all the time to the work there, it being necessary to return home each evening, and fill regular appointment on Sunday. At the close of the meeting three had requested baptism. But one of these, however, was baptized, the other two thinking themselves unable, on account of poor health, to render obedience then. The church at Inwood is very small, about eight members, but they are boldly contending for what they deem to be God's truth. When the Savior returns, and until then, may they be found at Inwood witnesses for God.

Brother Underwood:

Will you please say to the readers of The Restitution, that my beloved wife, Abbie A. Howard is dead. She died of Pneumonia after a brief illness of about a week. She died on the 28th of January, and has left me to battle with the storms of life alone. And yet I realize that I am not alone, while my Heavenly Father is at the helm, and that I can look to him for assistance and direction in time of need. I realize that Abbie was taken away from the evil to come.

I want some place to go to where I can have some one to lean upon in my declining years. I am nearly 82 years of age but strong and able to work, but not active. My memory has failed me very much as also my eye-sight. Will any of the brethren extend me a helping hand? My dear Abbie was the kindest person I ever saw.

DANIEL HOWARD.

Editor Restitution:

I take this liberty of asking yourself or some of the members of the faith their opinion in reference to an idea that I got from Dan. xii. 11, 12. It speaks of a power occupying Palestine during a space of forty-five years, which power I have come to think will be the pope. Now if any of the members have noticed these passages and have come to any decision, or have any theory in regard to them I would be pleased to hear from them. I am sixty-eight years of age and have been 50 years in the faith, but I don't think I am too old to learn yet. Trusting this will receive your kind consideration, I remain yours in the faith.

Married.

At the home of the bride's father in Jasper Co., Iowa, on Jan. 16, Charles N. Scott and Ammert Belle Eychaner. Many presents and good wishes were made by about 100 guests. After supper and prayer for a beautiful life, a pleasant home here, and an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God, by the writer, the guests dispersed. May the happy pair seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, then life will be worth living.

The Greatest.

We trust our readers will appreciate the following lines from an old English Monthly Magazine, for their real worth, as they clearly embody the Master's words and spirit:—

"Who is the greatest?" Is it he whose sword Cuts a straight road to glory? He whose feet
Are swift in the race for fame, who is not
In eye above his fellows all around?
He who has heaped up countless gold and coin?
Or even he whose life is most replete
With richer stores than oil and wine, and wheat,
With love, best good that this world can afford?
No. He who follows where his Master led Through lowly ways; who strives but to fulfill
By humble service, all that Master's will,
HE is the greatest, so our Lord hath said;
He falls, who stands up high to reach renown:
Who stoops, shall find the kingdom and the crown.

Edward VII'S Power as King.

A question which is in the minds of many, and a subject of no little discussion is as to what sort of a King Queen Victoria's eldest son will prove to be. While some are of the opinion that he will take an active part in the direction of affairs of the nation, there are others who insist that he will show himself a "roi fainéant," and will leave everything to his Ministers. And it is added, that he will be the more inclined to adopt this latter role owing to the fact that he has no taste or experience with regard to the affairs of state, and that he is, moreover, reduced by the terms and spirit of the constitution to play the part of a mere figure-head, it being explained that the influence and power exercised by Queen Victoria was due to her commanding and universally revered personality, and her unrivaled experience and knowledge of statecraft.

Now there can be no greater mistake made than to ascribe any such inactive part as this to Albert Edward. In the first place, he has a far greater knowledge of foreign and domestic politics than the general public for one moment imagines. Ever since his return from India, more than a quarter of a century ago, the Foreign office has by direction of Queen Victoria made a practice of forwarding to him at the same time as to herself a copy of each important dispatch received from abroad, and likewise of there plies sent thereto, thanks to which, he was enabled on at least three memorable occasions to bring about understandings with foreign powers that the most brilliant of professional diplomats had signally failed to accomplish. And while, with a tact and a regard for the spirit of the constitution unparallelled on the part of any other Prince of Wales in English history, he has refrained from giving the slightest indication of his preferences for one or another of the great political parties in Great Britain, the interest with which he has followed the debates upon all important issues in Parliament precludes all idea that he looks upon national affairs with indifference.

That he is debarred by the terms of the constitution from taking, as sovereign, any active part in the government of the Empire, or is reduced to the position of a mere figure-head, is likewise an altogether mistaken assumption. For the conduct of the international relations of the British Empire is vested by the terms of the constitution, not in Parliament, nor yet in the latter's executive—that is to say, the Cabinet—but in the monarch. It is the prerogative of the sovereign. For the constitution takes the ground that "it is impossible that the individuals of the state in their collective capacity can transact the affairs of that state with another community equally numerous as themselves. In the sovereign, therefore, as in a center, all the rays of the people are united and form by that union of consistency the splendor and power that makes the monarchs respected by foreign countries." What is done by the sovereign with regard to foreign affairs is therefore the act of the whole nation and is binding upon the latter. Whatever agreement, whatever treaties or conventions the sovereign may make with a foreign state, no power in the empire, not even Parliament, can "legally delay, resist, or annul." True the Minister of the crown who is believed to have advised the monarch wrongly can be impeached by Parliament. But this impeachment in no way effects the validity of the agreement thus indirectly condemned by Parliament, or in any way annuls it. Legislative sanction and ratification are therefore not required in England for treaties or international arrangements concluded by the sovereign, either directly or through the Foreign Minister, and whereas the latter's colleagues in the Cabinet are responsible to Parliament, he alone, according to the terms of the British constitution, is responsible solely to the monarch and acts as the delegate of the latter. This will show, therefore, that the new ruler of the British Empire will, by the terms of the English constitution, assume sole and absolute control of the foreign policy of the United Kingdom and that he is thoroughly qualified by experience and by his knowledge of international affairs for the task.

With regard to domestic politics and affairs, it is perfectly true that the prerogatives of the sovereign are restricted to a greater degree, but not to the extent which appears to be generally believed. No statute can be enacted or repealed, no new measure put into force, so far as domestic affairs are concerned, save with the knowledge and the sanction of the duly elected representatives of the people assembled in Parliament. But, on the other hand, Parliament cannot enact any law, repeal any statute, or put any new measure into force without the consent of the sovereign, which may be given or withheld as the monarch sees fit.

It is this faculty of giving or withholding the royal signature that virtually places supreme power in the hands of the English sovereign, for it is not only every Parliamentary measure, but likewise every administrative act of any importance that must receive the monarch's sign-manual before it can be put into force or become endowed with any degree of validity. During the last quarter of a century of Queen Victoria's reign it has been estimated that she was obliged to put her signature to at least 70,000 official documents of one kind or another in the year, or 200 a day, and the new King, like his mother, may be trusted to show himself, not only too conscientious, but likewise too jealous of his prerogatives, ever to affix his signature to any paper before he has read and mastered its contents.

Another but little known prerogative of the British Sovereign is the constitutional right to dismiss either a single Cabinet Minister or else the entire administration, if either have ceased to enjoy the confidence of the monarch. It does not matter whether the Cabinet has a Parliamentary majority or not.

If I mention these facts it is to show that the British monarch is far less of a figurehead and of a dummy than is asserted in print, not only abroad, but even in England itself, presumably by scribes who have never taken the trouble to make themselves acquainted with the constitutional history of the British Empire. Those who have had the privilege of being personally acquainted with the Prince of Wales, as has the writer since his boyhood, and who, therefore, have some knowledge of his personality and character, have reason for believing that while manifesting the breadth of view and the liberal sentiments that have characterized his social reign during the last four decades, he will on the other hand, exercise to their fullest extent the rights and prerogatives that are granted to him by the terms of the British constitution. He is thoroughly alive to the progress of the democratic movement in the old world, and possessed of too much common sense not to appreciate that some of the demands which it puts forward are justified, and if one may indulge in any speculation as to the policy which Albert Edward is likely to pursue, I would be disposed to express the opinion that it will be less conservative than Liberal-Unionist. But whatever happens, the new monarch, who now becomes supreme head of the Church of England, and "Defender of the Faith," will certainly never show himself to be a "roi fainéant."—Chicago Tribune.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article mention was made of the extreme estimation in which Eureka was held by the editor of the Christadelphian, as an exponent of the doctrine of God-manifestation. The editor's complex platform in contrast with the "simplicity" platform of Dr. Thomas was also noticed. The adoption by the Martureum of the Birmingh m doctrine and its subsequent communion with some unions items of "Intelligence" in the Christadelphian and Christadelphian Lamp, and a reference to Phanerosis, made up the article.

Chicago has been mentioned as a center of disturbance caused by the subject we are dealing with. In his pamphlet already quoted, W. D. Jardine makes reference to it under the heading, "What think ye of Christ? Whose Son is he?" He says. "Since putting the foregoing pages together, I have had forwarded to me a tract with the above title. It is issued by the Chicago Ecclesia. From it I will now submit two passages for remark. ....."By it (incorruptible spirit) he (Jesus) was begotten and in the union of flesh and spirit on that occasion Spirit was not annihilated by contact with flesh, but the product was 'Jehovah' and the 'Savior' whose way was prepared by John the Baptizer. This remarkable personage." Query: does the author use the term 'personage' as a more suitable one for Jesus Christ than the term 'man?' "This remarkable personage whose birth was heralded by angels, and whose name was given by the angel Gabriel before his conception—kept the law from childhood, manifesting such attributes as mere humanity or sin's flesh never could." And again, "to say that he did not partake of his Father's substance and yet 'was the only begotten son of Deity' is to stultify language."

Brother Jardine, addressing the editor of the Christadelphian, to whom his pamphlet is written, says here. "These are passages you may or may not subscribe to. They are, however, the legitimate conclusions of your own reasonings, say what you please, and they set forth, in a very clear, straight forward, and unmistakable manner, that Jesus, in the view of the Ecclesia from which the tract comes (an Ecclesia in select fellowship with your own), was in the days of his flesh, of a double nature."

"In your exhortation No. 45, in Christadelphian for June, 1873, pages 259, 260, you say "God's Word came through man before; but in this case the Word was made man: it became flesh by the operation of the Spirit on Mary as described by the angel. The result was a man who was the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person." Now these words are identical in meaning with those quoted from the tract. Query: Was Jesus' being the brightness of glory, and the express image of God's person, not the result of his birth by Spirit? It was certainly not the result of his birth from the womb..... Can flesh exhibit, unborrowed, the brightness of glory, or display in its figure an express image of God's person? Certainly not. It was Jesus' ascension, or change to the divine nature after his resurrection, which did this. He then became a glorious body."

This, as a specimen of the reasonings which arose out of the doctrine of God-manifestation, may be of interest to some readers.

It may be noted that the "exhortation" referred to by Bro. Jardine was that headed "Sunday Morning at the Christadelphian Synagogue," and was delivered by the editor on the occasion of the breaking of bread. That in the week following extends to ten columns.

Bro. Jardine, besides the point noticed above, took occasion to criticise half a dozen others from the same address. There seems a glaring impropriety in selecting such an occasion as the breaking of bread for the ventilation of such a subject. Zeal seemed to outrun discretion.

This doctrine of God-manifestation although broached as early as 1858 in the Herald was long in ripening into a disturbing element. W. Ellis writing in the Christadelphian Lamp (Feb., 1858) says, "The more recent doctrine, called by its promoters God-manifestation, is also to be rejected because it fails to distinguish between the Father and the Son."

Six months later under Intelligence, we read, "Halifax.....Bro. Swindel writes as follows:—For some weeks past there has been quite a commotion in the Halifax meeting, created by the proclamation of D. Bairstow's dogma that it was impossible for Jesus to sin! This teaching was warmly opposed by several of the members, and, after considerable squabbling, Tait, of Edinburgh, and Shuttleworth of Birmingham, were brought over to settle the matter; but the efforts of these authorities were not successful, and last week thirty separated from the rest in Belford-square, and met last week in another room."

It was not long till this movement found expression in a booklet of 64 pages (1876). Its promoters had taken up a position adverse to the Christadelphian, and claimed to have the support of the late Dr. Thomas. It is entitled "Letters on the doctrine of God-manifestation, and extracts from the most recent and advanced writings of the late Dr. Thomas." It contains correspondence between David Bairstow and William Birkenhead (Sale near Manchester) on the one hand, and Robert Roberts on the other. The drift of it may be seen from a few sentences culled from the Introduction.

"Beloved brethren, we deeply regret the circumstances which have made it necessary for us to submit to you, for consideration, the following copies of correspondence on the doctrine of God-manifestation."

"The circumstances, we regret, are the refusal of brother Roberts to allow the ideas presented in this correspondence to find expression in the pages of the Christadelphian added to the misrepresentation," etc.....And here we are reminded of the remarks made in 1870, by our beloved brother Dr. Thomas, in a letter to brother Roberts on the occasion of a division in the Chicago ecclesia."

Some extraordinary statements are made in this booklet. Speaking for one-half of the ecclesia in Halifax, D. Bairstow says, "We believe and teach that Jesus Christ of the New Testament is Jehovah of the Old.....We believe that Jesus Christ was the Lord of Hosts." The attentive reader will be at no loss to perceive that these views were derived from the Dr.'s teachings as already quoted in these articles.

A specimen of the mental confusion arising from this controversy may also be seen in the following extract.

"Preceding the begettal of Jesus Christ this Deity was neither Father nor Son so far as this earth is concerned; but after the birth of Jesus Christ he was both father and son; and yet the father was not the son neither was the son the father, but father and son were one Deity".....Wm. Birkenhead.

Among a variety of remarks by which the editor of the Christadelphian sought to meet these and similar statements, was this one, "Into your metaphysical definition of the origin and action of will, considered as an abstraction, it is unnecessary to follow you.....We have to deal with proximate practical facts and testimonies, and not with philosophical speculations, which in all ages have only availed to obscure and make void the testimony of God. It is sufficient to understand will in the general sense of power to do. This is plain enough for the unlearned, and it was to this class the gospel was sent." Letter Jan. 21, 1876.

Twenty years later this continued to be the editor's experience. In "Answers to Correspondents, L. A. The Nature of Christ. It is well not to go beyond the Word in our definitions of this.....Our comprehension of the relation between the one and the other is too much at fault to justify us in the use of the description you suggest" ('Spirit-flesh or Divine-substance).....God-manifestation is a matter for faith, not for definition. If we aim to agree on metaphysical foundations, we shall fail in reaching that state of spiritual calm in which we are gladdened by the goodness of God believed," etc. Nov. 1897.

These extracts are but samples of the things from which the editor of the Christadelphian had suffered for upwards of 30 years. This was the natural and indeed the inevitable result of the policy of his metaphysical creed. In these extracts he seems to indicate what would have proved a remedy, if consistently carried out, namely, by letting alone metaphysics, and returning to the "simplicity" which, for several years previous to 1864, he had adhered to. "It is never too late to mend," but no amendment resulted, as his latest experience at San Francisco, already mentioned in these papers, clearly showed.

It may be mentioned here that while in Australia, on his final tour, the editor of the Christadelphian performed certain editorial duties. Here is one, which seems to point to a desire for relief from the worry he had endured. On the cover of the Magazine Feb., 1898 replying to R. S. D. he says "while you are pushing for division on responsibility, another party is pushing for indiscriminate union. Of the two we rather be with you than with them: but we fear it will not be in our power to run with either, unless it should fortunately happen that unreasonable extremes were adopted on all sides, and all lovers of the Holy Oracles were to coalesce on the foundation of 'the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ.'"

Short Sermons. No. 11.

The kingdom of God—what is it? We feel quite sure that the importance of this question will justify its repetition here, for although the Master did explain to his disciples his wonderful teaching by parable and otherwise, yet it is a fact that the mystery of iniquity soon arose to counterfeit and counteract the plain simple truth of God, and to lead men and women astray—into the traps of mystic and spiritualistic Babylon.

The disciples of our Lord and Master who no doubt had read and heard about the thrice overthrowing of their kingdom over which David and Solomon once ruled, and of its being no until he come whose right it was, and and the Lord's promise to give it to him, and to restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as the beginning, when they had followed and heard the meek and lowly teacher, preaching and talking almost every day for three or four years, about the kingdom of God, and had seen his suffering and death, and his revival again, and had been with and heard him after his resurrection, resort to his favorite theme, the kingdom of God, for about forty days, were naturally led to believe that their Master was the one whose right it was to restore again their overturned kingdom; and they felt so deeply interested in this great and glorious work, that their last question to their loving Master on the eve of his departure, was, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

Let men and women talk and think what they please about going to heaven at death, and all these kind of things, yet this was not the hope of the disciples of our Lord and Master. They never talk that way. Their national hope as a people was anchored in the restoration of their long overturned kingdom.

For this they hoped and prayed and waited, and many of them still cherish this hope. Is it a well grounded hope? or is it built on tradition? The Master knew all about this, if we do not. I believe that he was too wise to not know, and to good to not care. Does he treat his poor heart broken disciples and their question with indifference like many in this our day? Or does he promptly and kindly correct their mistaken idea, if such it was? He did neither. If they were mistaken, and their hope was built on tradition, he knew it, and confirms them in their mistake. Who will say he did this? Not I.

Let us note their question, and his answer. Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? So far as I know, all believe and admit that this question relates directly to the over turned kingdom of literal Israel, and its restoration. In fact they had no interest in, and knew nothing about a sky kingdom, or any other kind of a kingdom that was different to the one they enquired about. Jesus knew their faith and heart longing for their long overturned kingdom, to be restored again to them, and virtually admits this to be a true and correct conclusion from his own teaching, and that of the prophets. Now how does he answer their question? Listen a moment, and hear him, "And he said unto them. It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. Or in other words, it is not for you to know the time and season when your question will be answered and your kingdom restored. Their faith was right in the main while they were just a bit over anxious and mistaken as to the time. This is natural and common among God's people all along the line. God's promises in ages past form the basis of the faith once delivered to the saints, and of his kingdom to come, and the glad tidings of salvation through a crucified and risen Savior. The kingdom when restored to Israel, the feast of all peoples will be small—as a grain of mustard seed, then it will grow and grow until it becomes world-wide and fills the whole earth. Daniel sees the whole kingdom when set up, and its growth upwards. It shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever,—become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth. The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom—to order it, and to establish it with judgment, and with justice from henceforth, even forever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this. Do you believe it? I do. He shall be [illegible], and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him. For the kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the governor among the nations. And blessed be his glorious name forever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen and amen.

Obituary.

Katie Elizabeth Love was born June 11, 1886, died Jan. 28, 1901.

When but a child of 18 months her father died. Feb. 19, 1888. Upon July 30, 1889, her mother was united in marriage to Albert Chapman in whom Katie had a kind and loving father, and unto whom she became a dutiful and loving daughter. Deceased was early instructed in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus. It was a day of rejoicing when on Jan. 20, 1899, she together with three of her Sunday school companions buried the old man and put on the new. It rejoices the hearts of all the brotherhood who knew her quiet life to be able to look back upon the actions and words of one so young in years and hope, because those actions and words truly indicated that the vanities of the world did not hold her, rather she was living the new life in Christ Jesus. Well did she express herself a few days prior to death, a convalescent from lung fever, able to be about the house and call upon her friends, when she said, "Mother, I am so glad I was baptized, ai'nt you?" It was the hope that she thus came into possession of that now brings a glow of joy upon the saddened faces of her parents, sisters and brothers. What a blessing is this hope to poor frail mortals. Surely it is comforting. And to the end that this hope may be realized we cry with the groaning creation, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

F. L. AUSTIN.

IN MEMORY OF KATIE.

Dearest daughter thou hast left us,
Left thy kindred and thy friends,
In the quiet grave thou restest
Until Gentile times shall end.

Then the Lord for whom thou waitedst,
Shall descend from heaven to earth,
And the many silent chambers,
Shall to every saint give birth.

Lovely Katie, how we miss you,
Miss thy form now cold in death,
Miss thy cheerful voice, now silent,
Gone with thy last fleeting breath.

Yet again we hope to meet you,
In that age so free from care
Where God's people all shall gather
And its blessings freely share.

Oh, our hearts are well nigh broken,
And our home is not the same,
But the Word which thou hast spoken,
"If I go, I come again,"

Comfort us in all our sorrow,
For the dead in Christ shall rise,
And will all ascend to meet him
As he cometh from the skies.

AUNT NAN.

Sarah Wright—Kreider, daughter of Samuel and Ruth Wright, was born in Jefferson Co., Ohio, July 12, 1839, died at her home in Argos, Ind., Jan. 15, 1901. She came with her parents to Fulton Co., Ind., in 1837. In the year 1854 she was united in marriage to Christian M. Krieder, to which union five children were born. Her husband died in 1875 having lived an invalid from 1865 when he was disabled in the war. Deceased united with the Disciple church in 1836; with the Church of God at Argos, in 1881. She approached the end of mortal life afflicted with cancer, with a belief in and "hope of eternal life, which God hath promised before the world began." Therefore as we lowered her to earth's bosom, placing her head upon the pillow of dust, it was with the hope that when the Savior returned to seek and call out his own, she would be among the number to hear "Come ye blessed of my Father."

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Illinois Brethren.

It was almost unanimously decided at our last State Conference to make Oregon, Illinois, the permanent location for the Conference. In addition to this it was decided to build a building having a dining hall and sleeping apartments. About half of the necessary funds was subscribed at the conference. This notice is written for the two-fold purpose of reminding those who subscribed that the time is drawing near when the money will be acceptable, and to those who have not subscribed we make this appeal for additional funds. Any amount you may see fit to give will be duly receipted for. Send all remittances to the chairman of the committee, S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, Illinois. Further information regarding the building may be had by addressing any one of the following Building Committee:

S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, Ill.
E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.
J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.

Brother M. Joblin wishes us to say that by the liberality of the friends of Truth, he can sell several hundred copies of "Law or Gospel, Which," at 50 cents per dozen, and trusts many will avail themselves of this opportunity to do missionary work, at little expense. Address him at 624 Woodland ave. Cleveland, O.

Please announce that I am ready to fill calls for preaching anywhere in the State of Missouri. Address me at Mountain Grove, Mo.

California Illustrated.

A copy of the illustrated monthly "The Chicago 400." a journal of travel and topics, reaches us by the courtesy of the Chicago & North-Western Ry. It is one of the finest illustrated publications we have ever seen. The tinted half-tones rival those of the finest magazines, and the letter-press of the whole edition is as perfect as that of any publication ever issued, pictorially and descriptively mirroring California's wonderful scenery. Copy will be mailed to your address upon receipt of 2 cents postage by W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., C. & N.W. Railway Chicago, Ill.—Feb9

Low Fare to Washington.

Excursion tickets to Washington will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines March 1, 2, and 3, 1901, with return limit on all tickets including Mar. 8.

The inauguration of President Mc Kinley on March 4th will be the first event of that kind in the new century, and will attract notables from all over the country. The ceremonies will be impressive, and the parade and festivities will be of an unusual character, interesting to all.

The trip to Washington may be made via Pennsylvania Lines at the low fares on through trains of modern railroad equipment. For details about fares and through service, apply to nearest Pennsylvania Lines Ticket Agent. J. E. Haines, Agent.—mar3

Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campgrouud is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience, for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant fruitage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our bounties. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and judiciously used.

B. Kelroy,
G. P. Allard.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other sacred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Hebrew's Lament.

Thou art the land of all my dreams,—
Thy wanderer's heart is thine,
And oft he lingers by thy streams,
O holy Palestine!

A stranger in a stranger's land
O'er hill and vale I roam;
But love forever points her hand
Towards my father's home.

They tell me that on Zion's hill
The Cross and Crescent shine;
But oh, my heart is with thee still,
Beloved Palestine.

I know that Israel's weary race
Are scorned on every shore,
And scarcely find a dwelling-place
Where they were lords before.

Yet, 'mid the darkness and the gloom,
A light begins to break,
O Israel, from the cleavy tomb
Thy buried hopes awake,—

And lips that raise the fervent prayer,
"How long, O Lord, how long?"
Shall change the wailings of despair
To the triumphant song.

O may I live to see the hour—
The hour that must be near,—
When in his royalty and power
Our Shiloh will appear.

Till then my prayers will rise for thee,
Till then my heart be thine,
O land beyond the stormy sea,
O holy Palestine.

Obituary and Sermon.

Died on Monday morning, January 21, 1901, at San Diego, California, of heart failure, Brother Jefferson Williams, aged 72 years. He died very suddenly while in his bed, about four o'clock A. M.; was not sick and had made no complaint at all. When his wife was awakened by his struggles for breath he had lost consciousness, and did not recognize her. In a few moments he was asleep in Jesus. He was born in Kentucky, came to Missouri in early life, resided there several years, also resided for some time in Indiana, where his first wife died. He has surviving him an only daughter by his first wife, the daughter resides in Indianapolis. He afterwards resided for many years in St. Joseph, Mo., until he with his second wife came to San Diego, where he resided for several years until his death. He left surviving him his said wife, Mrs. Carrie Williams. They had no children. Mrs. Carrie Williams is well known by many of the readers of THE RESTITUTION and other papers as a writer upon the faith and doctrine of life only in Christ. The very sudden death of her dear and affectionate husband was a terrible shock to her, and she now mourns his death. But she sorrows not as those who have no hope. He was buried on Jan. 22, 1901. His funeral was largely attended. By request of Sister Williams and others, the writer of this delivered a discourse at the funeral, and by request I herewith send the same for publication in THE RESTITUTION.

Scriptures read: Job xiv. 14, 15; xix. 25-27; 1 Cor. xv. 12-26; xiii. 58; 1 Thes. iv. 13, 18; Rev. v. 10; vii. 13-17; xxii. 1-5.

Another loved one has fallen a victim to that relentless enemy death. Hearts are again wrung with anguish at death's deluge. The tender husband, the devoted friend, the kind and esteemed neighbor lies silent in death.

We have read in your hearing the question asked by Job, "If a man die shall he live again?" This question has been asked thousands of times since Job asked it. Philosophers of all nations have struggled with it. All who have sought an answer to that question outside of the Bible, God's Word, have sought in the dark and found no answer. The destiny of man ever has been in the hands of God, man's Creator. God's ways are not our ways, nor his thoughts as our thoughts, so man by searching (without light from God) will never solve the question. The question, "If a man die shall he live again?" would be an unanswered question today, if God had not revealed the answer.

Now since we are here to weep with those who weep, to perform the last sad rites and pay the last tribute to the dead, and to manifest our sympathy and affection, it is fitting and proper for us to improve the solemn occasion and opportunity to draw a lesson for the living out of the bitter experiences of this life, and to that end and purpose let us go the Book of life, the revealed Word of God, and see if therein we can find a solution of that question of vital importance to all mankind, "If a man die shall he live again?" Not, if man die shall he live? but "If a man die shall he live again?"

The deceased was a man of positive and strong convictions. His character for uprightness was firmly established. His faith in God's Book, in divine revelation was firmly fixed and decidedly unwavering. He believed the answer to Job's question was contained and fully set forth and affirmatively answered in the Bible, and now may the few words I shall say and the Scriptures I shall quote help us all to realize what we are, and whither we are bound. Man in the beginning was created by God, and was given a law, and placed under its provisions and conditions. He was plainly directed and rigidly enjoined, and the line of duty and obedience clearly set forth.

By disobeying the law he would incur death, by obedience he would live, he would not die. He disobeyed. He incurred the penalty, God who made the law provided the penalty, and fixed the sentence. He provided measures to ensure the execution of the sentence. Man was driven from the Garden out of the prepared paradise, away from the tree of life. He was then under the penalty, "The day thou eatest of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, dying thou shalt die." Provision was made that he shall not eat of the tree of life, to eat of which would cause man to live forever. He was now a sinner. And to live for ever, he would live a sinner. Had he obeyed and not become a sinner he would have by eating of the tree of life have lived forever sinless and holy. By preventing his having access to the tree of life, prevented man from living for ever in sin, and left him under the penalty of death, his end would be death. The sequel we all know, death terminates the career, ends the life of all men. Man must die. Here now in our midst and before us is positive evidence of the fact, man must die. Here is a man before us; he was a live man a short time ago, now he is a dead man. Adam's disobedience was sin. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men." All men inherit dying natures, that is why they die, the ancestor, Adam was mortal, and by nature all men are mortal. Man has ever been and is obliged to pay the debt of nature; he is obliged to die, God said he should. God's Word was and is true, wages man does pay it, he does die. Having by death paid that debt there is nothing on that score charged to him. But it takes all man has to pay it, it takes his thoughts, his knowledge, and his wisdom, it takes his very life, it ends his existence.

The coming of the enemy death is not the coming of the Lord, nor does the cold skeleton hand of death open the gate to endless joy. Death brought to the blessed Jesus a cross of agony, and opened a cold stone tomb. When death comes for man it comes with coffin, bier and hearse and opens for man the gloomy grave in the dark cold earth, and leaves him there to moulder and decay to dust according to the divine sentence. The Lord has not yet come for our beloved brother, but death has come. He has not yet brought a crown of life, but a coffin was brought. The gates of pearl have not been opened, but the grave is opened. Man is in death, he has paid the debt of nature, and so far as he is concerned and as a consequence he remains under the power of death.

Now, we may begin to see the goodness and mercy of God to shine forth. We read that, no sooner than man was sentenced to death, than God promised a Savior, a Savior to save him from death, not to save him from dying, but to rescue from the grasp of death after he had died. The promise is made, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." The serpent caused man to disobey and die. The Seed of the woman is Christ, the Savior. The Savior offered himself a sacrifice for sin. He died without sin, and in sinless purity, so God raised him from the dead. Had he died sinful there would have been no atonement in his blood, and he could not have conquered death or gained the glorious victory over death and the grave, we then would have had no Savior.

We have seen how man lost his life, how he came to die, and we know as Job did, that man does die. Job is therefore led to ask, "If a man die shall he live again?" Not, shall he live, but shall he live again. Jesus answers it when he says, "I am the resurrection and the life." Jesus answers it when he says of the believer in him, "I will raise him up at the last day." Jesus answers it when he says, "I am come that they may have life and have it abundantly."

Paul answers it when he says, "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept, for since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised." And again Paul says, "But I would not have you to be ignorant brethren concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, and we that are alive and remain shall be caught away to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall they ever be with the Lord."

Job asked the question, not like thousands of others who knew no answer. He knew an answer and he gave it when he said, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come," and, "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another, though my reins be consumed within me." Isaiah, the prophet of God, answers it by saying, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise, awake and sing ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead."

David answers it by saying, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness." Repeated and confirmed by the prophets and apostles, and confirming the saying of Christ that he will call the saints out of their graves and to life, and thereby expressing and establishing the fact, that till he calls and awakens the dead, they have no life, and no relief from the state of death.

In Eccl. ix. 5, we read, "The dead know not anything." And in verse 10, "There is no work nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou (man) goest." And in Psa. cxv., we read, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." And so on, but time will not permit further references and quotations. Now, where shall the home of the saints be? Listen to Jesus, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." And hear the prophet Daniel, he says, "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens is to be given to the saints of the Most High, and they are to possess it forever, even forever and ever."

Listen also to the song of the redeemed, given by the angel of the Lord to John as something to come to pass, and recorded in Rev. v. 9, 10, "And they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." And we are taught by Jesus Christ to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

We see at the beginning of the Book of God, man banished from the Eden Garden, the Paradise, and away from the tree of life and prohibited from all benefit of the tree of life. Now turn and see the end of the Book (the same Word of God) Paradise restored, with the tree of life again in the midst of it, and finally all the earth shall be filled with the glory of God, and the curse removed, there shall be no more curse, and the Lamb shall lead them to fountains of living water, and God shall wipe away all tears. The greatest enemy death, the relentless tyrant has long triumphed, but the time is coming soon when the trump shall sound, when the dead in Christ shall rise, when the sting of death will cease forever, when the saying that is written will come to pass, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory?" Then the redeemed will hear the sweet voice of him who died for us and rose again, say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

The work of our dear brother is done. He was a firm believer in God's promises, in all the gospel of Jesus Christ, and that the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin." And we believe and trust that the Lord will say in the day of his coming, that his work has been well done. It was his great satisfaction and comfort to be blessed with the privilege and opportunity of commemorating the death and suffering of the blessed Savior at the Communion table. He will hereafter be missed there. He will be missed by the few who composed the little church he loved and so fully and firmly believed to have the truth of the gospel as it is in Jesus. He will be missed by his neighbors and many friends. But most of all he will be missed by the broken household. Death has severed for a time the golden chain that bound living hearts in affectionate sympathy and holy love. But it is only for a time, for Jesus is coming to reign in his kingdom with his saints. And then the days of sorrow, bereavement and mourning will be ended. Jesus is coming and then tears shall be wiped from all faces. Jesus is coming and then there will be no more pain. Jesus is coming, and then there will be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying. Yes, the day of unending glory and eternal blessedness will soon dawn. The soft mellow resplendence of rosy light will soon color the blue of the eastern skies, and those lovely tintings will usher in the rising Sun whose brightness shall never be withdrawn or obscured. And then this earth upon which God's corrosive curse has so long rested, shall be restored, the curse removed and it become summer lands of living green. Yes, this very earth shall yet be the Beulah land of the universe, over which morning stars shall once more sing, and sons of God in triumph shout. O Beulah land, sweet Beulah land, our heart cried out for thee.

Dear friends, mourn not as those who have no hope, be cheered with the blessed hope of soon meeting the dear husband, the friend and neighbor on the evergreen shore in the glorious kingdom of God, with Jesus the Christ as King of kings and Lord of lords. Dear friends here assembled, have you insured the promised life, the life eternal, the living again in the world to come with him who says he is the resurrection and the life? As this life glides from our grasp, let us one and all labor to secure, and to hold on to the life to come, the life that cannot fail us, the eternal life which is the gift of God. He opens the fountain of perennial bliss. He offers us the vigor of an eternal, an endless life. He invites us to partake of his own eternity. Let us believe God. He will raise us up at the last day. Believe and hope; the Deliverer will soon come, and lift us out of mortality and crown us with life abundantly if faithful to the end. With the Apostle John may the language of our hearts ever be, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly." Yes, may the blessed Lord, the King of kings, the Lord of lords, soon come, come from the ineffable glory that surrounds his Father's throne in all its dazzling splendor, and with the host of holy angels come down the golden pathway of stars and heavenly constellations through the ethereal chambers of the upper air; and then and there the trump be sounded, and the voice of the archangel be heard, and the dead be raised and the elect of the Lord be gathered. Then our now dead brother with the rest of the dead in Christ will hear and come forth, be raised from the dead, will live again, be made immortal, incorruptible, a spiritual body by the power of God; the same spirit that made alive and raised the dead Savior. Our brother will then be able to shout the song of victory over death and the grave.

Short Sermons. No. 12.

The world knoweth us not, and why? The beloved John says:—"See what love the Father has given us, that we should be called children of God." On this account the world does not know us, because it did not know him. (Din.) The apostle answers our question with a double reason—first, because God had so loved us that we were in turn led to love and obey him, and thus be constituted and called his children. On this account, or because of this change of relationship, from this world and the God of this world to the God of heaven; the world does not know us. And secondly,—because it, the world did not and does not know God. The apostle draws a sharp line of contrast between God's children by faith and obedience—his adopted children, and the world. One has been led to change sides for a better world—the world to come, while the other class—the big class—the many who know not God are by way of distinction called the world, who lieth in darkness and wickedness. All have heard of God, and know him in a kind of way—the traditional way, while the few who have been properly taught, to learn of, and love him as he has revealed himself in his Word, works and ways—in a sense peculiar to his adopted children, and because you are sons God has sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, mind and affections, crying and calling "Abba Father." Just so, while the world knew Abraham, Daniel, Paul, Peter and John by name, it was in the dark as to the reason why they had changed sides and were living and walking by faith, choosing rather to be a pilgrim and a stranger in a strange land, and suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Ah, what strange creatures we are, one walks and lives by faith in the sure promises of God, and disdains the pleasures and honors of this world, while the many see nothing good in the promises of God, because of unbelief, and thus they live to eat, drink, and be merry and die without hope. One seeks and runs to obtain an incorruptible crown of glory that fades not away, while the many work hard, seek for and run fast after the things of this world which must soon pass away and be no more. Then where will we be? It seem that some people cannot see and understand God's plan of salvation as revealed in his word. The trouble is, they allow tradition to mystify and cover up God's will in Christ Jesus concerning them, and the eyes of their understanding is darkened, being alienated or separated from the life of God through ignorance of his Word, being told by the many false teachers that it matters not what they believe, just so they are sincere. Hence, they seldom read the Bible, and study it less. Just so, many brethren fail to see how it is, they can not love the world and in turn have the world love them, and they are found on the courting aid seeking to please the world. "In the world and not of the world" is a mystery to them. Our thoughts and actions class us all where we belong, whether we know it or not. The world thinks it knows a Christian when it sees him and hurls its criticisms at him regardless of our text which says, No. Some say you don't practice what you preach, while many of the Jews say, He hath a devil and is mad, why hear ye him? Other Pharisees say, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath day. Peter says, I wot or know that through ignorance ye did it, as also did your rulers. The Master says, The world will hate you and kill you and think it is service to God. Then marvel not if the world hate you, it hated me before it hated you. And the servant is not greater than his Lord, but rather marvel if it does not hate you.

T. E. ADAMS.

A Reverie.

While driving the cows to pasture this morning my eyes caught sight of the fine spun wire of the telephone, which glistening in the morning sunlight resembles a stray thread from the spider's spindle. And yet by these shining threads man has almost annihilated space and taken time by the forelock. He can by its use converse from the east to the west, from the bright sunny south to the ice bound regions of the north. While sitting in his own private office, man has bridled the lightnings. The laborer is carried to and from his daily toil by the electric force which when under man's control is docile as the old farm horse. The conquered lightnings have been brought into our homes and are taking the place of the old wood fire. This subdued element furnishes both light and heat for its conquerors. Man has conquered the waters of the raging torrent and by governing its wasted force has caused it to perform labor for his benefit. Man has searched down deep into the bowels of the earth for treasures hid in her secret depths and comes up with the conqueror's smile of victory. Man has accomplished wonders in his control of the elements. And yet whereof has he to boast? When it comes to the controlling of our own frail self our greatness is gone, we fail. We are told, greater is he who governs himself than he who taketh a city. Man has tamed the lightnings, but the tongue though so small a member is beyond our control. In the great human family, we have but one example of perfect self-government. He it was who sacrificed his life for the sake of others. He alone is truly great and worthy of the world's adoration. If we faithfully follow his example, when he comes we shall be like him. It is impossible for us dust creatures to govern ourselves alone. But he has promised ever present help in time of need, and "he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." Rev. ii. 26. That will be greatness indeed.

A CABINET crisis in Italy caused the forming of a new Ministry last week.

CICERO observed that no kind of men are more afraid of God, than such as pretend not to believe in his being.

THE disturbances in Spain on account of Anti-Jesuit and other causes have forced the government to ask aid of the military, and Madrid was last week under martial law.

"TRUTH can stand any test. Truth is immortal, and fears nothing but the lukewarmness of her friends, in whose house she is more frequently wounded than in conflict with her foes."

"GOOD advice,—Accustom not yourself to speaking over much; and before you speak consider. Let not your tongue run before your reason and judgment bid it go. If the mind does not pre-meditate, the tongue must necessarily precipitate."

SAYS the Spirit by the beloved John. —"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John iii. 2–3.

"THE words 'Just and unjust' apply to those who constitute the household. The Just are the faithful and true, represented by the living and healthy branches. The unjust are the unfaithful, represented by the diseased, the withered and dead branches of the true Vine. Both are in Christ, the Vine; and the words 'just and unjust' are not applicable to any outside Christ."

"No one need pause to wonder how he can contribute to the world's moral advancement. All he has to do is to live publicly and privately according to his own highest ideal of what is right, to shrink from no responsibility because it is shared by others, to give no tacit consent to any course which his conscience disapproves, but to stand at all times and in all places firmly, frankly and openly in favor of those principles which he honors in his inmost heart."

LONG ago it was said, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake;" and six thousand years later it is said, "A single plant of purslane has been known to produce 338,000 seeds; the thistle 95,396; and the plantain 42,000 in a single year? That promise could not have been more literally fulfilled; and as it was at the same time said, "Thou shalt surely die;" and "unto dust shalt thou return," why, seeing that process is going on before our eyes, do not people hold it to be as literal as the curse of the ground?

Mistakes in Daily Life.

"It is a mistake to:—

Set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly.

To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

Not to yield in immaterial matters.

Not to alleviate, as far as lies in our power, all that needs alleviation.

Not to make allowances for the infirmities of others.

To consider everything impossible that we cannot do.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To expect to be able to understand everything.

To live for this life only, when at any moment it may end."

SYMPATHY and anger ought to be only the emotions of truth and righteousness; they are frequently the mere outbreaks of temper.

THE Lord has given rules for directing all the steps of his brethren, and he says to them "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you." Those who do not obey him he will treat as enemies when he comes; for he is to be revealed from heaven with the angels of his power in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. i. 7–9.

Important Concessions by the Porte.

The Jewish Chronicle says:—"We are enabled to announce an important concession respecting the right of Jews to hold property in Palestine, which has been obtained from the Porte by M. Isaac Fernandez, President of the Comite Regional of the Alliance Israelite in Constantinople. For several years past, Jews of all nationalities, even Ottoman subjects born in Palestine, have been forbidden to buy landed property in Palestine. M. Fernandez has now secured for Jews who have been settled in the Holy Land for a considerable time, whether subjects of Turkey or of foreign powers, the right to buy "Miri" (agricultural land) and to have the property inscribed in their own names. The special importance of this concession lies in the fact that while "mulk" (town land) is owned by private individuals, "Miri" is the property of the Sultan.

M. Fernandez has rendered an immense service not only to his co-religionists, but to the entire population of Palestine. The Imperial Treasury will be among the first to derive material benefit from the measure mentioned above. The government of the Sultan has thereby given a fresh proof of the religious toleration which is a tradition in its annals."

Our Jerusalem correspondent confirms the above foregoing.

The Actions Committee of the Zionist movement publishes in its official organ, Die Welt, the following:—"We are in a position to state that according to our latest information from Constantinople the views expressed in authoritative Turkish circles are favorable towards political Zionism, and the advantages the Ottoman Empire will derive from it. We can further state that we are now in the midst of negotiations of far greater importance than the mere annulling of the prohibition of immigration would signify." The Die Welt prints the above in italics, to show the importance attaching to the statement of the Actions Committee.

"The Spirits in Prison."

FOR C. W. R.

These words occurring in 1 Peter iii. 19, 20 refer to people now in sheol or hades, the death state, as the careful reading of the context will prove to you. It says, "By the which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometimes were disobedient when once the long-suffering of God waited IN THE DAYS OF NOAH while the ark was a preparing." This shows the disobedient ones were contemporary with Noah. They were living in disobedience, and the building of the ark and his preaching failed to produce any reformation in them; and the flood came and swept them all away.

By reference to Gen. vi. it will be seen that those whom Peter calls disobedient spirits, were disobedient men; and some of their wicked ways were exposed.

GOD WAS LONG-SUFFERING

and waited while the ark was being built, but at length he carried out his purpose previously announced, in the following words: "I will DESTROY man whom I have created from the face of the earth." He really created man,—there was no man before he was created; and in the days of Noah he said, "Behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh wherein there is the breath of life, or lives, from under heaven, and everything that is in the earth shall die." And in Chap. vii. 22, 23, we read: "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life of all that was in the dry land, DIED; and every living substance was DESTROYED which was upon the face of the ground both man and cattle," etc.

By reference to Eccl. iii. 19 we learn HOW men and beasts die;—and where men and beasts GO when they die. It says, As the one [the beast] dieth, SO dieth the other [man], yea, they have all one breath; so that man hath no preeminence above a beast, [in death] for all is vanity, ALL GO UNTO ONE PLACE; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."

Ecclesiastes ix. 4, "To all the living there is hope; for they know they shall die; but the dead KNOW NOT ANYTHING," and verse 10 says "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest." This being and beast alike after death, and being in perfect harmony with the sentence of death passed upon man in Eden, and which was explained to be a going to dust as he was before created, all should be able to see that DROWNING was the way God chose to EXECUTE the sentence in the case of the disobedient in the days of Noah.

Those disobedient ones having gone to dust, and knowing nothing—the faculties of the mind being destroyed so that they could neither love, hate, or envy, is it not that any one should think Christ would go to preach to men who had gone to dust and knew nothing; or to think that the inspired Peter should teach such a doctrine in one of his epistles, and in the other 2 Pet. ii. 12, tell us emphatically, that those who walk after the flesh as did those in Noah's day, are as natural Brute Beasts are made to be destroyed, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption!!! Could they be preached to after this?

THINK THIS OVER,

and then we will call attention to the fact, that the drowned, destroyed, and returned-to-dust ante-Diluvians were still dead, and in the prison-house of death; at the time Christ is said to have gone and preached to them! What an audience to preach to! The interested reader can turn to Isa. xxiv. 22, and Zech. ix. 11, 12, and make sure that the word "prison" is used interchangeably with "grave," by the spirit.

But it may be objected that the disobedient ones were certainly preached to. True, but when were they preached to? Ans. "in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Who was the preacher? Ans. 2 Peter ii. 5 tells us that God spared not the old world, but saved Noah.....a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly".

Be it observed that it was the spirit that did the preaching before the men called spirits by Peter ever went into the prison-house—the grave. They were alive, we repent, when preached to, but were dead when Peter wrote about it, and in prison.

It may be further objected that CHRIST that suffered went and preached by the spirit. But that objection proves that the Scriptures by which we proved the dead unconscious are not believed; and therefore, if our text-book is rejected it would not seem worth the while to add more. Had we known that Bible testimony would be set aside we would have paid no attention to the querries. Nevertheless we will add that the spirit with which Jesus was anointed, or made the Christ was the same spirit that was in the prophets and testified of his sufferings and the glory that was to follow, 1 Peter i. 22, and, Noah was one of these. The same spirit preached through him, but made no converts.

Finally the advocates of the popular teaching, say Jesus went to Paradise the day he died.

Jesus himself said he would be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. Then how could he go to Paradise that day? How could he preach to the antediluvians? Paul tells us Christ was raised again for our justification. And the Lord from heaven whispers back to John, Rev. i. That he is the one that was dead and is alive again forevermore. We know by this Christ HIMSELF died. We know HE HIMSELF was not raised until the third day, and therefore did not preach during the interval to the Spirits in Prison.

Man's Position.

"Men are creatures and not Creators; they are fleshly forms of life from God; they are but dust and ashes. A world full of them in God's sight, is but as so many grasshoppers. Isa. xl. 22. Men are all sinners against God, and all under sentence of death. That men die and return "dust to dust and ashes to ashes," is a self-evident fulfillment of a divine decree against transgression. That a man should lift himself on high and say to the Divine Potter, what doest thou? is a monster arrogance. That the Son of sin and death should esteem himself good and worthy of salvation, and lay claim to a future life is just as seemly as it would be in an unchanged culprit awaiting the morning of execution. The only deportment becoming miserable sinners in whom there is no health, is extreme humility, contrition and true repentance. "To this man will I look," says God, "To him who trembleth at my Word." "Except ye receive the kingdom of God as a little child, ye can in no wise enter therein." We merit nothing we have, nor anything we hope for, and there is none good but one, and that is God. We live by the sufferance of God, and if we are saved it must be by grace, or favor. A wise man believes God's Word, and come good or come evil he gives God thanks. God is everything, we are nothing—he sees the proud afar off, but his delight is with the humble and contrite. The beginning of wisdom is the fear of Jehovah, and without faith it is impossible to please him. These things are the basis of present acceptable service and final approval. Whoever aspires to pre-eminence above a beast must show himself wise in God's precepts and the way of his commandments.

Christ.

Christ will not only "reign over the house of Jacob," but he will be Monarch of all mankind. All the thrones and dominions of men will crumble to nothing before him, for he will "grind them to powder." All earthly dominions will pass away, for it is the intention of the God of heaven to set up (on the ruins of those represented by Nebuchadnezzar's pulverized image) a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever, Dan. ii. 44. The object of this kingdom is to reconcile the world to God, and to abolish all evil, making all things new. It will be "the time of the regeneration," Matt. xix. 27–29. Righteousness will prevail, and purity will abound; while war will cease to desolate the nations of the earth, and security shall be everywhere experienced. Then God's name will be exalted and the oppressor be crushed. Then the poor will be cared for, and righteous laws will cause the universal triumph of right. The knowledge of the Lord will in that day cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Hab. ii. 14. And this glorious epoch will only be the introduction to a more glorious time, for it will usher in the age when the last enemy,—death will be utterly destroyed, and God shall be all in all. I Cor. xv. 21—28.

What is the Soul?

"Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine, the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. xviii. 4.

We read that God created all things. So God created the soul. How did he create it? "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Here was a being formed, and called man, and was given life, by God's breathing into his nostrils; then this man became a living soul. Was there a soul put into man? No. The man was the soul, the air passed into his nostrils, to his lungs, and set the man in motion, and man became a soul, a living soul. Man builds an engine, then fills the boiler with water, the fire box with fuel, starts the fire, the fire creates steam which starts the engine in motion, it is a live engine as long as there is steam, when the steam is gone it is a dead engine, but is an engine yet. The same process that made the first man a soul, makes any other man a soul, and it makes all men have the same kind of soul, which is a living soul, and that soul lives as long as it can breathe; when it can no longer breathe, it ceases to live, and is then a dead soul, but the man is still a soul but a dead soul. Did the first man or soul die? Yes. Adam lived 930 years, and he died; he ceased to breathe, and became a dead soul. All men are created living souls as Adam was; and become dead souls as he did, when they cease to breathe.

Did God create any other soul? Yes. God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind. And God gave to man every herb, every beast, and fowl, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, (margin, a living soul). So the beasts were created living souls, also, for they all breathe the same air; and to deprive them of air causes them to die the same as man. And in the flood, all in whose nostrils was the breath of life died, both man and beast; "For that which befalleth man, befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they all have one breath; and as it was the breath of life, the air we breathe, that made man a living soul, it also makes anything else a living soul that breathes air.

Job says, In the Lord's hand is the soul of every living thing. The Lord said unto Moses to levy a tribute to him; of one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep. Num. xxxi. 28. Here we find God calling them all souls, and as he created them, we think he should know what they were. The word soul is used over 150 times to mean man, the whole man. Soul is from the Greek word nephesh, and occurs 683 times in the Old Testament, and is translated soul 453 times, life 99 times, live 16, persons 28, heart 15, mind 14, man 1 and 56 times in 25 other words. Neshamah is translated breath 17, spirit 2 times, and soul once. Psuche is Hebrew, and occurs in the New Testament 58 times; is translated soul 55, life or lives 40, and mind 3 times, with 22 times; that the marginal reading is interchangeable, life and soul. Job says: "The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life." When this breath is gone out of the man, the life is gone. What is done with man when the life is gone out of him? He is buried in the grave; he is dead. Does he now know any thing? No. For in death there is no remembrance of thee. None can keep alive his own soul. Man addeth not; he is like the beasts that perish. Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust. The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth: in that very day, his thoughts perish. For the living know that they shall die, but the dead, know not anything. Can the soul be destroyed? Yes. David says, "Rescue my soul from their destructions. Those that seek my soul to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth. For our soul is bowed down to the dust. Again we find Joshua took Makkedah, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof utterly destroyed them, and all the souls that were therein: he let none remain. Joshua x. 28, 30, 35, 37, 39. And he took Hazor, and smote him and all the souls with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them, there was not any left to breathe. Josh. xi. 11, 14. These were all utterly destroyed, none left to breathe, then there was no life in them, they had ceased to breath, and were dead souls. Can the soul be in the grave? Yes. Oh Lord, thou hast brought up my soul from the grave; let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave. In the grave who shall give thee thanks? What man is he that liveth and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave. For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest. Jesus called Lazarus out of his grave. But says one, you have all the time been speaking of man. Now tell us of the never-dying soul, the immortal soul, if you please.

Well, my dear sir, I cannot find but one passage in the Bible that intimates that the soul never dies, and that is found in Gen. iii. 4, and its author is the serpent or Satan, and we know he is a liar, and the father of lies. We prefer to believe God not Satan. And then we cannot find in the Bible any such term as immortal soul or never-dying soul. We do find the word immortality in the Bible just once 1 Tim. i. 17, "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God." This is the only place the word occurs in the Bible, and the only wise God is the immortal one. The word immortality occurs five times Rom. ii. 7. To them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life. So to obtain the gift of God, which is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord, we must seek for immortality. Why should we seek for it, if we have it already? 1 Cor. xv. 53, 55. It says, when this mortal shall have put on immortality, repeats it twice, and says when that comes to pass, death is swallowed up in victory. If they are already immortal how can they change, or put on what they have already got, and why does Paul call them mortal? Again, 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16, "The King of kings, and Lord of lords, hath immortality dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." Where is it here has immortality? God and not man. 2 Tim. i. 10. Life and immortality is brought to light through the gospel. Paul is the only writer in the Bible that mentions the word, and he says, Whoever preaches a gospel different from the one he preached shall be accursed. Then if Paul preached that man (or the soul) is immortal, we must believe it. If he preached that God and he only is immortal, then we must believe that or be accursed. All of Holy Writ teaches that man is the soul, and when man dies the soul dies. We read, John saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the Word of God, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands. Rev. xx. 4. Here we find a soul can be beheaded, has a forehead and hands. Again, the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man; and every living soul died in the sea. Rev. xv. 3. What souls live in the sea? Fishes and whale and such like. And I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God. Rev. vi. 9. Souls can be slain. How can souls become immortal? By having faith in God, and doing his will. Christ said, to his disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believes and is baptized, shall be saved. How saved? When one obeys, and is baptized, his name is written in the book of life; and, if he does no act to have his name blotted out, then when Christ comes to the earth, to set up his kingdom, then will he raise out of their graves all that are written in the Lamb's book of life, and give them immortality, and they shall live and reign with Christ forever and ever; then will he bring his reward with him and give to every one that is worthy, an eternal life. Then can man say, I am now immortal, and will never die. God has now given me the gift that he promised to give to those that would come to Christ, and obey him. I am now found worthy to be with my Redeemer, throughout the endless ages of eternity, and am now an immortal soul in fact. Glory to God.

In conclusion: God created all life that breathes, living souls, gave man power over the other beings, and gave man power to become an immortal soul at the resurrection, by obeying God in this life. Man is not immortal until raised out of his grave at the resurrection. No immortality this side of the resurrection. None raised at the resurrection only those that are worthy to be made immortal.

Yours hoping for immortality at the resurrection,

E. W. KNAPP.

Sultan's Eye on Palestine.

Consul Merrill at Jerusalem has reported to the State department that the Turkish Minister of the Interior at Constantinople has issued an order relative to Jews who visit Palestine, which went into effect on Jan. 29. The conditions of the order are as follows: —On arriving at Jaffa the visitor must deliver his passport to the Turkish authorities and receive therefor a Turkish document. The visitor is allowed to reside in the country three months, when he must leave, surrendering the Turkish permit and receiving his own. Foreign Consuls are to compel the Jews who overstay the three months' period to leave. The action of the United States Counsel will be determined by the rights of American citizens in each case.

"Find us a better answer to the questionings of our spirit than Christ has furnished! Show us a better ideal of manhood than he has given! Bring us a better testimony to the life beyond the grave than he has borne! Ah! for four thousand years the world tried in vain to return to God; and now that he has come himself to be the way, we will not give him up for any negation."

Poetry.

"All the Day Idle."

All around you, everywhere,
Men and women do and dare;
With a purpose all alive,
In a swarming human hive.

Up and down, and to and fro,
On the endless round they go;
Patiently they bear their lot,
Life and death they question not.

Through the darkness, o'er the waste,
Voices call them, and they haste;
To the wind their fear they fling;
All their best they gladly bring.

If the wind blow east or west,
They can neither play nor rest;
So much work beneath the sky,
They can scarcely stop to die.

You are idle, and you stand
Just a dreamer in the land,
Having neither name nor place
With the runners in the race.

Are you made of finer clay?
Have you redder blood than they?
Must they always lay the nest,
While they strive for at your feet?

Must they always, first and last,
Stand between you and the blast?
Are you God's peculiar care?
Has he favorites anywhere?

It were best that you should feel
Forces of tempest, touch of steel;
Best to let your fancies flee
Quicken into thunes divine.

Men and women, with their loads,
Toil along the endless roads;
Overtake them, help them lift,
And no longer dream and drift.

Paul.

Paul was a great character of a great epoch. The life of such a man is of sufficient importance to engage the attention of every thoughtful mind. It may be a debatable question as to which exerts the greater influence, the man upon the period in which he lives and acts; or the period with circumstances belonging to it, upon the man to develop the gifts with which nature has endowed him. The state of the world at the introduction of Christianity seems to have been providentially pre-arranged with a view to affording a field for the operation of such gifts as Paul possessed, both natural and supernatural. The world's need was a religion such as Christianity. Instrumentalities and agencies adequate to the task of placing it before both Jew and Gentile were prepared. The mission field was broader than Palestine and the Jewish nation, "Go disciple all nations" was the great commission under which the ambassadors of the cross were to labor—especially to this world-wide enterprise was the Apostle Paul set apart, "A chosen vessel to bear the name of the Lord before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." How broadly this divinely appointed mission contrasts with the one of his own choice as a zealot of the law, the persecution of the disciples of Christ.

Under the name of Saul the subject of my paper comes before us in New Testament history as a young man present at the stoning of Stephen and consenting unto his death; and from thenceforth becoming, for a time, the most zealous and bitter opponent of the new faith; in the language of Luke he made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and hailing men and women, committed them to prison. It seems a pity that our great Apostle, the man without a peer among those bearing this official title should rank first, as a blasphemer and persecutor. 1 Tim. i. 13. In an incidental allusion or two made by himself to this part of his life there appears in the meaning of his words a deep and sincere regret, if not remorse, in view of what he did; confessing himself the chief of sinners, and less than the least of all saints and making his evil conduct toward the church to offset in a measure the honor pertaining to his high office. He only wished to humbly say, "By the grace of God I am what I am." What a marvelous change had been wrought in the man. The zeal that had so lately spent itself in an evil course was turned into a new channel, and the heart that breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord was now tenderly solicitious for the salvation of sinners. The strength of that iron will that was so determined to uphold the sanctity and integrity of the law was now to carry Paul through a world of opposition in his proclamation of the gospel. His soul was made strong to "suffer great things" for the name of Jesus.

He began to proclaim the honor of that name to his countrymen in Damascus, and to men and women whom he intended to seize with violent hands and bear away to prison. He was "not disobedient to the heavenly vision" but "straightway preached in the synagogues," that Jesus was the Son of God and showed them that they (the Jews) should "turn to God and do works meet for repentance." His zeal for the law was the measure of his zeal for the gospel. So the truth as represented by Galilean fishermen found in Paul a powerful advocate, who was able to plant its standard on shores far distant from Palestine. The beginning of his ministry followed immediately his conversion, and in the city of Damascus to which he was going a few days before as high sheriff bearing letters or warrants from the high priest, authorizing him to seize and bind men and women of the Christian faith and bring them to Jerusalem for trial and punishment. It was in the synagogues that he preached Christ or the Anointed Son of God to Jewish audiences, whose hatred and malice were aroused against the man who had so recently been a zealous defender of the law turned to preaching Christ and the resurrection, thus proving himself a traitor to the Jewish cause. He was more than a match for his opponents, for it is written that "he confounded them" * * * proving (or as in Diglott) demonstrating that this is the Messiah. His boldness in defending the faith was likely to get him into trouble, for the Jews took counsel to kill him, and watched the gates of the city day and night, and were only thwarted in their purpose by the disciples taking him by night and letting him down by the wall in a basket. Acts ix. 22-25. His missionary labors were now fairly commenced. Luke in this book of the Acts has briefly sketched the history of his labors and persecutions, and the Apostle himself in some of his epistles, especially the two addressed to the Corinthian church has supplemented what Luke wrote. After gathering up these several fragments and learning all we can about this man, so "abundant in labors," we feel the record is all too brief. We would like to know more concerning one who enacted so marvellous a part in the shifting drama of the times when the law was being superseded by the faith of the gospel, and the ancient superstitions of the Gentiles vanishing before the light of the risen Sun of righteousness.

The work of preaching among all nations, necessitating long and wearisome journeys was no trifling matter, but when we add to this the incessant opposition provoked by the truth in conflict with error resulting often in physical suffering and anguish of mind, we may well wonder how he could endure it all, especially if he was the frail man tradition represents him to have been. Here is what he has to say of himself under the head of boasting, the occasion for which was that some in the church at Corinth were calling in question Paul's authority as an apostle, and were forwarding the claims of certain Judaizing teachers in opposition to him. He acknowledges his folly in thus boasting, but charges the Corinthians with forcing him to do what they should have done, that is commended him as not behind those who had been reckoned as chief apostles; for the marks of an apostle had been seen in the deeds that he wrought among them, in signs and wonders and miracles, with steadfast endurance of persecution. In view of these rival claimants he asks. Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they children of Israel? so am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? so am I. Are they the servants of Christ? so am I. Thus far as to the flesh they had no advantage, but as a servant of Christ he could truthfully say, "Far more am I." "In labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Five times I received from Jews the forty stripes save one; thrice I was scourged with Roman rods: once I was stoned; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day I spent in the open sea. In journeyings often; in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, in perils from my countrymen, in perils from the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren. In toil and weariness, often in sleepless watchings, in hunger and thirst, often without bread to eat, in cold and nakedness. And besides all the rest, there is the crowd which presses upon me daily, and the care of all the churches. Who is weak but I share his weakness? Who is caused to fall, but I burn with indignation. If I must needs boast it shall not be in my strength, but in my weakness." 2 Cor. xi. Here is enumerated enough that was undergone by Paul to dry up the spirits of most men—to utterly discourage and cause them to abandon, for some other calling, their chosen field of labor where everything seems to conspire to make bitter their lot. Amidst all this opposition, these labors, these sufferings and these cares, the Apostle could say, "My light afflictions which last but for a moment work for me a weight of glory, immeasurable and eternal." The secret of his endurance was his faith in the promises of God. He says, "For I know that he who raised our Lord Jesus from the dead shall raise me also by Jesus, and shall call me into his presence together with you." Shall we proclaimers of these last days, with so little opposition, faint and grow weary?

JOHN L. WISE.

Reward.

In Genesis xv. 1, we find the promise of a reward. The Lord said unto Abram in a vision, 'Fear not Abram, I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward." Why does the Lord say he is his great Reward? Why is Abraham to be rewarded or recompensed? What has Abraham done? The Lord commanded him to leave his home, his kindred and to go into a strange land and Abraham departed and left all (Gen. xii. 1) and in Gen. xvii. is found what the reward is to be: "I will make of thee a great nation and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and the Lord made a covenant with Abraham saying, Unto thee and thy seed will I give the land, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and I will be their God." For faithfulness was this reward given, for Abraham is called the father of the faithful. David says, "The Lord rewarded me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands will he recompense me." As reward means something payed, or a recompense, David says in Psalm xviii. 20, according to his righteousness, so to receive a great reward we must be faithful in what is entrusted to our keeping. The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord right, rejoicing the heart. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever. The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether, more to be desired than gold. Moreover, by them is thy servant warned and by keeping them there is a great reward. What is the reward for keeping the law of the Lord? "Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life and enter through the gates into the city." What City? The city that Abraham looked for, whose builder and maker is God, the city of the great King. Love your enemies, do good and lend, hoping for nothing again, and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be called the children of the Highest. Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor. Every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it. If any man's works abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward, as ye have therefore received Christ Jesus, the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in and stablished in the faith. As ye have been taught beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world and not after Christ. Let no man beguile you of your Reward. Paul speaking here fully understands the fear of losing the promised reward. We must understand the promises and be rooted and grounded in the faith, put on the whole armor, run patiently the race. Beware of the sins of the world, knowing that of the Lord, ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance. Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which has great recompense of reward. "For yet a little while and he that shall come will come and will not tarry. Behold I come quickly, to give to every man according as his work shall be." As reward is payment for work done, thus according to our uprightness before him, according to our cleanness in his eye sight. If we are righteous the reward will be eternal life and to him that overcometh will I keep from the temptations which shall come upon all the world to try them. "Behold I come quickly, hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown, for to him that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him will I give power over the nations." From Genesis to Revelations the promises of reward is great. To those that like faithful Abraham leave all for Jesus, knowing that in him and through him we shall receive that exceeding great reward, the inheritance of the saints.

New Testament Lessons.

"Think these things into your ears," is a word for word translation, by Prof. Totten, of one of the commands of Jesus.—It is very expressive. It calls to mind those who "in an honest and good heart, having heard the Word, keep it, and bring forth with patience." Things are not "kept" that are not "thought into our ears." We hear them as though we had not heard, and straightway forget them. To "think things into our ears" is to think them into our memories; to lay hold of them so they cannot be forgotten, and having so laid hold of them, to obey them, by weaving them into the daily life; bringing forth with patience "the peaceable fruits of righteousness."

The wayside-hearers, the stony-ground hearers, the hearers who are "choked with cares and riches and pleasures," never think the Word of God into their ears; they hear it, but give it no chance to take root, so the devil taketh it "out of their hearts;" they "fall away" and bring no fruits unto perfection."

O, if I could but call the attention of careless hearers to the command of Jesus, how happy I would be. I am sure that the eyes of some of their number will fall upon their little lesson. It has been given to me, to give to them. God is in the matter; he it is who is speaking to them. His Word is the good seed, their hearts are the ground, and I am the sower, one humble servant of Jesus, to whom has been committed a small portion of the work, still left undone in the world. For some poor lost one am I writing. Think God's Word into your heart and be saved.

S. ROXINA WISE.

Faith vs Opinion.

Faith is confidence as to the certainty of things unseen, predicated on reliable evidence. Faith Godward is predicated on his Word. "Faith cometh by hearing the Word of God." Rom. x.

Opinion, is judgment of the mind as to the truth or falsity of a proposition supported by a degree of evidence that renders it probable.....but does not produce certainty.—Webster.

"Therefore preach the Word," says Paul. The time has come when all sorts of fabulous opinions are being promulgated. The worst feature in regard to them all is the endeavor to have them take the place of the faith or have them received as a part of the faith. Herein lies the danger. Dangerous in degree as they more or less, in order to sustain their notion resort to the pernicious habit, introduced by Origen to sustain Platonism and believing in the future and eternal salvation of all men, found it necessary to give God's Word a mystical hidden meaning, by which they would endeavor to make it convey even the very opposite idea from that given it by the laws of literal language.

From Origen's day to the present all imbibing his ideas have had to resort to the same Diabolical system. Not alone the immortality of the soul, but the future eternal life for all. In whatever manner, or under whatever name it may be called. The latest edition is called "Broader Hope." Rather an enticing name to the world, yet it does not change the idea. It still requires the same process. There is no question but such hope is broad enough to suit the most rebellious, but in stretching the blanket of hope to such an unwarranted breadth it becomes so very thin, even those with half-dimmed eyes can readily see through it and distinctly read the literal words, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life (everlasting.)

"Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction." "When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness and committeth iniquity and dieth in them, for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die." "The wages of sin is death." "Shall be cut off." "Shall consume away." "Shall not be," (exist) etc.

Any hypothesis of reasoning that will unliteralize and do away with this, will in like manner, and by the very same logic do away with all the literal promises made to the righteous.

Therefore, if any have been troubled about this "Broad Way" abide with us, hoping in the literal Word, and the mysticism will be gone. The literality of the Faith, Hope, and Charity will remain, shining out brighter as we behold it in God's mirror of literal truth.

Our Letter Drawer.

Brother Underwood:

I received a line from you this morning, informing me that I was indebted to THE RESTITUTION. I have been a reader of the dear old paper for over 40 years, under its different names. I have sacrificed all I hold dear in this world to follow in the footsteps of my blessed Lord and Master, and am now living with my daughter, a poor widow who is in poor health, and has nothing but her labor to support us. I have passed my 80th birthday. It will be like parting with an old friend, but I must do it, for I cannot pay for it. I must say. Good bye, dear old RESTITUTION, for I do not want to owe any one but love, and that I do owe to the dear old paper and all those who believe its teachings. I still remain yours looking and longing for the King in his Beauty.

J. H. S.

[Does any brother or sister wish the honor of paying for the paper to still go to this aged brother? He lives in Iowa. His full name and address will be given on request to any one who wishes to pay for his paper.—Ed.]

Editor Restitution:

It grieves me very much to see that there is so much delinquency by subscribers. I long so for its weekly visit. It always strengthens and builds me up. The trials and temptations of this life are so many that I feel sometimes so very much discouraged, but when I get my paper it always has something in it that renews my strength, and makes me more able to hold fast to the faith once delivered to the saints. I have been trying ever since I came to Stanwood, Ohio, to go to Cleveland to hear Brother Jobin preach, but so far have not been able to do so. My foster-daughter was there last September. I hope we will both get to go soon and that she will then put on Christ in baptism, and be one in the household of faith. Hoping the cause of the Master will prosper in the hands of those that he has intrusted it, I am your Sister in hope of a glorious resurrection when the Lord comes.

MRS. MARY C. SMITH.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:

I greet you in the name of Jesus our King. May he be all in all before the year 1901 has come to a close, is my prayer continually from day to day. I am satisfied all of his children are ready that see the truth as it is in Jesus; but the number is not complete yet. Surely the number cannot be large that are remaining. Judging from this point of God's heritage the great wheels of time are only running at present, in this age for the completion of that great cabinet that is to serve with King Jesus in the near future. The world at large has lost its bearings and there is no power at present that can adjust or stop it from rolling on to its doom of destruction. Investigation of God's Word is a thing of the past (with the world at large and nearly all of its professors of creeds.) Amusements of all kinds have completely choked out the Word of God and our fine churches that cost so many thousands of dollars, and made slaves of the majority of their members are turned into play-houses for the public to have a good time. We, who see the plan of salvation should do all in our power to enlighten some if possible to see the truth before the close of Gentile times. Jesus is coming surely soon. I speak not from excitement dear brothers and sisters, but what I have gathered from the sure Word of God for twenty-eight years. And does not the signs of the times corroborate the truth of this glorious saying. Here is one of the most satisfactory promises in Holy Writ, and I don't think hardly a day passes but what I think and meditate on this beautiful Scripture, "He that hath the Son hath the life. He that hath not the Son of God shall not see life, (eternal.) What a guide this is to our poor, frail beings. One can almost see every night that we go to rest how we stand before our All-wise Creator. May we all form a character that will give us an abundant inheritance in God's kingdom is my prayer.

J. C. VENABLE.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to contribute a few lines to the love-feast column. I am a little late in sending in my greeting but I remember that those that come in at the eleventh hour received every man a penny. I am still striving to serve the Lord; "for his mercies endureth forever." I am only pleading his promises, his grace is sufficient for us, and "Because I live ye shall live also." These are precious promises and if we miss them we miss everything. I am trying to live a life that will entitle me to a home in the kingdom when it is set up. Did any one ever try to enumerate the good things that God has promised to them that love and obey him, to heal all our infirmities and have a home in the kingdom of God and help rule the world in righteousness during the millennial reign of Christ? Is not that enough? But the half has not been spoken in this short, imperfect letter, that has been promised to the true child of God. For fear of wearying some one I will close. One thing I kindly ask of the brothers and sisters, that when they enter their secret closets to pray, don't forget to pray for this sister, that she may pass through all the trials of this life and be one among the overcomers at last. May this be our happy lot.

CANZADY DUNLAP.

Obituary.

Lewis K. Yeoman was born Jan. 10, 1853, and died Jan. 13, 1901, aged 48 years and 3 days. He was married March 4, 1875, to Sarah M. Norton, to which marriage were born five children, four of whom, together with the wife and mother, survive, the first born having died in infancy. With a sad heart does the writer record the untimely death of one so near and dear as a true friend and brother. For years have we been so intimately associated that the writer feels almost like he had just followed a member of his own immediate family to the habitation of the dead. How many pleasant hours have we spent discussing what were, to us, the important issues that go to make up our lot in this life and in that which is to come. It was indeed refreshing to converse in this intimate way with one whose mind always seemed to be centered upon the higher and nobler things in life. He was a man firm in his convictions in his religious, moral and business life, yet always very charitable with those with whom he differed. His character was an exemplary one, being honest and upright in all his dealings. By honest industry he sought comfort and happiness for his family without oppressing or injuring in any degree those with whom he transacted business. His was a most happy family until he was taken so suddenly from the ones he loved so well, and before whom he set a noble example, and for whose comfort and well-being his efforts in life seemed to be directed. His death was an exceptionally sad one. Leaving his home and family so cheerful as they retired for the night, to make a drive some six miles in the country, no more to return with the smile and good cheer so characteristic of the man, as the writer knew him in his home life. While returning, and when within some three miles of his home, while crossing the railroad tracks, the buggy in which he was riding was struck by an engine running "light," and he was instantly killed. In this sad and tragic manner ended the life of a man of exemplary Christian character, universally loved and respected in life and mourned in death by those who knew him. For years he had been a leading citizen in his home town, being foremost in all of its enterprises and industries, and especially in moral and educational circles.

Our beloved friend and brother, with his noble wife obeyed the gospel several years ago, since which time they have lived in accordance with its requirements, being ever ready to defend the truth and character of our great model Teacher, and remained firm in the faith so dear to us all. And while we are grieved beyond our ability to express in words, yet we sorrow not as do those without hope. Memorial services, conducted by the writer, were very largely attended by his neighbors and fellow-townsmen, whose places of business and the public schools were closed while they assembled to pay sad tribute to the memory of one upon whom they seemed to look as a true friend and brother to mankind. Never before has the writer observed such universal sorrow manifested by a community at the loss of a fellow townsman. He now sleeps in Jesus. Having fought the good fight of faith he has suddenly been taken from his loved ones, but has left them a rich heritage—the example of a noble life well spent in securing an incorruptible crown.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Illinois Brethren.

It was almost unanimously decided at our last State Conference to make Oregon, Illinois, the permanent location for the Conference. In addition to this it was decided to build a building having a dining hall and sleeping apartments. About half of the necessary funds was subscribed at the conference. Iowa Conference Campground.

To Iowa Brethren:

Our nice Campground is paid for, and we feel at home when we meet in our Annual Conferences. To make it more pleasant and home-like we need a dining hall.

At our last Conference it was determined to "build a suitable dining hall and kitchen, and that B. Kelroy and G. P. Allard be a committee to solicit the necessary funds for the same."

We call special attention to the above decision of Conference, and ask all members of the Iowa Conference, both men and women to contribute at your earliest convenience for this purpose.

For this and other needed improvements, we need about $400.00. Let the amount be contributed at once that the building committee may commence the work in the early spring—if the Lord wills.

We have had a very prosperous year in Iowa. Our grounds have yielded abundant forage. Let us make a Christmas or New Year offering to this necessary improvement, worthy of our homonies. The birthday of the Master comes but once a year and a consecration of a part of our means to his work is a fitting remembrance of the event. All contributions may be sent to A. J. Eychaner, Gladbrook, Iowa, who will receipt for the same. The Conference board will see that the money is carefully and patriotously used.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters. Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Father's Pity.

Through woof of gloom and sorrow
Through warp of pain and tears,
There flashes bright a silver thread
Amid the flying years;
For as the Father pitieth
The children of his love,
So with compassion filling not,
God watches from above.

And sees our need and weakness,
And not in vengeful wrath
Sends down the dark calamity
That blocks the tangled path.
But ever wise to guide us,
And always full of love,
A Father's tender pity seeks
To draw our thoughts above.

Sweet, when our hearts are heavy,
Dear, though our eyes are dim,—
The old, old Word of blessed trust
Which lifts us up to him.
How dear, when flesh is failing,
That breath of heavenly Love,
Which whispers in the silent home
Of God's paternal love!

Life hath its desert shadow,
Its interspace of tears;
And yet a sunburst often breaks,
And scatters swift our fears.
For as a father pitieth
The children of his love,
So God our Father, watcheth us
With pity from above.

Our feeble frame he knoweth,
Remembereth we are dust:
And evermore his love is kind,
His ways are ever just.
In evil and in blindness,
Through darkened ways we rove,
But still our Father leads us home,
By strength of mighty love.

Dear Restitution:

The Creator of the universe and Father of the human family does all things in the order which he has determined upon. When he would make the world he first determined the order in which it should be done. When man sinned he did not leave him until he had given him a promise of hope. Abel died rejoicing in that hope. But God waited more than two thousand years before he began the work, which was to result in the birth of the Savior. From the time the promise was given to mother Eve in the garden down to the time Jesus was born and laid in the manger, God was engaged in carrying forward the work which was to result in the birth of the Messiah, which he had promised to Eve. The time seems long to us, with God it was only four days from the time of Abel down to the time Christ shall come for his bride.

The special and particular work in which our heavenly Father has been engaged, has been the taking out of a people for his name, who are to become the bride of Christ. During all this time some crumbs of truth have fallen from the Master's table, which have been gathered up and eaten by persons on the wayside, which will cause them to obey, and furnish them with sufficient strength to carry them into the kingdom at the time of the final judgment, but they will fall short of having part in the first resurrection. This work is only incidental to the main proposition of securing a bride for the Bridegroom. After the bride is secured and the marriage takes place, then the next thing to be done is the preparation of the home which they are to occupy, both for time and eternity. The Father therefore sends the bride back to the world with direction and instruction to prepare the same and get it in perfect order for the habitation of themselves and all those who after hearing the gospel shall, with willing hearts, obey the same.

The first work assigned them is the preaching of the gospel to all who are then living in the world, the taming of the animals, the birds and the fishes, and removing the curse from mother earth. The remedy which is to be applied to bring this all about is "the knowledge of the Lord," which is to be so thoroughly promulgated that it shall "cover the land as the waters cover the sea." The Lord allows just one day, a thousand years, to accomplish all this. But it must be done before anything else can be even commenced. "The rest of the dead live not again until the thousand years are finished." From this we learn that the resurrection period does not commence until the millennial age is past. All that are in their graves, except those who have part in the first resurrection, must sleep on for at least one thousand years after the first resurrection takes place.

The next age which follows the millennial age, is the resurrection age. The special business which our heavenly Father will have in hand during that age will be the bringing back to life all the dead. Jesus says, "All that are in their graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth." John v. 28. It is estimated, by statisticians, that fifty thousand million people have lived and died, and are now in their graves. There are about twelve hundred million people now living. Christ and those composing his bride will have to preach the gospel to these twelve hundred million of people. If it shall require a thousand years to preach the gospel to twelve hundred million of people, how long will be required to wake up and bring to life fifty thousand million? A good speaker can speak to five hundred persons at once, and make them all hear and understand, but the dead must be waked up one at a time. A record has been kept of every person who has been born into the world. The destiny of each individual will be determined by that record. "They were judged out of the things written in the books." Those angels having the resurrection in charge, must first go to "the books" and make out a list of all those who are in their graves, (hades, the place of the dead). This list must be taken and the names of those resurrected must be checked off so that the record in "the books" shall be made complete, to the end that when all is done the books shall contain a complete record of the birth, the life, the death, the resurrection, the judgment and the reward, whether life or death meted out to each person brought into the world. Will it be said that God is too great, with too much important work to do to enter into such details with reference to insignificant persons who die before arriving at the age of accountability? In reply, let me say that not a sparrow falls to the ground without his notice. Does God work by a general rule, which applies to all, and thus treating all alike, or in a haphazard way, keeping a complete record of the works of some persons and no record of others?

After the close of the long resurrection age, which will certainly require more than one of God's days, comes the judgment age. The Revelator says, "I saw the dead small and great stand before God, and the books were opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." Rev. xx. 12. The judgment consists simply in an examination of the things written in the books, the name of each one of the fifty thousand million persons, except those who have had part in the first resurrection, and the books will show who they are, will be called, and they will each appear at the bar of God, and listen while the angel reads what is written in the books and be judged according to their works. If it shall be found that their name is written in the book of life, they will get life, otherwise they will be destroyed. It will require ages to go through with the trial and judgment of all this enormous number of people, but it will be done with the same deliberation and care in each and every case, as it would if there was only one person to be judged. When the judgment shall be completed and each person, who has ever live, shall have been called to the bar of God and have a fair and impartial hearing, and received from him who can do no wrong and who is no respecter of persons, but who not only does justly, but kindly and generously with the weakest of Adam's posterity, a just recompense of reward for all their deeds. The judgment age will end and that age of blessedness, which has no end will be ushered in, when Jesus shall turn all things over to the Father that he may be all in all.

From what has been said we are led to the conclusion that God has set his mile stones along the highway of time, marking the different epochs in the world's history. We therefore have the following epochs or ages.

I. The creation age.

II. The age of happiness. Being from the close of creation to the fall.

III. The ages of the creation of the second Adam. Being from Adam's transgression to the coming of the Messiah.

IV. The age of the creation of the second Eve. Being from the first coming of Messiah to his second coming.

V. The millennial age. Being from the first resurrection, which takes place at the second advent of the Savior, until the close of the thousand years' millennium, during which time the world is to be converted.

VI. The resurrection age. Being from the close of the millennium, at which time the general resurrection will commence, until the time when "all that are in their graves" shall have been brought forth, which will close the resurrection.

VII. The judgment age. Being from the close of the general resurrection, at which time the judgment will begin, until the close of the judgment period, when all shall have been judged.

VIII. The eternal age. Beginning at the close of the judgment and continuing on time without end.

These ages are distinct periods in the world's history in which certain things are to be done. What is to be done in one of the later ages, cannot be carried back and be performed in one of the earlier ages. Neither can that which is to be performed in one of the earlier ages be left undone and be carried forward to one of the later ages and be done there. To illustrate, Jesus can't wait for his bride to be taken out until the close of the millennial, for the reason that he has a great work to perform in the conversion of the world and must have his bride to assist him.

God could translate Enoch and Elijah, but he could not resurrect a saint and make him immortal until after the resurrection of Jesus, because he was to be the first fruits of them that sleep. It is a very wise thing that the world is to be converted, and the knowledge of the Lord is to be made to cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, before the general resurrection takes place. When this is accomplished the world will be in the very best possible condition to receive the dead millions back to life again.

God judges nations and cities and visits punishments upon them during the time of their existence, because they cannot be resurrected and brought back to be judged and punished as an individual can. He also forgives and rewards cities and nations when they repent. The city of Nineveh is an illustration of this. When cities and nations are punished the people residing therein suffer incidentally. The nation of Israel has been judged and most severely punished as a nation for the sins of the nation. The individual members of the nation suffer, but they have not been judged and no sentence or penalty has been pronounced upon them as individuals. Take the case of the city of Nineveh, the judgment of destruction pronounced by Jonah, was against the city, not against the people. The city by direction of its officers issued an order that the whole city, men, women, children and animals should fast and put on sackcloth and ashes as evidence that the city had repented. The result was the city was saved. The people could have all left the city within the forty days that Jonah gave them and thus have saved their lives, but the city would have been destroyed had not the city authorities issued and enforced the edict, which was a law enacted by the legally constituted authorities and was by them enforced. There are some persons who, as representatives of their governments, have been punished because of their people. But no one from the foundation of the world up to the present time, has ever been called to the bar of God, and been put upon trial to determine whether he shall have everlasting life or be eternally destroyed.

Before the judgment can even commence the court before which the trial of each person will be had, must be organized, and put in motion. Who is to have charge of and superintend all these matters? The answer is plain and easy. These and all other matters pertaining to the human family and to old mother earth and all that is therein will be under the control and management of King Jesus. Can there be any question about this? That being true, will the judgment commence until after Jesus comes and rebuilds David's throne and commences his reign? Will not the first thousand years under the reign of the Messiah be devoted to the conversion of the world and the restitution of all things? If so, then the judgment cannot and will not take place until after the millennium. Then the next thing that the Savior and his assistants must look after is the resurrection of the dead. If Jesus devotes one full thousand years exclusively to teaching the gospel to about twelve hundred million people, is it not fair to presume that he will devote a very long period of time exclusively to bringing to life fifty thousand millions of people? The judgment cannot take place while the people are in their graves. No one can, or will be destroyed until they have been given a formal trial, as provided in the holy record, and found guilty of refusing to obey God's precepts.

The whole human family have one common Father, even God who is the author of all life. All have the same Savior, even the Lord Jesus Christ, who gave himself as a ransom for all. All inherit the same mortality from Adam. All die the same death, and all are promised a resurrection through Christ. Can there be any doubt about these propositions. What a glorious outlook for the whole human family. Jesus did not come to judgment, neither will the members of his bride be judged. They are the elect ones being selected out from among the dead and the living by our heavenly Father.

Jesus is soon coming. The twentieth century will still be in its swaddling clothes when he comes. Let us be ready, with our work all done.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

Adoption.

The word adoption occurs but five times in the Bible. Rom. viii. 15, "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption whereby we cry Abba Father." In this passage we are taught that we have received the spirit of adoption. Rom. viii. 23 teaches that we are waiting (Paul with the rest) "for the adoption to wit, the redemption of our body." Gal. iv. 5 reads that we might "receive the adoption of sons." Verse 6, "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying Abba, Father." ver. 7, "Wherefore thou art no more a servant but a son.....and heir of God through Christ." Eph. i. 4, 5, "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world..... Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ." Verse 10, "That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth." Ver. 13, "After that ye believe ye were sealed with that spirit of promise." Ver. 14, "Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession. And that the inheritance is reserved in heaven to be revealed to us when we are revealed at the last time," or age the eternal age) when it comes down out of heaven. 1 Pet. i. 4, 5, "To an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." Rev. xxi. 1-3, "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away and there was no more sea. And I, John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God." We are now walking by faith, not by sight. Gal. ii. 20. "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me, and gave himself for me." iii. 26, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Eph. ii. 8, "For by grace are ye saved through faith and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."

From the above we learn the following facts: 1st, that we receive the spirit of adoption through faith; 2nd, that we are waiting for the adoption the redemption of our body (Paul with the rest); 3rd, that we might (by the redemption of the body) receive the adoption by having the Spirit of his Son shed abroad in our hearts and by it be sealed unto the day of redemption. Rom. viii. 11, "But if the Spirit of him who raised up Jesus from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you." Being heirs now, not inheriters, and only heirs by faith. 4th, That we were chosen and predestinated in Christ to the adoption of children that in the dispensation of the fulness of time we with all in heaven and earth (angels and saints) might be (adopted) gathered together in Christ (in his likeness) at the resurrection and at the last time (or age) constitute the family of God in its fullest sense in our Father's house not made with hands, that is to come down on the new earth and we permitted to enter in. 5th, That we only are adopted by faith here, and live and walk, and are the children of God by faith, and receive the spirit of God by a living faith (which is the spirit of adoption) and if we are kept by faith we shall receive the adoption in its fulness at the redemption of the body. Baptism is putting on Christ by faith and faith is the substance of things hoped for."

I have selected this from a brother's writings, and if you think it worthy of occupying space in THE RESTITUTION, I think it would help us to understand adoption, of which I see very little in the paper.

SARAH BUTTNER.

Christ and his Betrayers.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the pride of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John ii. 15-17.

The religion of Jesus Christ stands in direct opposition to the things of the world. Jesus' whole life, which is the great pattern, was spent in the service of his Father, and in doing good to mankind. He who was heir of all things had not where to lay his head. He and his disciples, apparently when in and near Jerusalem slept frequently in the Garden of Gethsemane, the name of which is used now as a simile of sorrow. This olive garden, on the hill-side, no doubt belonged to some friend of his. Judas knew well where to find him, when he sold him for thirty pieces of silver.

There in the garden at midnight, stood the two representatives, the Lord, the King, the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, the man who was ready to die for his enemies, and who amidst cruel mockings and scourgings, did not reply to his tormentors, and latterly prayed when nearly overwhelmed with weakness and grief, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

Judas represents the things of the world, deceitful, avaricious and cruel. He had expected Jesus to be proclaimed King, and felt sure that he, one of the chosen twelve, who was intrusted above all others, to carry the bag of money, would be the treasurer in that glorious kingdom, that his station had so long looked for, and O! then his opportunities of enriching himself would be many and bounteous; but his dreams had come suddenly to a close; wealth and power from this source had vanished away. He saw little or no progress being made in that direction, and Jesus had discouraged every sign of vaulting ambition among his disciples. The prospect of the throne and power apparently was not as near now as it was in the beginning. The bag was generally very light and not much could be pilfered from it, the thought flashed upon him, how he could suddenly acquire wealth. Then went Judas, unto the chief priests and said, "What will you give me and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver."

Many, very many have betrayed the Master for silver and gold since then. Those who live on the fat of the land and heap up gold, houses and lands, while their neighbors cry out for food, and who yet profess to be Christians, have betrayed him. Those who draw large salaries and live in great luxury, professing to preach the gospel of Christ are among his betrayers.

The following extract from a speech by Mrs. M. E. Carter, before the Society for Political Study, New York, Jan. 30, 1901, is characteristic of this class of betrayers of the Master: "It is as difficult to get an audience with some of our well-known ministers as with a millionaire. Some of these ministers cannot spare time to call on their parishioners but once a year, yet let there be a wedding of barbaric splendor and three or four ministers and bishops are present to perform a ceremony as well performed by one. And as for banquets, only one thing keeps ministers from them, and that is an invitation. Those who cheat, lie, and grind the face of the poor in order to enrich themselves, yet professing to be a servant of Jesus, belong to the order of Judas Iscariot.

While it is the duty of all God's servants to provide things honest in the sight of all men, it is often very difficult for them to do so, for they are frequently at a great disadvantage, competing with those who can lie freely, to further their own ends. The meek shall inherit the earth but they should not be too anxious to get a very large share of it just now, lest they forget the great Head, who while here could say, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

It is the duty of every servant of God to use their strength, time, intelligence or means, as the Lord hath given them, to forward his cause or to help those in need, and those who are striving to promote his cause. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever."

But the rush for wealth is every year becoming greater, and the amount of wealth that satisfied people fifty years ago is considered a mere trifle today. Men and women are every day ruining their health by overwork, mentally and physically; the asylums are full to overflowing with nervous wrecks, who have fallen in the wild stampede for style, wealth and position, and even those who are among the strong, who are able to trample down the weaker ones, and succeed in the race, what does it all amount to? Heart burnings, strifes, jealousies, and frequently they have to leave it all just as it is acquired, for some one else often to squander in revelling and drunkenness.

Those who wait on the Lord, walking in the footsteps of the Master, being content with things in moderation, will be heirs of all things, and live with the King in his glory through the endless ages of eternity.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 27, 1901. NUMBER 8.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalsaints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

On Feb. 20, Pope Leo XIII began the twenty-fourth year of his pontificate.

"Character teaches above and beyond our wills. Men imagine they communicate their vice or virtue only by overt acts, and do not see that virtue or vice emit a breath every moment."

The language question again caused a break in the Austrian Reichsrath, and so violent was the outburst that the president was insulted and assaulted, and the sitting was suspended. One side want the German used and the Czechs insist on their language being the one used.

The London Spectator, in commenting on the recent decree of the Sultan that no Jew who enters Palestine shall stay more than three months, says this act is due to Russian diplomacy. "The voice is the voice of Abdul-Hamid, but the hands are those of the Russian foreign minister."

"Grumbling is the easiest thing in the world to learn, but it is one of the most unprofitable after it is learned. It is useless to one who engages in it, for it never made a rough road any smoother, a heavy burden lighter, or a long day shorter. It never mends ills, it always adds to them. And it is useless business to other people, for it furnishes wares that nobody else wants."

It was supposed with the completion of the Tran-Siberian Railroad that Russia would be in a position to transport her troops and military wares to the far east at will, but now that is done it is found inadequate, and another road is to be built that will shorten the distance, and through such territory as will enable them to keep it running all the year. The proposed road will cost $15,000,000 and take three years to build it.

"Idleness is the burial of a living man, an idle person being so useless to any purpose of God and man that he is like one that is dead, unconcerned in the changes and necessities of the world; and he only lives to spend his time and eat the fruits of the earth like a vermin or a wolf. When their time comes they die and perish, and in the meantime do no good. They neither plow nor carry burdens; all that they do is either unprofitable or mischievous. Idleness, indeed, is the strictest prodigality in the world."

The request made by Germany last week to the Sultan of Turkey, gives this wiley "Sick Man" a new lease on life. It comes about in this way. In China the commander of the allied forces is a German officer. The proceedings for peace have been dragging on at some length, and last week it was announced that active operation would be again commenced to force the Empress Dowager to come to terms. Should this be done, and a march started into the interior of China, it would be dangerous unless strong detachments should be left along the line to insure supplies and a way to return. No aid could be expected from any natives. Up to this time the millions of Mohammedans in China have refrained from joining the Boxers, and as they are among the most warlike in the empire, they are feared more than all others. The German government, recognizing this has asked the Sultan, and he has sent a special envoy, to use his influence to restrain this portion of China's population from engaging against the foreigners. Inasmuch as the Russian and French governments have just demanded that the Porte punish the perpetrators of the recent Macedonian outrages, threatening all sorts of things if it is not done, this act of the German government cannot fail to be very pleasing to the Sultan. It shows him plainly that the Powers recognize his influence, and are fearful of a Mohammedan uprising in any part of Asia, knowing full well the rapidity with which it will spread if once started. This only shows how weak and rotten are all these so-called "Powers," and how inadequate is each, or all combined, to rule the elements that exist in the world. Instead of getting better, it is only made worse from day to day, and the only chance for betterment is the coming of King [illegible] to take the helm.

Don Carlos, the Spanish Pretender has formally abdicated in favor of his Son Don Jaime.

In view of the importance of Persia to the owners of India the following concerning the placing of the future Shah under direct Russian influence is of more than ordinary interest: "England will hardly be pleased at the news that the future Shah of Persia, Prince Mohammed Ali Mirza, has applied to the Czar of Russia for a tutor, and that a Russian scholar, S. M. Shapsai, has been sent from St. Petersburg to Teheran, the Persian capital, to undertake the instruction of the Prince for the next three years. The placing of the future Shah under Russian influence is especially significant in view of the fact that the present Shah is not expected to live many years, even if he does not abdicate his throne within the next few months. Several times it has been reported that the Shah has become insane, but he has so far been able to hold his power without serious difficulty. The Crown Prince has sixteen brothers of royal descent, besides others whose mothers are not of the royal clan, and as the law of primogeniture does not necessarily hold in Persia, it is possible that he may need some strong outside influence to aid him in securing possession of the throne at death or abdication of his father. In addition to holding the key to British India, on which Russia is supposed to have designs, the Shah is the possessor of a private fortune of more than $200,000,000, most of it in the shape of precious stones, which are kept in glass jars so that he may keep close track of it and cut off a few heads if the jars lose too much of their contents at any time.

Inspiration of the Bible.

"One of the proofs that the Bible is inspired as no other book is, is that it inspires us as no other book does. Genius surpasses itself when the influence of the Bible streams in upon it. Poetry borrows both its sublimity and sweetness from its themes. The painter paints most divinely when inspired by the thoughts of the Virgin and the child, and music rises into rapture when it gets into the 'chorus of the Hallelujahs.' The waves of oratory that roll from the lips of a Bright or a Gough reach their grandest when at the height of some Biblical quotation, and every species of human gift is reinforced, and every species of human virtue is sanctified and strengthened by the inspiration they draw from this unique volume."

"The Consolation of Israel."

We are happy to be able to say that we are in hearty sympathy with such as Simeon, who for long years believed, and watched, and waited, and knew, when he sounded his heart deep down, that confidence in the coming of the consolation had not fled. Years had come and gone,—age had crept upon him, dimming his eye and whitening his hair, but this only made him surer that he would soon see him who was to be King of Israel, for this had been promised him. But human nature is such that notwithstanding the promise, the suspense would create in him an ever-increasing desire. The ebb and flow of hope and fear is hard to control. He who heaves no sigh, and softens to no tear, and never has known the sickness that comes of hope deferred, is not a higher, but rather a lower variety of the human being. It is not that he is controlling himself, but that he has little to control. Even in the words "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace," we can perceive a sigh of relief,—the satisfaction that follows a yearning desire.

Yes; we are in completest sympathy with that old saint. We, too, are waiting for the Consolation of Israel. And we also know that our salvation is nearer than when we believed. Though we have received no personal promise we to some extent recognize the significance of the age we live in, and the things that are happening around us. Do we not know that we have come into the shadow of the Great Event which travels towards us? Let us then remember the gradual nearing of his approach who is preparing a place for us.

To wait well, to wait with patience, to wait without weariness, is one of the hardest tasks set for us. Exertion is comparatively easy, but to wait, to rest as though we saw, while nothing is in actual sight; and to stave off heart-sickness year after year, is a hard task.

To make it easier we should look at things from the divine point of view. He who sits upon the circle of the earth sees the end from the beginning, —and with the help of the Revelation made to us we can do something like that. We can trace his purposes out till we come to the return of Christ. If we know perfectly why he is coming, there is little need for anxiety about the when. It is by disconnecting the event of his coming and looking at it from a chronological point of view that the heart gets troubled with the long delay. God does not share this sort of trouble with us, neither has he any of his own. And we repeat:—To thoroughly understand his purpose is not to doubt its fulfillment; and he understand it best who sees in it a system of related truths independent of chronology. Simeon's heart and mind were concerned about Israel's consolation. Ages upon ages had passed since the promises were made to the fathers. David's throne was overturned and his people were in bondage and he longed for a sight of the Messiah. This was his state of mind and it should be ours; and instead of counting the moments we should be preparing to meet him. Readiness comes of the truth being deeply seated in our understanding and walking in its light. If we could all realize that we have none too much time to prepare for his presence, it would not hang heavily on our hands. As the present is all we can be certain of, let us redeem the time now; the parable of the virgins furnishes a fearful lesson; all were virgins; all were professedly waiting, but only half of them were really so. Let us heed the loving words of Jesus,—"Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

Love your Enemies.

The Master says:—"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." Matt. v. 44. He also says:—"Take heed what ye hear;" or "Consider what ye hear;" Mark iv. 24.

The lines are drawn very straight. It seems at first impossible that mortal men who have inherited warped and twisted moral organisms, should attain to such heights or degrees of excellence. But there stand the commands, and what can we do about it? Would the Lord command us to do impossible things? Who would say that? Let us first do what we are commanded in the second passage, and consider well what is said in the first. We are told in 1 John iv. 8, that "God is Love,"

and in v. 7, that "love is of God;" and the 8th verse says that "he that loveth not, knoweth not God;" but again we read that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us, and that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life." What we now need to know, is, if this love of or for enemies, is of the same nature as that which is based upon, or grows out of the appreciation of a character, or, say, the love existing between the

Friends or God,—

the members of the Body of Christ? We think not,—nay, we feel certain that it is not. One is akin to pity,—a softening toward those who are in the wrong; it may be difficult to obey the command even from this point of view, but at the same time it is practicable, or it would not have been enjoined.

God cannot look upon sin with any degree of allowance; it is abhorrent to him,—but he loves the sinner still, and reaches out after him and says, "Why will ye die?" and "is kind to the unthankful and to the evil;" and from this fact, our Lord makes a practical application to us; "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful," and makes merciful advances as he does, and then, if there be anything in your enemies capable of responding to the divine treatment prescribed, it may lead to an amendment of life. Do not wait for apologies or exact the utmost farthing, and hold off offenders at arm's length in the meantime; do as your Father in heaven does; and remember too that it is

"the glory of a man to pass over a transgression." Prov. xix. 11. It would seem from this that it is not sinful to forgive any one in our heart before confession; but it is sin not to forgive on confession; but it may be asked, if there be any divine example that teaches this? We think there is. Psa. cxxx. 3, proves that Jehovah does not strictly mark all iniquities. Says the Psalmist,—"If thou, Lord shouldest mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?" We do not understand this to mean that he winks at iniquity. David was a child of God, and doubtless speaks from experience in Psa. ciii. 13, when he says "Like as a Father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him, for he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust;" and "man's days are as grass, as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth; for the wind passeth over it, and it is gone, and the place thereof shall know it no more." He takes all this into account,—allows the paternal relation to stand, with much long suffering and tender mercy, in order that repentance and confession may procure forgiveness, through God's goodness to him while unthankful or disobedient. What we mean is this:—The lesson for us is the goodness of our offended brother may induce repentance.

Dropping back to a previous statement regarding the nature of love to enemies and of that to friends of God, we remark that one friend of God could hardly be an enemy of another friend of God. His enmity against a friend of God would constitute him an enemy of God, also, unless we are greatly mistaken. "He that hateth his brother walketh in darkness;" "he that saith he is in the light and hateth his brother is in darkness." 1 John ii. 9–11; and chap. iii. v. 14 says, "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death:" and verse 10 says "Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God

neither he that loveth not his brother. The Spirit draws the line very straight here. It is a matter of death or life to love or not to love a brother; but we must not love the evil ways of a brother. It becomes a serious matter to distinguish between the person and his sins.

The child of God can well afford to love his enemies, because he knows how blind and vain such enmity is, and how fury will recoil upon themselves when the day of the Lord comes. The love of Jesus when he wept over Jerusalem, or cried "Father forgive them," was different from that which drew the kindred hearts of Jesus and John together; nevertheless, how real his tears, how sincere his prayers.

Our Relation to God.

The whole account of our relation to God may be summed up as dear children, if we are walking in the truth. No one is yet in the truth, who is not being made sweet and filial towards the Father. Goodness that is modest; faith that is unreserved; hope that is sunny; attachment that is tender and long-suffering, are the peculiar and graceful features which appear in God's "little ones." The dry, sordid and selfish qualities of people generally prove them to be base things of the flesh. But of him who has been begotten of the incorruptible seed, it can be said, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." What immediately follows is of vast importance:—"And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure;" and be it remembered that only the pure in heart shall see God.

England and Rome.

It is well known by our readers that the Church of England has been working toward ritualism very rapidly for several years. The difference between the practices of some of the dignataries of the Church of England and those of the Catholic Church have been so sleight as to be called microscopic. Numerous clashes have taken place the last year between those who held to the original forms of the Episcopal service and those who had changed them, and the question even invaded Parliament. Queen Victoria, as head of the Church, to whom the matter should have been appealed, failed to do anything toward its settlement; thus sanctioning in a measure the departure from the established service. It has been hinted even that she was herself almost, if not quite Catholic.

There are more than 10,000,000 Roman Catholic British subjects, aside from the large number of those who favor what is called "ritualism" in the English Church, and among these Catholics, or "nearly" Catholics, must be counted a large number of the royal family and its connections. This "ritualism" includes all the elements of a Roman Catholic service, even including the "confessional."

The new King has visited Rome several times, and both he and his Queen are personally acquainted with Leo XIII. and the members of the papal court. Pius IX. held him in high esteem for a special favor in connection with the Irish Dominicans, and Cardinal Vaughan, Metropolitan of the Roman Catholic Church in Great Britain was always a welcome guest at Marlborough House. Several members of the King's household, prior to his accession to the throne, were Catholics. Queen Alexandra, like many other high church members are firm believers in the Catholic doctrine of transubstantiation, and make no pretense that they do not. Whether the King does also is not certain, but it is certain he leans more to high than low church from the fact that the churches where he has habitually attended are distinctly high and ritualistic.

From this we can see the difficulties in the way of taking the oaths necessary at his coronation, and hence we are not surprised to find that King Edward has in his office as head of the English Church "ordered" the Archbishops and bishops to make changes in the Prayer Book. This was one of his first official acts, and is calculated to emphasize his authority as Monarch over the Church. These changes relate not only to certain prayers for the reigning house, but to the coronation service, which remains identically the same as composed for the coronation of Edward VI., and of course was made to fit the circumstances of that time, and just as surely does not fit the present time. In the oath to be taken are these words: "I do believe that in the sacraments of the Lord's Supper there is not any transsubstantiation, and that the invocation and adoration of the Virgin Mary or any other saint, and the Sacrifice of the Mass, as they are now used by the Church at Rome, are superstitious and idolatrous; and I do solemnly declare that I make this declaration and every part thereof in the plain and ordinary sense of the words read to me as they are commonly understood by English Protestants, without any evasion, equivocation, a mental reservation whatsoever."

Some of the greatest peers of the realm whose offices of state at the coronation, are hereditary, such as the Duke of Norfolk, who is Earl Marshal, are devout Catholics. It is plain to be seen that they cannot take part without insulting their creed, and they dare not remain away.

Of course the right of the King to make these changes will be called in question, and a protest will be made, but if he chooses to call in, for co-operation, a few of his Privy Councillors, and further if he care to ask Parliament for a voice on the question, he can certainly rely on the Conservative party which has a majority, to relieve him from taking an obligation that will antagonize so large a portion of his associates and subjects.

At the time of the Reformation in England some 300 years ago, Cardinal Pole said

"Sixth Edward's mass 300 years and more shall quiet be,
But in Seventh Edward's reign again restored shall be."

This prediction seems near to fulfillment, as official records show that upwards of 30,000 masses are daily said in the United Kingdoms.

Thus we see a decided tendency in England toward Rome. The Duke of Norfolk not long ago at an audience with the Pope saying he hoped soon to see temporal power restored to the Papacy. Germany has signified her willingness to assist in bringing this about, by suggesting the turning over of the city of Rome to the Pope, and then by a gradual process enlarging his domain. So we see the two countries that have ostensibly stood against Catholicism for years, ready to give her not only moral but substantial aid. Students of the Bible will be able to see the significance of these things, and further comment is not necessary.

Obituary.

Job Banes was born in Stephen Township, Huron Co., Ont., July 31, 1855. In 1876 he removed to Indiana; was married to Anna Stephens in 1878. He became a member of the Church of God in 1877. He died near Remington, Ind., Jan. 30, 1901, leaving his widow, 3 children, his father, 5 brothers, and 2 sisters to mourn their loss, though not as such who have no hope. Bro. Banes was loved by all who had acquaintance with him, and the large number of persons who were present on the occasion of his burial witnesses to this fact. He was most earnest and sincere in his devotion to the truth, and not only did the ministers of the truth always find a welcome in his genial home, but he supported the cause with his means. He was partly instrumental in starting the class at Green Grove. Though living away from the brotherhood, his zeal for the cause of his Master never flagged; and through his solicitations Bro. Austin visited the neighborhood in 1899, and conducted a meeting which resulted in the organization of a class.

The writer had not met with him until last fall, and his acquaintance with him was most pleasant. For several months I visited him on my trips to Remington, and always found him the same patient Job, patient in suffering, with never a word of complaint, and even to the last solicitious for the advancement and success of the cause of truth.

In him his family had a loving husband and father, the church a devoted member and supporter, and the community a respected citizen. On Saturday Feb. 2, 1901, we laid him to rest in the cemetery near Remington, to await the glorious resurrection morning, and we believe when God shall call forth his sleeping ones, to rise in immortality to an endless life in the kingdom, that Bro. Banes will be among that number. May we all be approved by the "righteous Judge in that great day."

Report of Labor.

On the 2nd of Jan. the writer went to the city of South Bend to conduct a protracted meeting and in this way to gather together the dispersed of the Church of God of the faith of Abraham in that city. The task was no small one and required earnest and unremitting effort. There had been living in that place for some time a number of the faith, but up to this time no effort had been made to collect them into a body except in the way of an occasional meeting by Bro. Woodward in passing through at different times; also last summer and fall, through the efforts of Bro. R. C. Railsback a number of meetings were held in private houses. When I arrived in the city I found that the brethren and sisters had secured a hall in which to hold the meetings and had also quite well advertised the meetings, which were held in a hall on South Michigan street. The attendance at first was rather small, but we kept right at it, and had the pleasure of speaking to quite a number of persons besides our own. We had meetings only at night, and in the day time your preacher was out hunting up those of our own who had moved to the city from other localities. And whereas we had thought that there might be about 20 or 25 members we located just 40, and on the evening of Jan. 20th organized a class with 40 members. I also made arrangements to visit them once a month, or to have some one else do so, and think that with the proper efforts we can have a good working class in South Bend to hold aloft in that city the banner of truth.

Sunday Jan. 27 I spent at Remington, and on Sunday Feb. 3 I spoke for the church at Roll, and from Feb. 4 to 18 I spent with the church in Clinton County. My next point will be West Lebanon, where we have a number of the faith living. This place is 7 or 8 miles from the church in Warren Co.

We have a number of our people living in different places in this State who should be looked after, and it is the Evangelist's intention to look after them and see that they have some way of keeping up an interest in the work. If we can do this in the course of a year, I think we have done well.

Poetry.

Don't Make the Wrinkles.

Is father's eyesight growing dim,
His form a little lower?
Is mother's hair a little gray,
Her step a little slower?
Is life's hill growing hard to climb?
Make not their pathway steeper.
Smooth out the furrows on their brows
Oh, do not make them deeper!

There's nothing makes a face so young
As joy, youth's truest token;
And nothing makes a face grow old
Like hearts that have been broken.
Much have thy parents borne for thee,
Be now their tender keeper;
And let them lean upon thy love,
Don't make the wrinkles deeper.

Opening of the Seals.

"And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword." Rev. vi. 4.

In passing from the events of one seal to those of another, the nature of events govern the time required for the transition period. The accession of the Emperor Commodus, marks the beginning of the period of the second seal, which occurred A. D. 180. "Commodus was not, as he has been represented a tiger born with an insatiate thirst of human blood, and capable from his infancy of the most inhuman actions. Nature had formed him of a weak rather than a wicked disposition. His simplicity and timidity rendered him the slave of his attendants, who gradually corrupted his mind. His cruelty, which at first obeyed the dictates of others, degenerated into habit, and at length became the ruling passion of his soul.....One evening as the emperor was returning to the palace through a dark and narrow portico in the amphitheatre, an assassin, who waited his passage, rushed upon him with a drawn sword loudly exclaiming, the senate sends you this. The menace prevented the deed; the assassin was seized by the guards, and immediately revealed the authors of the conspiracy.....Lucilla, the emperor's sister, and widow of Lucius Verus, impatient of the second rank, and jealous of the reigning empress, had armed the murderer against her brother's life. The words of the would-be assassin created in the mind of Commodus a deep seated hatred for the senate."

Again, Gibbon says "Commodus had now attained the summit of vice and infamy. Amidst the acclamations of a flattering court, he was unable to disguise from himself, that he had deserved the contempt and hatred of every man of sense and virtue in his empire. His ferocious spirit was irritated by the consciousness of that hatred, by the envy of every kind of merit, by the just apprehension of danger, and by the habit of slaughter which he contracted in his daily amusements. History has preserved a long list of consular senators sacrificed to his wanton suspicion, which sought out with peculiar anxiety, those unfortunate persons connected however remotely with the family of the Antonines, without sparing even the ministers of his crimes or pleasures. His cruelty proved at last fatal to himself.

He had shed with impunity the noblest blood of Rome; he perished as soon as he was dreaded by his own domestics, Marcia his favorite concubine, Eclectus his chamberlain, and Lætus, his pretorian perfect, alarmed by the fate of their companions and predecessors, resolved to prevent the destruction which every hour hung over their heads, either from the mad caprice of the tyrant or the sudden indignation of the people. Marcia seized the occasion of presenting a draught of wine to her lover, after he had fatigued himself with hunting some wild beasts. Commodus retired to sleep but while he was laboring with the effects of poison and drunkness, a robust youth, by profession a wrestler, entered his chamber, and strangled him without resistance." Gibbon Vol. I. pp. 103-110.

Thus perished the tyrant Commodus, the degenerate son of the illustrious Marcus Antoninus, after reigning about thirty-one years. During his reign, the transition from the period of the white horse of the first seal, to the period of the red horse of the second seal is plainly visible. The first seal period stands as an oasis in a barren desert, having been preceded by a period of tyranny. As Mr. Gibbon says, "The golden age of Trajan and the Antonines had been preceded by an age of iron. It is almost superfluous to enumerate the unworthy successors of Augustus. Their unparalleled vices, and the splendid theatre on which they were acted, have saved them from oblivion. The dark, unrelenting Tiberius, the furious Caligula, the feeble Claudius, the profligate and cruel Nero, the beastly Vitellius, and the timid inhuman Domitian, are condemned to everlasting infamy during four score years (excepting only the short and doubtful respite of Vaspasian's reign) Rome groaned beneath an unremitting tyranny, which exterminated the ancient families of the republic, and was fatal to almost every virtue and every talent that arose in that unhappy period."

Having passed what Gibbon calls the "golden age of Trajan and the Antonines" we come to the period of the red horse, symbolic of war, and killing one another, which is clearly introduced during the reign of Commodus. "After the death of Commodus, his assassins resolved instantly to fill the vacant throne with an emperor whose character would justify and maintain the action that had been committed. They fixed on Pertinax the prefect of the city, an ancient senator of consular rank.....The memory of Commodus was branded with eternal infamy." Perthnx was a righteous and virtuous emperor, but in endeavoring to reduce the taxes imposed by Commodus, and to restore discipline in the army, he incurred the displeasure of the Pretorian guards, and after a short reign of eighty-six days, was put to death by the Pretorian guards, who preferred the tyrant Commodus, to the virtuous Pertinax. After the death of Pertinax, which occurred A. D. 193, the Pretorian guards put up the empire at public sale to the highest bidder, and was bought by Didius Julianus. "On the throne of the world without a friend he found himself." Roman generals in different parts of the empire refused to acknowledge Julianus as emperor, and civil war ensued. The Pretorian guards to save themselves proved false to Julianus, and the senate declared against him. "Julianus was conducted into a private apartment of the palace, and was beheaded as a common criminal, after having purchased with an immense treasure, an anxious and precarious reign of only sixty-six days." G. Vol. I. p. 136. The putting to death of the best families of Rome by the tyrant Commodus, and his death by the hands of his domestics; killing of Pertinax by the Pretorian guards, and the cutting off of the head of Julianus, has fairly introduced the period of the second seal: "To take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another."

I will here introduce an extract from the notes of Albert Barnes on the Revelation, "With Commodus' death commenced the third and most calamitous period. It lasted ninety-two years, from 193 to 284. During that time thirty-two emperors and twenty-seven pretenders to the throne, alternately hurried each other from the throne, by an incessant civil war." Sismondi i. 36. Barnes notes p. 178.

I will here copy from Mosheim's church history, the dates of the death of the emperors to show the exact fulfilment of the prophecy, in relation to killing each other during the period mentioned: Commodus 192, A. D.; Pertinax 193; Julianus 193; Niger 194; Albinus 197; Severus 211; Caracalla 217; Geta 212; Macrinus 218; Heliogabalus 222; S. Alexander 235; Maximin 237; Gordian I. and II. 237; Pupienus and Balbinus 238; Gordian III. 244; Phillip 250; Decius 252; Gallus and Volusianus 253; Æmilianus 253; Valerian 259; Gallenus 268; Claudius II. 270; Quintillius 270; Aurelian 275; Tacitus 275; Florianus 276; Probus 282; Carus 283; Carinus 284; Numerianus 284. Next will notice the great sword.

Is It Popery or Some Other Power?

Being requested by the Editor, I will give a few suggestions with regard to the power spoken of in Daniel, which should occupy the Holy Land. This is given in answer to the question of Bro. Wallace, as to whether the said power is the Papacy or not.

Those who are of the opinion that it does apply to the papacy, will have to in order to sustain the said opinion, show from history or prophecy, that the papacy either has, or will because, one of the prominent features of the prophecy is, that the said occupant of the Holy Land takes away "the daily sacrifice." Now, if the said act cannot be attached to the papacy then it is evident that the papacy is not in it at all.

The only daily sacrifice acknowledged by Jehovah, was that offered in the temple at Jerusalem, which was taken away by Titus in the year 70, and not by Popery. The fact is, that the pope did not become a supreme Pontiff until the Emperor Phocus issued the decree creating him the supreme Pontiff of the State, which date is given by some as 606, and by another at 608. Even then, for some time afterward, he was only an ecclesiastical power.

Furthermore, "1290 days" were to elapse, dating from the "taking away of the daily sacrifice," and then "the abomination which maketh desolate" should be "set up," and after a further extension of 45 days more we will arrive at "the end," when Daniel must stand in his lot "at the end of the days." Now the facts are (using either literal or prophetic time) that those events just named did not come to fulfillment at the close of those periods. Therefore we must conclude that the prophecy relates to a future restoration of the sacrifice, and a still

FUTURE TAKING AWAY OF THE SAME.

As to when this will be can be ascertained from Dan. ix. 24-27. "Seventy weeks" of prophetic time are determined upon, at the conclusion of which will be "to make an end of sins," "to make reconciliation for iniquity" and "bring in everlasting righteousness." These phrases indicate what time is referred to.

The "seventy weeks" were to date their commencement from "the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem," as noted in Nehemiah and Ezra. Consult verse 27 of Dan. xi., and you will find that the sacrifice is resumed at the commencement of the last week of the "seventy," and taken away in the middle of the same week, by a crafty king (not a ecclesiastic—Dan. viii. 22-25). and immediately following its taking away, the abomination of desolation is set up. See last part of ver. 27, chap. ix. This is confirmed in Dan. xi. 30 32. The covenant made at the beginning of the week (ver. 30) is forsaken, "that forsake the holy covenant," and (ver. 31) "pollute the sanctuary, (a temporary sanctuary which may be the mosque of Omar remodled into a temple, by this crafty wicked king) and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate."

Now, the above is the "daily sacrifice," (Dan. xii. 11-13) from which we must date the "1290 days" (literal time) and also when the abomination is set up, and also the additional 45 days, at the termination of which, it was said to Daniel, "For thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days."

We cannot escape the conclusion that the taking away of the "daily sacrifice" of Dan. xii. 11-13, and the setting up of the abomination, refers directly to that spoken of in Dan. ix. 27; and Dan. xi. 30-32, which is at the close of this age, therefore the "1290 days," and the "1335 days," must be literal, and not prophetic time.

If you note closely you will find that the party spoken of is an individual, a person, as is indicated by the words: "he," "his," "him," "himself," "the king," "the son of perdition," "willful king," etc. Everything indicates a personality. The masculine gender is always used with regard to this king, while the feminine gender is used to denote an ecclesiastical system. The full time of this power is given as "a time, times, and a half a time." Now, no individual can live through a prophetic period of 1260 literal years. Besides if the sacrifice is not taken away until the middle of the seventieth week, the remaining half week cannot admit of 1260 common years.

Literal as well as prophetic time is used in Daniel's prophecies. See Dan. iv. 32: "seven times shall pass over thee." Also Dan. xi. 13, (margin) "At the end of times, even years." See Rev. xi. 1-13, The two witnesses were to lie dead, and not be buried in "the street of the great city," three days and a half, which could not be prophetic time.

Let us briefly consider the characteristics of "the king," (the pope is no longer a king) who will take away the daily sacrifice; and we will see that the pope cannot fill the bill. See Dan. xi. 36-38: "And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished; for that that is determined shall be done. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all. But in his estate shall he honor the god of forces: and a god whom his fathers knew not shall he honor with gold, and silver, and with precious stones, and pleasant things."

This passage clearly indicates a personality. The phrase "the king," applies to some single, special king, who shall do according to his (own personal) will," "shall exalt himself," like others before him have done.

Now, bad and corrupt as the papacy is, it don't begin to be as vile as this blasphemous king. The pope does not, and never has made claim to be superior to every god, and has never set herself to speak marvelous evil things "against the God of gods." This king does not "regard any god, for he shall magnify himself above all." Popery does have regard for numerous gods. It has regard for the Father as God, it also regards the Son, and Holy Ghost as gods, it worships also the Virgin Mary, and prays to a vast multitude of saints, while this king does not "regard any god." Do you see the difference?

The above is in exact accord with 2 Thess. ii. 3-8, where he is called, "the son of perdition." This is personal likewise, and as yet you will observe, the language of verse 4, is almost an exact quotation of Dan. xi. 36. "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming."

This also is personal. This pope does not set himself up in open antagonism to God as he does, "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called god," for we know of a fact that they do adore many gods, in place of "showing himself that he is God." The pope has never made any claim to the supplanting God. His claim to be the Vicar of Jesus Christ, is far from being a claim to be Jehovah himself, and to be even superior to Jehovah as claimed by this king, who is to take away the daily sacrifice, etc.

In Daniel, we further read, concerning this wicked king. "And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practice, and shall destroy the mighty and holy people. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destoy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand."

Popery, in place of "standing up against the Prince of princes," in its form of worship renders the utmost respect and adoration to Jesus. These Scriptures make a very poor fit when applied to popery.

Another point which shows that this wicked king, which is also called in Daniel the "little horn," is still future, is found in speaking of the rise of the ten horns. "The ten horns out of this kingdom, are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall arise after them." Now, as yet we have nothing more definite than guess work, that the ten horns have arisen. The ten horns or kings are to be in existence when God sets up his kingdom. We read in Daniel "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom," etc. Now what are the facts: It is claimed that the ten horns came into existence during the fifth and sixth century. They have passed away, and God did not set up his kingdom in their day. I have in my possession eight different lists which writers have named as being the ten kings, and yet God did not set up his kingdom in the days of any one of them. Among the last enumerations we have one by Dr. John Thomas, found on page 202 of Elpis Israel: 1, Belgium; 2, France; 3, Spain; 4, Portugal; 5, Naples; 6, Sardinia; 7, Greece; 8, Hungary; 9, Lombardy; 10, Bavaria.

We read in Daniel, that the little horn tears three of the ten up by the roots. Which are they? Do you know? Now, we find that popery under the symbol of Babylon the Great, is to be destroyed by the confederacy of ten kings. If it is true that popery is the little horn, which destroyed three of the ten, how comes it that there are still ten kings left to destroy Babylon, if three have already been destroyed? In Rev. xvii. 16, we read, that the ten horns destroy popery under the symbol of Babylon the Great. They burn her with fire, and make her utterly desolate. The blasphemous king "shall prosper until the indignation be accomplished."

The little horn "prevailed against the saints till the Ancient of days came: and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." But popery was destroyed (Rev. xvii. 16) before then, and that by the ten horns. Thus you must plainly see that these Scriptures if honestly handled, show clearly that popery is not the little horn, or the wicked infidel king which takes away the daily sacrifice, as recorded in Daniel.

W. H. WILSON.

The Prayer of Jesus.

This prayer of our Lord naturally divides itself at least into four parts: --1. For himself. 2. For his disciples. 3. For those who should believe through the words of the disciples. 4. For the world.

I do not propose to examine in detail. It occurred immediately after one of the most familiar and protracted discourses with his disciples, running through the three preceding chapters, and opens with this declaration: "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, Father, etc." That part which relates to the power given him, and the knowledge requisite to obtain life eternal, I pass for the present, and also the general prayer for himself.

2. He prays especially for his immediate disciples, whom he is about to leave, and for none other. The world or mass of men were not included in his petitions, but expressly excluded.

3. At verse 20 commences a more general supplication, viz: For them also, who shall believe on me through these (the disciples) words. The disciples form the first class, and believers in Jesus, through their teaching form the second class, and what is especially prayed for them is, That they may be one as thou Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they may also be one in us, (what for?) that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. He adds, That they may be one even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in me, (what for?) and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me.

4. The world. Then we are the subjects of Jesus' prayer; and all the petitions relative to his disciples and believers are that they may be so prepared that the world may believe and know that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world. 1 John iv. 14. And this, says John, We have seen and do testify. But at present, We know that.....the whole world lieth in wickedness. 1 John v. 17. Is this to be the case always? Is Jesus' prayer never to be answered? He said on another occasion, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me; and I know that thou hearest me always. 1 John xi. 41, 42.

Two things, then, are certain. 1st. Believers in Jesus are all to be made perfect in One, and 2nd, The world are to believe and know that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world. Have either of these events ever yet taken place? Can they ever take place in this present life? But one answer can be given to these two questions, and that a negative one. Believers in Jesus never have been perfect in One, in the sense of the prayer of Jesus. The world has never yet been led to believe or know through that unity of believers, that Jesus was the "Sent" of God. All Christendom today is witness that no such union of believers exists, and no such faith nor knowledge exists in what is called "the world," as the prayer invokes, not even in Christendom, much less in the millions of heathendom.

I ask again, Did Jesus ever ask of his Father anything that will not be granted? Did Jesus say, All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive, and shall not his own prayer be answered? Forbid such blasphemous thoughts. Then the perfect oneness of Jesus will yet be accomplished; but it has not yet been done and cannot be done in this life any more than the promise to Abraham that he should inherit the earth, or land, could be fulfilled without a resurrection from the dead. It is not till the saints are raised from the dead that the unity prayed for will ever take place; and it follows, that not until after that will the world believe and know that the Father sent the Son to seek and to save that which was lost.

Thus, we perceive, the prayer of Jesus carries us forward into the ages to come, and the past ages and the present one are only preparatory to the future; or, the work to be performed in the kingdom of God, under a perfect King, with perfect subordinate rulers, who are all made of one mind, seeing eye to eye; they being conformed to Jesus' prayer. That they all may be one, as thou Father, art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us. What a Rulership. What a government. What could withstand such a perfect administration? Then begins the world's trial which is to determine each one's final state or destiny, and a great multitude, which no man can number, of all nations, kindred, people, and tongues will have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, and will cry with a loud voice, Saying, Salvation to our God, who sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb. Rev. vii. 10.

These are not the few who are to enter by the straight gate; nor the little flock to whom it was the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom. They are another class, blessed and saved under the administration of the perfected class who had all become one in the Father, and the Son; and so the world is made to believe and know that Jesus is the rightful Ruler and Redeemer of the world; and hence, they ascribe praise to "God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." When this is accomplished, and not until then, will Jesus prayer be answered in full, and the great jubilee will come, shadowed forth by the law, and the final ingathering, or harvest, will follow the first-fruits at a later period. The first-fruits are to be Christ's at his coming, 1 Cor. xv. 23: for James says, of his own will begat he us with the Word of Truth that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures. Jesus, his disciples, and all that believe on him, through the Word of Truth, in this life make up the first-fruits from among the dead; being reconciled to God, in the life that now is, by the Word of Truth, which Word of Truth God will have all men come to the knowledge of, so that such as have not had that knowledge in the past nor present age will have it made known to them in the age or ages to come, then to be set forth to them by the manifestation of the sons of God, Rom. viii. 16-23, or, as says the apostle, "God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ..... that in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Eph. ii. 4, 7. Thus demonstrating to the hitherto untaught millions or masses of the human race the riches of his grace, and encouraging them to trust in Christ for a deliverance from sin and all its consequences when the Word of Truth is clearly exhibited to them, and Christ with his glorified and united saints shall make all see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the ages hath been hid in God, who created all things by or for Jesus Christ according to the purpose of the ages, which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord. Eph. iii. 7, 11.

Thus we see a fulness in our blessed Lord's Prayer that is little thought of, even by Christians, so prone are they to confine the great work of redemption to the present age or life; and giving infidels and all untaught men to think that God's work for the race is a small affair, far more evil than good, and unworthy of a Being professed to be infinite in wisdom, power, goodness and love. Let our hearts be enlarged to comprehend more of the unsearchable riches of Christ, and better understand the great idea of the apostle when he says of God our Father, "He having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself; that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him." Eph. i. 9, 10.

May the "Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings. My prayer is, Jesus hasten that day when the watchmen shall see eye to eye.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Having seen the death of our dear Sister Abbie A. Howard, in the last RESTITUTION, I will endeavor to write a few lines concerning her, but I acknowledge my feebleness to do her justice, for words would fail me to tell of all her virtues and Christian kindness during my short acquaintance with her, which commenced during my dear husband's life time, while we lived at Winchester, she and her husband, Bro. Daniel Howard, lived near us for some time, and they were both true self-sacrificing soldiers for the cross of Christ, both of them able to preach the gospel in all its beauty which they did faithfully during their stay with us. And we were very loathe to give them up, when they moved away, but unavoidable circumstances caused us all to be separated in course of time, and I never heard any thing direct from Sister Howard for a long time, but during my last winter tour, I saw in THE RESTITUTION an inquiry from her saying, "Will my dear Sister Morgan please write to me?" Oh, I was so glad to hear from her, I wrote at once, and received a long joyful letter in a very short time, and it was a very pleasant season with me. We had been like David and Jonathon, our souls were united in love, and after a separation of about fourteen years, it was very pleasant to be in sweet communion once more, even if it was only by letter. We have corresponded ever since, and while she no doubt had many far better correspondents than myself, yet none will miss dear Sister Abbie as a loving writer more than I will. Her letters were so full of good advice and excellent teaching and Christian training, and encouragement to the weak and tottering ones, and also full of strong meat for the full grown man in Christ. In her last letter to me she said, "Oh, how glad I would be to be with you, and preach the gospel to a lost and dying world, but as I cannot, I will serve faithfully in my calling till I get an honorable discharge." Oh, what beautiful submission to the divine will. When I last parted with her I had hoped to meet her again in this life, but my only hope now is to meet her in the resurrection morning, where parting will be no more, but God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away. She has fought a good fight, and has kept the faith, and is ready to be offered when the Life-giver comes to reward his servants whether it be noon or night. May we all strive to emulate her virtues, and die the death of the righteous, that our works may follow us as hers do, and may we with her all hear the welcome voice, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," is the prayer of your humble Sister, waiting for the manifestation of the children of God.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 6, 1901. NUMBER 9.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for the salvation.

Poetry.

Be True to Thyself.

Thou must be true thyself,
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another soul wouldst reach.
It needs the overflow of heart
To give the lips full speech.

Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed.
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed.
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

—Horatius Bonar.

Genesis. Chap. 19.

1. And the two angels came to Sodoma at evening. And Loot was seated beside the gateway of Sodoma. And when Loot saw them, he stood out to meet them, and bowed with his face to the ground.

2. And said, Lo, ye lords, incline out into the house of your servant (house-servant) and put up and wash your feet, and ye shall arise at dawn and go on your way. And they said, No, no. But we will camp in the public-square.

3. And he constrained them and they inclined out unto him, and entered into his house; and he provided drinking-water and baked unleavened loaves for them, and they ate.

4. But before they had lain down to sleep, the leading men of the city, the Sodomites, from young man to elder, all the laity together surrounded the house.

5. And called Loot out and said unto him, Where are the men of mark who went in unto thee tonight? Lead them out unto us, that we may have connection with them.

6. And Loot went out unto them as far as the front door and closed the door behind him.

7. And said unto them, By no means brethren, ye will not do wickedly will ye?

8. I have two daughters who have not known a husband. I will lead them out unto you and ye shall use them as it pleaseth you; only ye shall not do wrong to these men, because they have come in beneath the shelter of my roof.

9. And they said unto him, Stand away! there, thou camest in to sojourn, and not to act as a judge; now then we will treat thee ill rather than them; and they treated the man Loot with great violence, and drew nigh to break the door.

10. But the men stretched forth their hands and drew Loot in unto themselves into the house and closed the door of the house.

11. And the men who were at the door of the house they smote with inability to see (not ordinary blindness) from small to great, and they went about seeking the door.

12. And the men said to Loot, There are relatives by marriage or sons or daughters, or if there be any other of thine in the city, do thou lead them out of this place.

13. For we are going to destroy this place, because their cry hath been lifted up to the presence of the Lord, and the Lord hath sent us to crush it out.

14. And Loot went out and talked with his relatives by marriage who had taken his daughters, and said, Arise and come out of this place, because the Lord is going to crush out the city; and he seemed in the sight of his relatives by marriage to be uttering absurdities.

15. And when it had become dawn, the angels hasted Loot saying, Arise, take thy wife and the two daughters that thou hast and come out, that thou also mayest not be destroyed along with the transgressions of the city.

16. And they were terrified and the angels laid hold of the hand of his wife and the hands of his daughters in the Lord's act of sparing him.

17. And it came to pass when they had led them outside and had said, Save thine own soul; do not look back nor stop in any of the surrounding country; save thyself in the mountain, lest perchance thou be taken along with them.

18. That Loot said unto them, I pray, lord.

19. Since thy servant hath found mercy in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy righteousness which thou art doing to me in causing my soul to live; I am unable to get safely to the mountain lest the calamities overtake me and I die.

20. Lo, there is this city nigh there for me to flee for refuge to, and there I shall have obtained safety. Is it not a little one? And my soul will live for thy sake.

21. And he said unto him, Lo, I wonder at thy face and at this word [about not overturning] the city for which thou hast spoken.

22. Haste then to be saved there; for I shall be unable to do a thing until thou hast come there; therefore he called the name of that city Seegoor (Thy care?)

23. The sun had gone out upon the land, and Loot entered into Seegoor.

24. And the Lord rained brimstone (or divine judgment) and fire upon Sodoma and Gomorra from the Lord from the canopy.

25. And overturned these cities and all the surrounding country, and the people who lived in the cities and that which springeth up from out the earth.

26. And his wife looked back and became a pillar of salt.

27. And Habraam arose at dawn and went to the place where he had stood in the presence of the Lord.

28. And he looked over the face of Sodoma and Gomorra and over the face of the surrounding country and saw: and lo, a flame was arising out of the earth like a breath of a furnace.

29. And it came to pass when God crushed out all the cities of the surrounding country, God remembered Habraam and sent Loot out of the catastrophe, when the Lord overturned the cities in which Loot was dwelling.

30. And Loot went up out of Seegoor and seated himself he and his two daughters with him on the mountain; for he was afraid to dwell in Seegoor; and he took up his abode in the cave he and his two daughters with him.

31. And the elder daughter said unto the younger; our father is an elderly man, and there is no one on the land who will go in unto us, as befitteth all the earth.

32. Come and let us give our father wine to drink and let us lie with him and raise up seed from our father.

33. And they gave their father wine to drink that night, and the older daughter entered in and lay with her father that night, and he did not know when he lay down and when he arose.

34. And it came to pass on the morrow that the older said to the younger also, lo, yesterday I lay with our father. Let us give him wine to drink this night also and do thou go in and lie with him, and let us raise up seed from our father.

35. And they gave their father wine to drink that night also, and the younger went in and lay with her father; and he did not know when he lay down and when he arose.

36. And the two daughters of Loot conceived of their father.

37. And the older brought forth a son and called his name Mooab, saying, "of my father." This one is the father of the Mooabites unto this day.

38. And the younger brought forth a son, and called his name Amman, saying, "A son of my race." This one is father of the Ammanites unto this day.

COMMENT.

1st verse, It is evident that Loot was seated as a judge in the gateway of Sodoma and not merely as a man of leisure. We also learn that only two of the three angels actually went to Sodoma.

2nd verse, "Street" R. V. should be public-square or plaza.

3rd verse, R. V. says "Loot made them a feast" water and unleavened bread isn't much of a feast; but that is all there is mentioned in the text.

6th verse, R. V. makes no distinction between "door" and "front-door." There was a vestibule as now between these two doors.

8th verse, R. V. "man" should be "husband" and "shadow" should be "shelter."

In the 11th verse there is nothing about "wearying themselves" as in R. V.

In the 13th verse "waxed great" R. V. should be "hath lifted up" and "destroy" is "crush out."

In the 14th R. V. "mocked" should be "uttering absurdities." In the 19th R. V. "But he lingered" is not in the text, and the R. V. omits "And they were terrified." "Sparing" also mistranslated "merciful."

In the 19th verse R. V. has "mercy" again where it should be "righteousness."

In the 21st verse R. V. omits "I wonder at thy face, etc." and inserts a statement about "not overthrowing the city, etc." not in the text. R. V. also says the name of the city therefore was called "zoar." The text says Seegoor.

In the 23rd verse R. V. says "The sun was risen upon the earth," etc. The text says "The sun had gone out upon the land"—that is that darkness preceded the cataclasm that was soon to follow—a very different thought and of special interest to the scientist.

In the 24th verse the word "Theion" meant, originally, "divine", and, no doubt, the reason sulphur or brimstone came to be called by this term was because it was the specific instrumentality of divine judgment in this case.

In the 27th verse, Why does the R. V. give the word "lord" a capital L? The "lord" in this interview was an angel and not an object of worship we are specifically instructed elsewhere in the Scriptures.

In the 28th verse R. V. has "smoke went up." Text says "a flame arose."

In the 32nd verse R. V. has "earth"—should be "land" and "preserve" should be "raise up."

In the 33d verse R. V. has "she" where it should be "he" same mistake in 35th verse.

In the 38th verse R. V. has the name "Ben-Ammi" should be simply "Amman." For "Ben" means "son" and is a part of the following explanatory clause and not a part of the name.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Bible Inspired.

"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." 2 Tim. iii. 16. The men whose heaven appointed lot it was to make contributions to the system of divine truth were inspired in a sense entirely different from the inspiration that elevates the mind of the modern poet, the orator and the writer of prose composition. Theirs is the inspiration of the topic in hand—the inspiration of their own thoughts as they view the subject under the impression of its importance and the beauty and harmony of the several parts that go to make up the whole theme. This is what Cicero in his day accorded to the poets, and designated "a divine action of nature." The inspiration of the Bible cannot be classed under this head. The difference between the two actions, the action of nature and that of the Holy Spirit, is so great that no reasonable mind will attempt to place them on the same level. The one is common in the realm of nature, the other extraordinary; and though we might admit, still within the same realm, yet so far removed as to be immeasurably beyond the known laws of nature, and therefore beyond man's present sphere of knowledge, and will likely remain inscrutible to him for ages to come.

Touching the fact of the giving of a revelation of things future, Peter says prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. 2 Peter i. 21. Man by an impulse of nature or the working of his own mind is not competent to the task of disclosing events that lie veiled in the distant future. Left to himself with his natural powers of mind, both his origin and final destiny remain alike insoluble mysteries. From whence came I, and whither am I going? are questions that would only be answered by their own faint echo. Paul says: "We have received not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God." 1 Cor. ii. 12. To know the things of God is to know the thoughts of God concerning us as to what we are and what we shall be. These thoughts or things are freely given to us. Revelation then is a gracious and merciful gift to the fallen and sinful creatures, who are in the deepest need of just such knowledge.

JOHN L. WISE.

Kind Words.

"Kind deeds toward those with whom you live,
Kind words and actions right,
Shall midst the world's deep darkness give,
A sparkling little light."

How often a kind word fitly spoken would do good. How many a weary heart it might cheer and many a burdened soul relieve. How many of us have not felt at some time in our life the want of a kind, encouraging word. How much good it would have done. But alas, the word perhaps was not spoken, and we are left to tread our weary journey alone. In times of trouble when perhaps our hearts are overburdened with grief, or misfortune has overtaken us, or the evil tongue shall have brought our fair name low, how the kind word, the loving smile, the gentle but firm pressure of the hand thrill our hearts with joy until we feel like giving thanks to the Giver of all good and perfect gifts. But to our sorrow, in these last and evil days, where is the kind word? Where are those who would help elevate their fellow being? While we cannot do great and noble deeds as some do, we can do little deeds, knowing that after all, it is the little things that make up the whole. We may not help God paint his clouds and sunsets, but we can put a little of immortal beauty and gladness upon human lives. We can help lift the fallen, cheer the faint, heal the sick and lead the blind, and the poor we have always with us. There are many ways of doing good to our fellow being.

If you see some weary neighbor,
Toiling up life's rugged road,
You can speak a kind word sometime,
That will help him bear his load.

If you see some one who's striving,
To o'ercome some fault or wrong,
Let them know you see their effort,
It will help them to be strong.

Kind words are like rays of sunshine,
Driving clouds and tears away,
Sweet as dew to thirsty flowers,
Giving strength for coming day.

Give your kind words now in season,
Do not wait till hope has fled,
Give them freely to the living,
They can never help the dead.

Yours in hope,
MRS. W. A. MOORE.

Creation.

"In the beginning God made the heavens and the earth. And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep, and the Spirit of the great God moved upon the face of the deep. So he caused the light to shine, and separated the light from darkness, and he saw that it was good, and called the light day, and the darkness night, which he in his wisdom saw was good."

The curtains of night are drawn around us and we fall into sweet slumber and rest our weary bodies from the cares and toils of the day, so we are refreshed and can go about our labor when the morning breaks forth, and the sun rises to light the earth, and causes it to bring forth abundantly for the use of man, and beasts, and all living things which he in his great wisdom has created for our use. Oh, how wonderful is his judgments and his ways past finding out. We all know how he separated the waters and gave them their boundaries, so far they should go and no farther, and the dry land appeared, and he separated the waters from the land, and in the waters he has created enumerable fishes which are for food for our use, also many different varieties of living things which make their home in the great deep, and we see how life is often maintained by the heathen nations and by those that go forth to explore different places. God in wisdom has provided these things for the use of man. If we would think of his great mercies oftener how much better it would be, for how can infidelity abound when we take into consideration what God has done for us. Look at the great forests that give us our supply for fuel, and builds for us our homes and the great vessels that sail on the mighty deep. Also the coal that is found in the bowels of the earth. The gold and the silver, the copper and brass are among some of the deposits he has caused our earth to yield; for he saw in his wisdom it would be necessary and beneficial for our use. And the All-wise looked upon his work and pronounced it very good. And he made every winged fowl, and birds to fly in the open air in the firmament of heaven, that give joy to us with their sweet songs. He also created all of the great beasts of the earth, and all creeping things that creep on the earth. He blessed them saying, "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth." These things were also for our use. His work was not yet finished or perfected; for he said, "Let us make man in our own image and likeness." This is God's Word, "In our own image and likeness", so we see God has a form which he has made or created man in. Now we will see what he intends to do with the man he has created. He says, "Let him have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over the beasts of the earth, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth." So Adam and Eve were created according to the Word of God, and he brought all living things to Adam to name, and whatsoever name he gave them that was what they were called. He also planted a garden eastward in Eden, and here in this beautiful garden, in the midst of all luxurious fruit with a river running along to water the garden. Here he placed the happy couple, to dress and keep the garden, telling them they might eat of all the trees except the one. We all know the fearful consequences. Death came and oh, the dreadful fall. Our beautiful earth, that was created for our home has since been marred with fearful convulsions, earthquakes and cyclones have left their marks on the face of the earth. Sin and death still stalks abroad, ever since the sin of our first parents, but God's plans will not be thwarted. His Son, Jesus next comes up before us, the new creation comes into view and we will yet see in the new heavens and the new earth which he will create, such grand sights that has never entered into the minds of those that love him; for he says, "Behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy, and the law of the Lord shall go forth from Jerusalem. And I, John, the messenger of God saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth was passed away and there was no more sea." So we see that it is yet in the future, for we see in this present earth that we have seas and fearful destruction of life is wrought upon the waters. In regard to the new creation are words like this, "He showed me a river of water, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and the Lamb." Yes; the Lamb of God is there, that was mentioned in the beginning and was made manifest for us after the sins of our first parents. Says he, "Behold, I make all things new." Then is the night of sorrow done away with, they need no "light of a candle, neither the light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever." These are some of the promises that were sent by holy prophets and by angels, after the fall of Adam, these are words that are left on record to cheer his followers on their lonely pilgrimage toward the heavenly land.

Dear ones, the night of sorrow has been long and dark on account of sin and death's doings; but the Lord's Word still beckons us on. A few more sorrows and a few more tears, and then if faithful we shall reach that happy home. "For I John saw these things and heard them and I fell down at the feet of the angel to worship him, and he said, See that thou do it not, for I am thy fellow servant and of thy brethren the prophets and of them that keep the sayings of this book, worship God." Does not the Word of God, when studied give us new strength to follow on, and how beautiful it is connected from Genesis to Revelation. "And he that testifieth of those things saith, Behold, I come quickly."

M. E. KNOWLES.

Have Patience.

"For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise." Heb. x. 36.

What is patience? The power or quality of suffering or enduring; calmness of temper under provocation or any calamity; long suffering; endurance; resignation.

Why should the Christian have patience? So he can run the race set before him.

What is the prize in the Christian race? Eternal life.

Who gives this eternal life? It is the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

This gift is what we all want to receive. Paul says "We have need of patience that after we have done the will of God we may receive the promise," and Peter said, "The promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Does God call other than those that obey him? No. "For as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise."

Suffering is an element of patience, and Paul says, "I suffer trouble as an evil doer. I endure all things for the elects sake. For if we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him." And again, "The Spirit beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God, and joint-heirs with Christ, and if so be that we suffer with him, we shall also be glorified with him. And if any man suffer as a Christian let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf. Be patient therefore unto the coming of the Lord. Be ye also patient, stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Behold we count them happy which endure." And Christ said, "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake (or in other words, for doing right) for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." And Christ also said that "Ye shall be hated for my name's sake; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved, and whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. Believe on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved." We have precious promises in the words of Christ, Peter and Paul, and they all promise us salvation when Jesus comes, if so be that we have obeyed the gospel plan of salvation.

We should have patience to endure, and suffer persecution, and wait God's own appointed time for the reward. But some are so impatient, they want the reward right now, and try to teach that they have the reward already, or will certainly have it at death, whereas, we only have the promise of the reward, and cannot get the reward until Christ comes to earth and raises those that are found worthy to obtain eternal life. Have patience.

Yours, trying to be patient.

"IF we can still love those who have made us suffer, we love them all the more. It is as if the principle, that conflict is a necessary law of progress, were applicable even to love. THE happy privilege of assisting Sister Alice Stafford in putting on the sin-covering name of Jesus, was ours on Sunday, Feb. 17. She has been very deliberately counting the cost of a complete surrender of all for God and Truth, and Christ,—and now rejoices in hope of the glory to be revealed in us, if faithful to the end of mortal pilgrimage. Again, on Sunday Feb. 24, we rejoiced at the evidence that the gospel is still powerful to save when from the heart believed. Sister Smith, of Stanwood, Ohio, having led her foster daughter, Miss Lizzie Shelton up to the point of obedience to the faith, brought her to Cleveland for that purpose,—having traveled on foot seven miles on Saturday, to take the train at Massillon. It was a day long to be remembered; and at its close we can say, as did Luke of the baptized Eunuch, they went on their way rejoicing. May the Lord bless them, and make them a blessing to others, we pray.

CHANNING has said of Milton:—"His whole soul revolted against the maxims of legitimacy, hereditary faith, and servile reverence of established power." And now we invite Milton to speak for himself:—"I earnestly beseech all lovers of truth, not to cry out that the church is thrown into confusion by that freedom of discussion and inquiry which is granted to the schools and ought certainly to be refused to no believer since we are ordered to prove all things, and since the daily progress and light of truth is productive of less disturbance to the church than of illumination and edification. Without this liberty there is neither religion nor gospel, force alone prevails, by which it is disgrace for religion to be supported."

DR. J. L. Jackson, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist Church, Chicago, had for the subject of a late discourse, "The Gradual Revelation of Religious Truth." He said: "Revelation of truth is gradual, because a certain preparation is necessary before truth can be apprehended. What we call the Bible is simply the record of these gradual disclosures of truth to men. The Scriptures were many hundred years in the making, and it is not difficult to see that there is a steady advance in moral perception and in spiritual life. We are not to suppose that these disclosures stopped with the closing of the canon of the Scriptures. Men understand the world and God and human destiny better today than they did in the second or third centuries. New light is flooding the world from many sources. Our true attitude is, keep heart and intellect open to all truth and to be learners to the last." Such sentiments as these sound very nice, but they cannot be depended on to inspire the hearers with a very deep reverence for the Word of God. The Bible is either the production of men inspired of God to write, or it is not. It is one or the other. The above language does not indicate that Mr. Jackson has much confidence in the Bible as a complete and full record of God's dealings with man, and he would have us understand that divine revelation is in progress all the time. This being the case no two persons are accountable alike, as each is only answerable for the revelation God has given to him. This may suit Mr. Jackson and the people to whom he ministers, but will hardly answer for any one who really believes in God, and the record given for our guidance, which gives man full and finished information as to what manner of being he is, his relation to the Creator, his fallen condition, and what is necessary for him to do to gain the life hereafter. This should be enough to satisfy any ordinary person, and all this is in "what we call the Bible," and we advise Mr. Jackson to go back to the first records and study again his early lessons, and assure him that with prejudice out of mind, he will be ready at the end of "Revelations" to stop looking for "new light," if he has fully grasped what was written by the Holy Men of Old.

Positivism.

Last Sunday Frederick Harrison of London, England, performed at Chicago, a ceremony called "Presenting to Humanity" of an infant. The child was 2 years old, and was taken by its parents to Mr. Harrison, he explaining that he was not a priest, but was only about to do what any "brother" would be equally qualified and willing to do for another. There was a service with hymns and responses similar to a "christening," after which he said among other things: "In our simple rite we have no symbol, for we symbolize nothing that we do not do. And what we do we say plainly and openly—we present the child to the community, and we accept it in the hope that it shall be trained to its duty in the world. We pretend not to wash the little angel of its sins, for we know of no sins of which its innocent spirit is capable.

We reject alike the fantastic hell from which the ceremony of christening is thought to rescue it and the fantastic paradise for which the water and the cross are held to make it fit. To the child we think no special grace is imparted, no particular gain is obtained. The presentation of the infant in our Positive faith is wholly an act which concerns the parents and the community. It concerns but indirectly the good of the child.

A wise training is the making of a sound mind. I can imagine no fabled hell hereafter to be so powerful in impressing the imagination as the actual and present remorse of the parent who sees his own vices reproduced in his offspring or tainting forever the promise of that young life. And so I can suppose no heaven more real in its intensity than the happiness of the parent who sees that he is shaping that wonderful creation of humanity—a loving, wise, and useful man or woman.

And let us remember that it is no petty communion or sect into which the new child is adopted and within which its life is to pass. It is no Positivist group, no little Newton Hall sect, which receives these children, which will watch over them, and which will summon them in time to duty. It is the great public, it is society, mankind, or, rather, in full, it is humanity itself."

Positivism is the religion of humanity. That is to say, since, according to the Positivists, nothing beyond this world is known, nothing transcendental can be worshiped. But the present generations owe all to the races and generations that have gone before them from earliest times. So it is their duty to live as perfect and useful a life as possible in order to leave behind a better world even than they found for the humanity that is to come after them.

Nature of Man.

At the very beginning of God's Book he gives us to know the origin, nature, destiny, as well as the capabilities of man. What a fitness of things worthy its divine Author we see in this arrangement! Man with this knowledge to start with can see how admirably the Great God has adapted his plan and purpose to suit the creature man; the marvelous stores laid up for him in the bowels of the earth many ages before he himself was formed; and his own introduction deferred till its surface was capable of furnishing him with food; and turning to the revelation of God's Purposes in creation everything goes to prove that man was created to be an inhabitant of earth and no other world. This may startle some, we are aware, but we sequerly and above-board hold that no one can honestly believe the gospel of the grace (or favor) of God who do not understand man's nature. The favor of God which towers above all others, is eternal life; it includes all other favors, no other favors could be received without this life, and hence the kingdom and all its glories are included in the CAPITAL GIFT, ETERNAL LIFE.

With the hope of inducing some one to secure that life, we propose to show from the Scriptures of Truth that this is not a part of his natural outfit; and that it must be obtained as a gift. This means that no man ever did, or ever could purchase it, earn it, or give any equivalent for it whatever! By grace, favor, are ye saved, through faith on man's part. To make sure that we and our readers understand ourselves at the beginning, we here state that man has no immortal soul; that he is in this life altogether wanting in that respect, and therefore, when a person has died he is not alive in any sense whatever. If this be proven to a person of an earnest and pious mind, it will reveal his WANT, his NEED, and dispose him to secure life at the hand of him who died that we might live. After this homely preface we invite our readers to glance over a few pages of God's grand old Book to see if it will not create an appetite for the bread that does not perish, and the water of life, the partaking of which will forever quench thirst.

On reading the New Testament, one must be struck with the numerous references to the return of the Lord Jesus, and the expectation of believers that that would be the time of their reward. For instance, Paul rejoices that the Thessalonians had turned from idols to serve and "wait for his Son from heaven." 1 Thess. i. 10: "From whence we look for our Savior, the Lord Jesus," Phil. iii. 20. Nor can there be any doubt that the time of our Lord's return was regarded as the time for rewarding the faithful ones, and the time for raising the dead and rewarding them according to their works. In 2 Cor. v. 10, the apostle writes, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ;" and in 2 Tim. iv. 1 he says that "The Lord Jesus will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom;" so that it may safely be concluded that rewards are not entered upon before the return of Christ; because judgment does not take place till then. This is confirmed in Col. iii. 4, "When Christ who is our life shall appear, THEN shall ye also appear with him in glory." In 2 Tim. iv. 8 Paul speaks of a crown of righteousness, "which the Lord, the righteous Judge will give him and Peter in his first epistle, chap. v. and v. 4 says, "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." Many of the warnings of Jesus were given that his disciples should be prepared for his coming. The evil servant is represented as saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," Matt. xxiv. 48; and the Lord himself says in Mark xiii. 35–37, "Watch, therefore, for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh. What I say unto you I say unto all. Watch."

THE LIVING AND TRUE GOD,

The apostle speaks of the judgment of quick and dead. What are we to understand by the death? or, what is it to be dead?" We read in Romans v. 12 "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin;" so that if we turn to that one man's offense; and read the sentence pronounced upon him we will know what "death" means. In Gen. iii. 19, we find the words addressed to Adam by God,—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread until thou for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Here the mystery ends; the man who had been formed of dust was to return to dust because of his sin; and in the ceaseless processions to the cemeteries we see the evidence that death has passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. Rom. v. 12. So that dead ones are those whose life is gone, and who are slowly mouldering into the dust out of which we were originally formed.

We are aware the word is occasionally used in a similar sense concerning those who have no spiritual life, that is "dead in trespasses and sins;" which implies that so far as their capacity for the higher life is concerned, they are lifeless, and unless they are quickened, or made alive by the operation of God through the Word, they will soon be both bodily and spiritually, for "the end of those things is death. Rom. vi. 21. Where the word death occurs without any such qualification in the context, as the above, the death we see daily occurring, by which our cemeteries are filled, is that referred to. If this view of death be clearly understood, we may notice how Scripture supplies its own confirmation, and is in complete harmony throughout. If death is a returning to dust, then the dead are perfectly unconscious. In Ecclesiastes ix. 5, the very words occur, "the dead know not anything," and in verse 10, "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." This makes it clear that the grave is man's resting place until the Lord Jesus comes again, and resurrection is seen to be an event of

DEAD OUTRIGHT,

UTMOST IMPORTANCE.

In fact if there be no resurrection, then those who are fallen ASLEEP IN CHRIST have perished." 1 Cor. xv. 18. Plainly, then, instead of the dead of past ages having been recompensed they still await in their sleep of death, the coming of the Son of Man. Even those who have obtained a good report through faith have not received the things promised them, because God has provided that they should not be made perfect without us. Heb. xi. 39, 40. So that death as a reality holds saints and sinners alike in its embrace; but we see also that "Since by man came death, by man has come also the resurrection of the dead." 1 Cor. xv. 21, and that when the time of the dead shall come that they be judged, rewards will be given by God to the prophets, saints, and those who fear his name small and great, Rev. xi. 18. Let us now see

WHAT THE REWARD WILL BE.

Jesus says, John x. 10, "I am come that they might have life," and in verse 28, "I give unto them (that is, my sheep) eternal life;" and Paul teaches the same in Romans vi. 22, "being made free from sin, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Some imagine from a careless reading of a few passages that eternal life is a present possession of believers, but the apostle here states that it is the reward that comes at the END of their course, and is thus in harmony with the Master himself, who promised "in the eternal life," Mark x. 30, R. V. Marg. The mistake arises from a too hasty consideration of John v. 12, where it says, "he that hath the Son of God hath life." But as this would bring us into conflict with the previous quotation it must be wrong; and hence it is our duty to enquire in what sense Christ is possessed in the present life? Is it not as stated by Paul Eph. iii. 17, "that Christ may dwell in your hearts—(affections) by faith?" And the 11th verse of the chapter should be consulted; it says "God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." It was, therefore, not in their possession, but LAID UP as a treasure in heaven, as Paul shows, Col. iii. 3, where he says, "Ye are dead, your life is HID with Christ in God; when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." There is, therefore, no confusion, no contradiction, the "life everlasting" is to be bestowed when Christ the Life and Life-Giver appears. It is also taught in several passages which speak of a bodily change taking place at that time. "We shall all be changed," says Paul, in 1 Cor. xv. 51. "This corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality." Here, then, we have the essence of Bible teaching concerning immortality—it is that deathless nature which God's loved ones will receive from the Lord "at that day," when he will change our vile bodies of humiliation that they may be fashioned like unto the body of his glory." Phil. iii. 21. R. V. And their condition is described by the Lord Jesus in Luke xx. 35, "They that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that age (R. V.) and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage, neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of the resurrection." These are also described by the apostle Peter as being "partakers of the divine nature having escaped the corruption that is in the world." The evidence shows that instead of man being or having an immortal soul, he is a "living soul," for a few short years, and then ends his frail existence in the grave. That to live in that age to come he must be raised from the dead, and receive the gift of eternal life at the hands of the Lord Jesus. But the question is also asked, where will the saints

AGES TO COME

SPEND THEIR ETERNAL LIFE?

Prov. xi. 31, says, "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth," and Psa. xxxvii. 29, says, "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever." And Jesus says, Matt. v. 5, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

News of the Week.

[The condition of affairs in and around Austria, and in connection with the Balkan States, is so critical that we venture to give our readers a reprint of what we find in the daily paper.—ED.]

The student of events in the old world cannot fail to be impressed with the gravity of the crisis now confronting the Austro-Hungarian empire. Probably no government in Europe has so precarious a footing. Certainly no government in Europe faces so many complications.

Parliamentary government has been suspended in Austria since Feb. 1, 1899. The government since that date has been carried on under the provision of article 14 of the constitution, an emergency clause giving the Emperor and his Cabinet advisers absolute control in default of legislative action.

The government has made persistent efforts for more than two years to return to parliamentary government, but without success. Radical and religious disputes have engrossed the attention of the population to the exclusion of all else. For weeks the Reichsrath has been the scene of disgraceful personal encounters between the members. Treason is openly avowed and the man who claims to be loyal to the dual empire is denounced in so many words as a fool.

The trend of political sentiment developed by the long continued quarrel is illustrated in the proceedings of the lower house of the Reichsrath on Thursday afternoon:

The dialogue bandied between two of its members—Herr Silenz, Czech, and Herr Stein, Pan-German—was significant of the existing political and parliamentary condition. Herr Silenz taunted the Germans with squinting toward Germany, whereupon Herr Stein shouted:

"We do not squint; we look. We look. We wish to go over to Germany, as you do to Russia."

To this Herr Silenz replied: "That is why the German Emperor recently said he hoped to establish a great northern kingdom on the Elba."

Herr Stein retorted: "The German Emperor is right. I declare openly we wish to join the German empire."

The Ministers listened silently, and the President did not check the speakers. Meanwhile 2,000 unemployed men made a demonstration outside the building, shouting: "Down with Parliament!" "Down with the Czechs!" "Down with the Pan Germans!" "The men inside are paid and do nothing; we are starving and want work."

The difficulty of maintaining a stable government when members of Parliament openly demand disintegration of the empire may be better understood when it is stated that the population of Austria is made up of 8,500,000 Germans, 5,400,000 Bohemians, Moravians, and Slovaks; 3,750,000 Poles; 3,000,000 Ruthenians, and 1,000,000 Slovenes.

Here are nearly 22,000,000 persons—8,500,000 Germans, against 13,500,000 Slavs. The Slavonian nationalities, it will be seen, are divided into six branches, each of which at one time in its history enjoyed independent government.

These discordant elements have been bound into an empire by political expediency, military force, and mutual agreement—not, however, welded together by assimilation.

What holds them together? It cannot be patriotism, for there is no national spirit. The German hopes for union with Germany—the Slav with Russia.

At the present time nothing but the strong personality of Emperor Franz-Josef stands between the Austro-Hungarian empire and disintegration. After the Emperor—chaos.

It will be idle to speculate upon the future of the Austro-Hungarian empire. The subject is too complex to be solved without the aid of the ablest statesmanship of Europe, and the old world will be fortunate if it is solved without a recourse to war.

The situation in the Balkans has become so threatening that on Thursday 50,000 Turkish troops were concentrated on the Bulgarian frontier. This movement does not necessarily mean an invasion of Bulgaria, although events are rapidly drifting toward Turkish occupation of that principality, but when that point is reached the rest of Europe will have something to say.

The present trouble is caused by the revolutionary Bulgarian committee in Macedonia. The Bulgarian people, actuated by hatred of the Sultan, as by religious impulse, and unquestionably determined that Macedonia shall be freed from Turkish rule.

The Macedonian revolutionary committee dominates the population of Bulgaria. Large parties of Bulgarians are constantly crossing the frontier into Macedonia to assist in the revolt. The funds which enable the revolutionary committee to carry on its active propaganda are largely supplied by Bulgarian contributions.

Prince Ferdinand, who, by the terms of the treaty of Berlin, owes a certain amount of allegiance to the Sultan, is powerless to check the active interference of his own subjects with the internal affairs of Macedonia, and the situation is rapidly getting beyond his control.

The time is apparently coming when Turkey must interfere in Bulgaria or else lose Macedonia. Already the Bulgarian revolutionary party has been in conflict with Turkish troops, a skirmish last Wednesday at Bogdanitza, Salonica Province, resulting in the killing of ten Bulgarians and the wounding of many more, the Turks having five of their own soldiers killed.

Turkey can cope with the situation easily enough if left to herself. Fifty thousand troops thrown into Bulgaria would put down all Bulgarian opposition to the Sultan's rule in Macedonia.

But Germany, Austria, Russia, nor, for that matter, Great Britain, will hardly consent to Turkish occupation of Bulgaria.

The Sultan is thus confronted with a serious dilemma. He cannot apparently save Macedonia without making virtual war on Bulgaria, and this the powers will not permit.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Poetry.

Books of the Bible.

In Genesis the world was made by God's creative hand.
In Exodus the Hebrews marched to gain the Promised Land.
Leviticus contains the Law, holy, and just, and good.
Numbers records the tribes enrolled, all sons of Abraham's blood.
Moses in Deuteronomy recounts God's mighty deeds,
Brave Joshua into Canaan's land the host of Israel leads.
In Judges their rebellion oft provokes the Lord to smite,
But Ruth records the faith of one well pleasing in his sight.
In First and Second Samuel, of Jesse's Son we read.
Ten tribes in First and Second Kings revolted from his seed.
In First and Second Chronicles see Judah, captive made:
But Ezra leads a remnant back by Princely Cyrus' aid.
The city wall of Zion, Nehemiah builds again;
While Esther saves her people from plots of wicked men.
In Job we read how faith will live beneath affliction's rod,
And David's Psalms are precious songs to every child of God.
The Proverbs like a goodly string of choicest pearls appear.
Ecclesiastes teaches man how vain are all things here.
The mystic Song of Solomon exalts sweet Sharon's Rose;
Whilst Christ, the Savior and the King the prophet Isaiah shows.
The warning Jeremiah sportsto Israel scorns;
His plaintive Lamentations their awful downfall mourned.
Ezekiel tells in wondrous words of dazzling mysteries,
Whilst kings and empires yet to come, Daniel in vision sees,
Of judgment and of mercy Hosea loves to tell.
Joel describes the blessed days when God with men shall dwell.
Among Tekoa's herdsmen Amos received his call;
While Obadiah prophesies of Edom's final fall.
Jonah enshrines a wondrous type of Christ our risen Lord.
Micah pronounces Judah's fall, but but again restored.
Nahum declares on Nineveh just judgment shall be poured.
A view of Chaldea's coming doom Habakkuk's visions give.
Next Zephaniah warns the Jews to turn, repent and live.
Haggai wrote to those who saw the temple built again.
And Zechariah prophesied of Christ's triumphant reign.
Malachi was the last who touched the high prophetic cord;
Its final notes sublimely show the coming of the Lord.
Matthew and Mark, and Luke and John, the holy gospels wrote,
Describing how the Savior died, his life and all he taught.
Acts proves how God the apostles owned with signs in every place.
St. Paul in Romans teaches us how man is saved by grace.
The apostle in Corinthians instructs, exhorts, reproves.
Galatians shows that faith in Christ alone the Father loves.
Ephesians and Philippians tell what Christians ought to be.
Colossians bids us live to God and for eternity.
In Thessalonians we are taught the Lord will come from heaven.
In Timothy and Titus a bishop's rule is given.
Philemon marks a Christian's love, which only Christians know.
Hebrews reveals the gospel prefigured by the law.
James teaches without holiness faith is but vain and dead.
St. Peter points the narrow way in which the saints are led.
John in his three Epistles on love delights to dwell.
St. Jude gives awful warnings of judgment, wrath to tell,
The Revelations prophesy of that tremendous day,
When Christ, and Christ alone shall be his people's stay.

Education. No. 1.

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gellatly, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—Ed.]

True education is the training of the mind so as to render it capable of action—individual action, just as the training of the body gives power and dexterity in motion for progress for self support for self defence,—for into this strange world we come lone individuals—"surrounded by a host of foes" measles, yellow jackets, small boys, etc., and our hand, so to speak, is against every one and every one against ours. At any rate, even if this is a little over statement of the case we must all be prepared to go alone through the dark sometimes, both physically and otherwise, and we ought to rehearse to be prepared for such an occasion; such rehearsal is education. But the man of strength and health is joyous in his self-reliance. There is nothing sad to the athlete to run a race against a crowd or facing anything his size "on a fair field and no favors" and so also the mind that is properly trained is self-reliant and joyous in the exercise of its power.

Are there not some misconceptions as to what education is—or rather ought to be? It looks sometimes as though the "outward and visible sign" is by some worshipped as a sort of fetish and the professor or professioness with a suffix of disjointed cabalistic letters behind his name has the right of way on all occasions, while every day common sense gets the cold shoulder.

Nevertheless there is a great deal in common sense apart from education. It ought to be borne in mind that, common sense is not so called because it is cheap and ordinary, in truth it is rather the reverse, and in its fuller manifestations it is rather uncommon. It is only common in the sense of being the sympathetic chord of intelligence that connects all nations, people and tongues. It is the broad basis of human and we might say of divine conception of universal truth. True education like true science will always strive to build on this firm basis, but the quack, and the theorist with a string, soar beyond and above into the realm of circumlocution and mystery, where the plodder who reckons that two and two make only four can never hope to follow, but the plodder spreads his eyes and opens his mouth and says, "ain't he fine."

The greatest evils that have afflicted humanity have been the results of education—false education—miseducation—education that the student thereof labored hard and patiently to attain proficiency in, and that amounted to nothing or less than nothing after all. The Chinese are a prominent case in point, their education consists in memorizing their endless word signs and the moral or immoral precepts of their so called classics. The Mohammedans labor the same way with the koran. The monks had their paternosters and intricate ceremonials and liturgies to employ their minds, and in our day and country there is a good deal, at least in the higher and professional educators that could be safely dispensed, with, "traditions of the fathers", held as household gods that it will be considered sacrilige to touch. The most important thing in education is the development of mental and moral correctness, —correctness of observation,—correctness of deduction. It is in view of this that Horace Mann says, "Of all the studies in the world on which to form early and sound habits of investigation and reasoning, natural philosophy holds pre-eminence. It gives us the happiest proofs and the most deep rooted convictions of truth, it furnishes the quickest admonitions when we deviate toward error." With the faculties trained along this line we gain self-reliance to venture out into the vast world of letters, for the day of the index expurgatorious is gone forever and we live in the "open door" era.

To be truly educated is to be well read, one of the greatest advantages is to have some idea of the limitations as well as the extent of human knowledge and this can only be attained by reading, and, as none can ever hope to cover the whole vast field of human investigation, the object of the true teacher ought to be the directing of the attention of the students into the main lines of knowledge and thought, arousing and keeping up interest therein.

But reading alone is not sufficient, true education has also the faculty of discriminating among what is read. It possesses a wholesome critical acumen that examines as it goes, sees the fly in the butter, picks it out, and lays it one side. "The dogs that eat the crumbs" and the swine that swallow the awill take in flies and all.

With a fund of information and the faculty of self-reliant discrimination, one is tolerably well fixed for the battle of life, add thereto self-restraint on the one hand and self-respect on the other. One great evil among the working class of people is that they consider themselves "common people." This remark applies of course more to the other side of the Atlantic than to this. Still we have some here. Humility is a good thing to have in its way but abject submissiveness to the opinion or dictates of self-appointed or mutually appointed cliques of teachers or leaders is not for grown men or women.

One of the most stupendous humbugs on earth is that remnant of the feudal system in Europe known as Royalty, Nobility, Gentry, and so forth, and apart from their possessions (which they do not all have,) their main bluff is the careful way that they mutually hold each other up to public admiration—the grandiloquent courtesy with which they address each other as "His Lordship," "His Grace" or "His Imperial Majesty." They are only ordinary human beings, some of them very ordinary indeed, and yet by this sole means they awe the "underlings" and come at last to believe themselves the "superiors" of the community, and the converse is likewise true, ordinary people are apt to degrade themselves by grovelling to the assuming persons of so called rank and education. There is one cure for it all, that is the true education, the clear perception which inculcates that modest self-respect, that calls no man master, no man father, for we all are brethren.

"Are You Happy Now, Lying There?"

"If my glad heart gilds creation,
Well it may, for it is glad,
Past the power of doubt and sinning
Any more to make it sad."

"Are you happy now, lying there?" were the words with which an old friend interrogated me the other day.

"Yes one can suffer and be happy too," was my reply.

"Well, I can't, I am miserable when I am sick," was his rejoinder.

It has been an anomaly even to my own heart, how it could be, that "a glory and a gladness, passing words of mine to show," could fill all my being, and I—used to joyous, bustling activity, forced to give up my place to others, and lie imprisoned for weary months on a couch, with the almost certain prospect of lying many months more.

Dear ones have been ill, and I have been powerless to go to their aid; others have sunk away into death, and I could not be there to smooth the poor, tired brow, or to press for the last time the aged hand; could not give the last, lingering look at the face, dear to me from childhood. And yet, though I have grieved over the sufferings of the one, and the death of the other, there has been something that has helped me to bear, and to rise above it all. Strange contradiction it seems, to be sad and glad at the same time; to suffer and yet not suffer, to have all things look sombre and yet be flashing with glory.

It is not quite a new experience, but it is a more real and vivid one than has ever been mine before. No one but the dear J. L. W. to minister to the poor, injured foot; shut away from the busy world, and yet, O that ever abiding conscious trust in God!

"No hand but thine own, blessed Master,
Could comfort and cheer in the day,
When the touch of a sudden disaster,
Has cumbered and tangled the way."

"He restoreth my soul, he leadeth me in paths of righteousness for his name's sake: my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Romans vi.

As I am in the faith and am alone from any of the churches, I feel that I must say a little. I get The Restitution regular and enjoy reading it. I only wish I could meet some of our dear brothers and sister. I am with the Christian Church people and they are very good. They talk with me and think we in our faith are farther advanced in the Bible than they are, but I think people are becoming more in earnest with the truth. I think we must be in harmony to win people to the truth.

"What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin. Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him. Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him. For in that he died, he died unto sin once; but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have dominion over you; for ye are not under the law, but under grace. What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid. Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness? But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness. I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness. For when ye were servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness. What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

I ask an interest in all your prayers.

Yours in the faith,

Mrs. Henry Wexter.

A New Translation.

A New Testament in modern English has been issued by the Our Race Publishing Co., of New Haven, Conn. The author is Ferrar Fenton. The object of the work seems to be to give in modern English the ideas of the sacred authors.

The translator has attained this end to a wonderful and pleasing degree of perfection. To attain this the author says in the preface that for nearly forty years he has studiously avoided reading any English version or commentary and has read directly from the original languages of the writers themselves. But with all this precaution to obtain the ideas of the Spirit at first hand, there is nevertheless the bias of early training and the bent of theological teaching clearly apparent in the work. All translations which are fluent in expression are necessarily influenced by our ideas. The best translators, those which adhere strictly to the letter of the original word, are necessarily stiff in their wordings. A commentary is not a translation always.

A few examples may serve to show how a translator may vary and unconsciously insert his theological views. The following examples are selected from the translation above referred to:

On baptism: Matt. iii. 11, "I indeed baptize you in water." Mark i. 8, "I certainly baptize you in water." Lu. iii. 16, "I certainly baptize you with water." John i. 26, "I baptize in water." While Acts i. 5, "with water."

The word bapto is translated by the words "dip," "dipped" and "sprinkled." There is no similarity between dipping a thing in water or blood, and sprinkling the water or blood upon that thing. In baptism the person is baptized but water cannot be baptized. The person can be baptized in water but not with water. Jesus was baptized in Jordan but not with Jordan.

On hell: from hades, seven occurrences of the word hades are translated "grave," and the other four occurrences are translated the "land of spirits" or "spirit land."

Gehenna is three times translated "pit," three times "hell," once "braudling" by fire and four times untranslated.

Thus we see the uncertainty that attaches to these words which the common reader never for a moment conceives as being the twistings of theology. If hades seven times means the grave and four times the "land of spirits," then the spirits must go to the grave. But the common reader does not suspect that these expressions have been translated from the same word. If gehenna means a "pit" three times out of twelve occurrences, may not the four untranslated occurrences mean a pit also? If the three occurrences of the word translated hell are proper to thus render them, why not render every occurrence of the word "hell?" Why this dodging?

The same criticism might be offered on aionios, pneuma, psuchee, ekpneo, ekpsucho, etc. In Mark xv. 37, ekpneo is translated "Yielded up his spirit" while in verse 39 it is translated by the single word "expire." So also in Lu. xxiii. 46, "expired." Ekpsucho is translated "expired," in Acts v. 5 and 10, but in Acts xii. 23, it is "died." The breath passed out and of course the man died.

These are a few inaccuracies noticed, yet the work is full of excellencies which can only be appreciated after reading. Yours for truth,

A. J. Eychaner.

Questions.

The following questions came to hand more than a year ago, and although the answers have long been delayed, on account of time and strength being otherwise employed, yet not purposely neglected.

Question 1. Is there any prophecy pointing to a miraculous conception of the Messiah? Yes, every prophecy foretelling the birth of Jesus points to that fact. God always interposes to fulfill his word and promise, and such interposition is supernatural because it is exceptional to the natural or ordinary course of things. See Isaiah vii. 14; also ix. 6-7. "Unto us a child is born, a Son is given." Whose Son was he that was given? And who was the giver of said Son? This gift of God was not a natural sequence of natural causes. Was there any thing supernatural in the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt? Anything miraculous in the call of Abraham? Was the birth of Isaac, the son of promise, the result of natural causes? Indeed, almost everything pointing to the Messiah indicates the presence of the supernatural. The birth of John the Baptist only in a less degree, than in the case of Jesus, reveals the hand and power of God. The birth of Isaac in a sense was a prophecy of Mary's son. Had not God interposed to give strength the son of Sarah had never been born.

Moses declared "the Lord your God shall raise up from among your brethren a prophet like unto me." Notice, it is the Deity that raises him up. This statement plainly indicates the interposing of divine power, and therefore not a natural sequence, as our speculators try to make out. It has come to this that miracle is a myth, a legendary tale of paganism with all those who have become skeptical, boasting of their superior learning and profound criticism. Gabriel's words to Mary they say are spurious, an interpolation unworthy of confidence, but so far as anything I have seen there is not a particle of evidence to support the statement. It is all guess work, an assumption pure and simple, satisfactory no doubt to those whose wish is the parent of the thought. The angel's words, remarkable though they be, bear the impress of genuineness. The statement "the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever," gives to the narrative the impress of genuineness. No recluse of a monk or papal priest ever gave utterance to the foregoing language. Pagan and papal power have done their utmost to destroy the house of Jacob, and desolate the throne and kingdom of David. The angel said too much for the convenience of those who contend that his words are the work of an interpolator. All the prophecies of the old Scriptures pointing to the Christ reveal the interposing hand of God in a manner exceptional because miraculous, while the history of their partial fulfilment is given by the four Evangelists. Neither Matthew or Luke have written anything out of line with the work and purposes of Jehovah as revealed through Moses and the prophets. Moreover there's not a word in the epistles of Paul, Peter and James, contradictory of the prophets of old, or the four Evangelists. The zeal that some manifest in contending that Jesus was the son of Joseph is all in vain—a straining to reach after something that is not there. The more they reason, the more they speculate and mystify things. Joseph had sons but they were not like Jesus, "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." Indeed one of the first things recorded of them was how they reviled their mother's first born, who in return did not revile again, but simply said "the world cannot hate you, but me it hateth." This is equivalent to saying that at that time they were of the world. This we all by nature, begotten as they were of the will of the flesh. "The wicked, saith the prophet are estranged from the womb, and go astray as soon as they be born." This however was not the case with Jesus, the Son of God, who was holy from his birth, and who went not astray, and who was never estranged from the love and favor of him who laid the foundation of his existence, and made him the light-bearer of moral perfection, and a Lamb without spot or blemish, to bear away the sins of the world. Though flesh and blood like his brethren, yet the polished shaft of Jehovah.

Question No. 2 in my next.

Geo. Moyer.

Hope.

"And we desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end, that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us. Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul both sure and stedfast, and entereth into that within the vail. Whither the forerunner is for us entered even Jesus made a high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. vi. 11, 19, 20.

It was the desire of the Apostle that all the disciples should be fully enlightened and that they should have a lively hope, a hope based on knowledge, knowledge of the Scriptures and faith in the promises. If we do not understand the promises and believe that God will fulfill them, we cannot have hope. Hope is made up of desire and expectation. If we do not know what the promises are we cannot have an intelligent hope or a correct one, and if God has not promised to do a certain thing we have no right to hope for it, but must search the Scriptures, prove all things and hold fast that which is good. 17th verse, "Wherefore God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel confirmed it by an oath. God's Word is good without an oath, but to conform to man's ideas he confirmed it with an oath. In the 19th verse, which hope we have as an anchor both sure and steadfast and reaches into the holiest of holy where Christ has gone into heaven, there to intercede for us, the antetype of the Jewish high priest. Now we have hope that he will come out to bless us as he has promised to. The people waited without while the High Priest was in the holiest of holy till he came out to bless them. So we are waiting for Christ's return for our blessing, which will be eternal life at his appearing and kingdom. Now every man that hath this hope purifieth himself that he may be found without spot and blameless through Jesus Christ our Lord. May we have a hope according to knowledge and faith; and may that hope and faith make us wise unto salvation.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Our Begettal.

Editor Restitution:

There seems to be some difference of thought as regards the time of begettal among the readers of THE RESTITUTION. Surely this ought not to be among those who have put on Christ. Hear how earnestly Paul speaks to the church at Corinth: "Now I beseech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Paul would not beseech them to be that which it was impossible for them to be; and so today by the one spirit we can be of the same mind and speak the same things. How earnestly and prayerfully we should all strive for this unity of the spirit of truth. Let there be an awakening in this regard. Those who have the mind of Christ cannot have such differences, for Christ is not divided against himself. And we having the same spirit ought to be like-minded, as we press on toward the fulness of the stature of him who hath called us from darkness into light.

And now as to our begettal: We are begotten by the Word of truth. Jas. 1. 18. A sower goes forth to sow his seed. The seed is the Word of God. Those by the wayside hear, but the evil one taketh away the Word from their hearts and there is no desire in them to heed. There has been no generation, no life produced. Some seed falls in stony places, some among thorns, and some on good ground. In each of these last instances life has been generated; a begettal has taken place. That which fell in stony places brought forth only the blade, which soon withered; that sown among thorns brought forth the blade, then the ear, but because of the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches it was unfruitful; but that which was sown on good ground brought forth first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear—a complete fruition. The begettal takes place upon the entrance of the Word of truth. "The entrance of thy Word giveth light"—(the light is the life). Then, because there has been begotten in us this spark of new life, there is an earnest desire to press on, and we "obey from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered." Thus from the begettal we go forward to the time when we are born of water, to walk in newness of life. A notable instance of this is given in the Acts of the Apostles where the Holy Spirit was poured out on those who were gathered at the house of Cornelius to hear Peter speak the words of truth. They spake with tongues and magnified God before they were baptized.

The invisible things of God are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made; so that we are without excuse. In hope,

B. W. WAGGONER.

Report.

Editor Restitution:

It is my pleasant duty to announce the organization of the Church of God, at Tacoma, Wash. Elder W. L. Skeels, of Scholl's Ferry, Oregon, visited us a few days ago, and at his invitation the scattered believers in Tacoma, to the number of thirteen, met at the house of Brother L. Jaeger, on Feb. 10th, and organized as a church. Brother Sylvester Wilkins, from Kansas, (he was identified with the truth at Indian Hill, and Winfield, some years ago) was chosen elder for the coming year. C. W. Cropp, lately of West Seattle, Secretary, and L. Jaeger, Treasurer.

In view of the fact that the members are widely scattered around Tacoma, it was decided to meet every second Sunday afternoon.

During the past week Elder Skeels has held six services in one of the suburbs. The brethren rallied in full force, and were instructed and edified by his setting forth of Bible doctrine concerning the ages past and to come, but the general public did not come in such numbers as we hoped. We purpose holding another series of meetings later on, when we hope to have a larger audience.

C. W. CROPP, Sec'y.

Dear Restitution:

I write to tell you that we isolated ones of Guemes, Wash., have had the great pleasure again this winter of listening to a series of pure gospel sermons by Brother W. L. Skeels of Scholls, Oregon. He arrived here Jan. 22, and began the night of the 28rd, remaining till Feb. 5th, preaching in all 15 discourses. We had the best of attention, but the attendance was not as good as a year ago on account of several cases of Lagrippe in the neighborhood. Some were "almost persuaded" and we have great hopes of some being fully persuaded and becoming obedient in the near future. How I wish we had more preachers in the household of faith. It seems strange that any one who is able to teach the gospel as some are could keep out of the field, when there is such great need of laborers, or that some could quit the field for any other calling. We need to pray the Lord of the harvest that he send more laborers.

Hoping to meet you all in the kingdom of God.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Poetry.

Home.

There is a home prepared for me,
It's pearly gates by faith I see
It's jasper walls, it's streets of gold
Thus by the prophets are foretold.
The crystal streams that from it flow
The tree of life beside them grow,
King Jesus there is ever shall reign,
And banish sickness, death and pain.
The saints and patriarchs of yore
Shall then be raised to die no more.
Priests and prophets, meet and true,
There's room for all, for me and you.
God's will on earth shall then be done
By every one beneath the sun.
The lion with the lamb shall play.
And none shall drive the bear away,
For harmony and peace shall reign
O'er all this vast extended plain.
The rose in desert wild shall bloom,
The fig and vine shall then have room.
The peasant will raise them by his cot
And none shall rob the sacred spot.
To plowshares men shall beat their swords
For Christ shall rule the barbarous hordes
His scepter sway from shore to shore
And sin and death afflict no more.
Then come, dear Jesus we humbly pray
And usher in that blessed day.
All kings shall come with presents meet
And place their offerings at his feet
And he shall rule in equity,
This earth through all eternity.

Israel as a Nation. No. 6.

All objections to Israel's restoration as a nation are regarded by us as so many objections to Jehovah's plainly revealed plan; and must fall powerless as directed against this citadel of truth. As well might a regiment of school boys, armed with popguns, expect to batter down Gibraltar, as for these objectors to think they can demolish the theory of Israel's national restoration. What [illegible] fired against it [illegible] rebound with deadly force. My objector, Elder S. indulges in some assertions about the ten tribes, which betray his ignorance of the whole subject and show that he is so intensely prejudiced as to think the question needs no careful investigation at his hands.

To show the fallacy of a statement or two of his will be sufficient to expose his ignorance touching the main question in dispute. He admits that the bulk of the Ten Tribes, at the time Judah returned from Babylon, rejected the offer of Cyrus and remained in the land of their captivity. He asserts this of these tribes, "That their posterity were in time amalgamated with Gentile nations, and their tribeship was thus obliterated; so as distinct tribes they can never return  Their age furthermore ended long ago, and they have no further claim on their original land as a distinct people." This is affirmed without any attempt to support it with proof, as if his bare assertion was sufficient to carry conviction to the minds of his readers. Yes, yes, it is settled that God is done with them! Elder S. says so! But he says so in contradiction to the prophets. If they have been amalgamated with the Gentiles, and thus obliterated, how is it that Ezekiel (37 chapter) speaks of their restoration to the land, and their union with Judah upon the mountains of Israel—the two houses again, as anciently forming one nation, one kingdom, with one king ruling them. Amalgamated and obliterated! Are they? God says, "he will take them from among the heathen (nations) whither they be gone, and will gather them into their own land."

How is it, if you are right, that Hosea speaks of the Ten Tribes as not God's people for a time; then of them as sons of the living God, numerous as the sands of the sea; and this separate from Judah and outside of Palestine—if they were amalgamated and obliterated? This is proof that in this dispensation they are distinct from both Judah and the nations. When they have thus come to be numerous and are denominated sons of the living God their union with Judah is then in order, for the prophet says: "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head; and they shall come up out of the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel—Israel. There is no place for this in your theory, which asserts that "their age ended long ago." This was not brought about at the return from Babylon. Neither is this union that of two sections of the church respectively denominated Judah and Israel. Nor can you set this prophecy aside by saying "it is conditional." There are some things Eld. S., on the pages of the prophets not dreamed of in your theology. Here is another problem that is out of harmony with your theory: "Lo, I will command and I will sift (margin, cause to move) the house of Israel among all nations like as corn is sifted in a sieve), yet shall not the least grain (stone) fall upon the earth." You view these tribes as amalgamated with the nations and obliterated, instead of being preserved intact, and separate from the nations among which they are sifted. God intended that this captivity should not be final. Hear what v. 14 of this 9 chapter of Amos has to say, "I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I given them, saith the Lord." Here is a prophecy, the fulfillment of which must take place not earlier than the first advent: nor can it be shown that it has been accomplished yet, as no such restoration of captive Israel has been brought about; else they would be there now planting and building and enjoying the fruits of their labors. Now, do not say this Israel whose captivity is brought back is the church. This will not work for you can find no proof of this. You say that Israel has no more claim on their original land as a distinct people." Where did you learn this? Surely not from the prophets. You have been repeating this so long that you really believe it. I have already in these papers cited passages from the prophets, which both predict and promise a restoration of God's ancient covenant people. I could quote much more; I will here say that throughout the prophets wherever Israel's national gloom is portrayed there is in prospective the silver lining of national restoration.

You are determined to saddle our theory with absurdities. You try to make it appear that according to our view little Palestine will be overburdened with population, that all Anglo Saxons must go if it packs that little country "ten deep." While I believe that near the close of the present dispensation, and before the union of the two houses, Israel of the ten tribes is to be as numerous as the sands of the sea, as declared by Hosea, as already quoted, and vastly more numerous than Judah—with her eight or twelve millions in all the world, as shown in Isaiah liv. Yet I do not believe that the statements of the prophets require me to accept as a fact that Jacob's numerous posterity to a man must be restored to Palestine, a country of 11,000 square miles; nor to the promised land of 300,000 square miles. Jeremiah writing in reference to the future of the Ten Tribes says: "Turn, O backsliding children, saith the Lord; for I am married unto you; and I will take you one of a city and two of a family and I will bring you to Zion." Jer. iii. 14. Speaking of the same time the prophet says, "In those days the house of Judah with (to, margin) the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers." ver. 18. The house of Israel at the time to which the prophet refers being more numerous than Judah, and in a position and condition both of power and wealth to afford protection and extend aid, the latter finds with the former house what had been denied her by the Jew-hating nations of Europe. According to the objector's theory none of the things brought to view in this 3rd chapter, touching God's favor toward the two houses can be true. The past did not witness the fulfillment. The future, in his view, has nothing for Israel after the flesh. How can he save the veracity of the prophet?

Now let us see what is here on the very surface of the prophecy. 1st. Judah and Israel clearly distinguished. 2nd, The latter had justified herself more than the former. 3rd. God's gracious invitation to the house of Israel in her captivity, this invitation to be pending indefinitely and backed by the pledge of his mercy. 4th, The avowal of the fact that God is married to this same ten tribed house—and this prior to her return to Zion. She had been divorced. ver. 8. 5th, Touching the fact of her restoration, the proportion stated. 14 ver. 6th, Faithful pastors given who will feed them with knowledge and understanding. 15 ver. 7th, Israel not subject to the law as they were before their captivity. 8th, Jerusalem will be called the throne of the Lord when the restoration is accomplished; and other nations than Judah and Israel shall be gathered unto it to the name of the Lord. 17 ver. 9th, The envy and hatred of the two houses are gone, and the weaker in blessed assurance of finding help walks to the stronger and they come together to the land which was given for an inheritance unto the fathers. 10th, Reverting again to Israel's sinfulness and treachery, the Lord repeats his gracious and merciful invitation. "Return ye, backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings." In response to this they say, "Behold we come unto thee for thou art the Lord our God. Truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills (places of their idolatrous worship) and from the multitude of mountains; truly in the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel." ver. 21, 22. In a similar strain of contrition and confession the language continues to the close of the chapter. Now Elder S., will you assay to set all this aside by that short cut of yours, "It is conditional." Had you lived in the days of the prophets by the application of this convenient rule you could have destroyed the prophetic quality of the major part of their predictions, and no one could be certain that the predictions would come to pass; and any one claiming a fulfillment according to what the prophets had written would have been told by you that such fulfillment involves absurdities, and that such a theory is "self-explosive." Looking at the matter from your standpoint the Lord had one chance of getting into trouble to one of keeping out. If the predictions should be fulfilled over-population or something else equally perplexing would be on hand.

JOHN L. WISER.

A Controversy.

Uncle. Well, Joseph, I am glad to meet you and your young friends this evening. Since you are fresh from the college your mind will naturally relish some departure from the daily routine of studies pursued there. I suppose you have not thought of such prosy things as are taught in the Scriptures.

Joseph. Yes, we have, uncle. We have had no little diversion in discussing some of the leading features. One of our boys has Ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses," and has posted himself thoroughly. He says the Mosaic record of the creation is simply absurd. Take for instance the statements of the earth being formed and fitted up, and man created and placed upon it in six days, or one hundred and forty-four hours. Science shows that ages were consumed in its preparation, before even the lowest forms of organic life could subsist.

Uncle. Moses says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." This statement is reasonable as to time, unless he made it after the beginning. Ingersoll says, "He does not know when he made it." He says, "He does not know whether he made it, or it evolved itself." "He does not know if there be a God." The chance to post one's self on the "Mistakes of Moses" is very meager from reading that document. The earth was made by some one in the beginning, and shows evidence of wisdom and power in its formation, that indicates to the mind of most men that its Architect was God as Moses said. These days of creation may represent long periods of time. The sun is not placed in the heavens to divide the day from the night, until the fourth day. The days prior to this may have been as long as science demands, and it would not invalidate the record. Other than twenty four hour days may be said to have a morning and an evening, which would be true in fact, as well as in figure. Science no more conflicts with Moses than with Ingersoll. And men of acknowledged authority in scientific research confirm Moses' statements, rather than Ingersoll's "Don't know." There are many blunderers in the school of science. Their mistakes should make us go slow when accepting all their conclusions. Since they differ among themselves, somebody's conclusion must be absurd. The Bible was not given to teach geology alone, or it doubtless would have been more explicit in details upon that subject. Its statements in reference to the earth have not been weakened by comparison with Ingersoll.

Joseph. You are better informed on this subject than I am. Suppose we vary the subject a little, and take up man. Moses says, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." This language seems to me to be inadequate to express all of the man's make up. It embraces in his creation only the material elements, (viz.) earth and air. Now philosophy teaches us that matter is an inert substance incapable of thought or volition. How is it then that man can move and reason? Are not these attributes of spirit? and therefore independent of matter?

Uncle. I must say you have given the language a fairer interpretation than is common for those who maintain that man is a dual being. We however apprehend no difficulty in being able to answer your question in harmony with the record and the facts, as manifested in man's power to move and to think.

This phenomena of motion, and thought are the direct effect of life. Man became a living (soul) creature, endowed with power of thought, and motion by his creator. God taketh away his life, and he ceases to think and move.

Joseph. I can have no conception of matter being able to evolve thought. Only Spirit can think. Spirit must be distinct from matter, and immaterial in its nature.

Uncle. Your conception of one, and not of the other, seems to bother you. My conception of God being able to create man from the aforesaid elements, and cause the man to think with no other endowment save the breath of life, is just as easy as that he should have put an immaterial entity into man to think and move for him. How can we possibly know that immaterial spirits are capable of thought? And if they are, we are as ignorant of their elements as we are of their ability to think. Animal life even in very low forms manifests more or less intelligence; yet no one supposes that an immaterial entity is the real creature, and survives the death of the organization. Man alone is regarded as a compound being during this life, and emanates into pure spirit at death; no more to be encumbered by materiality. These views are simply absurd, and cannot be reconciled with the many repeated statements of Scriptures concerning his future environment and work. Hence our conceptions may grasp the thought that divine power could endow materiality with reason just as easy, as it could immateriality.

Joseph. I see, uncle. It all depends upon God's power. After all our existence does not depend upon the kind of material used in our creation, nor in our intellectual endowment, but in the good pleasure and sustaining power of our Creator. He could have made us otherwise as well, and we would have manifested the character of men.

Uncle. Since we have failed to discover man's immateriality, let us see whether his natural immortality is an assured fact. Nowhere is it asserted of him in the Divine Record. None dare assert that God cannot destroy whatever he has created. It is affirmed in his Word, "All the wicked will God destroy." We are admonished to fear him that is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. From such Scriptures as these we conclude that man's entire being is in his power. Hence if he lives eternally it will not depend upon his makeup, but on the good pleasure of God.

Short Sermons. No. 13.

The two roads and their end. The Master plainly marks out two roads, leading in directly opposite directions, and landing up at different ports, and we surely pity the one so confused, who can not see any difference, and really think that both roads come out at the same place. Some seem to think there are many different roads or faiths leading to heaven, and thus they teach for hire and divine for money, and console the perplexed ones by telling them it makes no difference what you believe if you are sincere in it, and it will be all right in the end, as the Judge of all the earth will do right, and will not ask you which road you came in on. Solomon says, "There is a way that seemeth right unto man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Beware of traditions and spider web doctrines that make void the Word of God, and ensnares the unthoughtful and unsuspecting. Now hear what the Master has to say about the subject of salvation and see how literal he is. "Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." In other words, "Not every one who saith, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Thus it is plain that the many who seek to enter in by praying and crying, Lord, Lord, are deluded and led astray, and are not in the narrow way to life but in reality are on the broad road to death, and do not know it. To try to pray them in as many do, is not the will of the Lord, but is human tradition pure and simple.

Now, let us hear Matthew's version of this matter, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because (or how) strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Let us note a few points in this statement. The two roads start at a given point, and instead of running parallel, they diverge from each other all the way until the end is reached. One road is just lined and crowded with humanity who rush and surge along much like cattle on a stampede. The other way is so narrow, like the strait, difficult gate, that one must come through, and walk straight and upright in all things, so much so that few there be that find it. The many are very jolly, and are now having a good time, eating and drinking, lovers of pleasure, much like the poor deluded antediluvians who knew not until it was too late. Now, who will venture to assume that they all went down in hope? Had as well think and say that death and destruction is life and salvation, and darkness is light, and black is white. While the way to life is so narrow and requires so much self-denial and humiliation that few care to find it, hence it is not crowded full like the other road, "While wisdom shows a narrow path with here and there a traveler." The little flock who travel this narrow way are so few that they are quite lonely, and to the big crowd who say they had as well be out of the world as out of fashion, seem very insignificant indeed. What is this that buoys your spirit up? Oh this, said he, the blessed hope.

F. E. ADAMS.

The Kingdom.

To whom does the kingdom belong, and who are the rulers and who are the subjects? It is called the Lord's kingdom and the kingdom of God, and his people are to pray, "Thy kingdom come." The kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ (jointly). Christ is given dominion, glory and a kingdom that all people, nations and languages should serve him. Christ is a nobleman that has gone into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return. Christ said to his disciples, "I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me. Fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. It is also called the kingdom of David. Isa. ix. 7. But whether it is called God's kingdom or Christ's or David's or the saints, it is all one and the same kingdom under the whole heavens, for the coming of which we hope and pray. He who sees the end from the beginning has arranged the ages and the coming of Christ and the kingdom so as to harmonize in oneness of spirit with his will and purpose in all things. God made his Son to have dominion over the work of his hands, and has appointed him heir of all things. The elect saints were chosen by adoption through Christ, before the foundation of the world (the only way God has arranged to save man) and they are made joint or equal heirs with Christ. They are to sit with Christ in his throne to judge the world and rule as the promised Seed, by whom all nations are to be blessed, that the world may remember and turn to the Lord and worship before him and call him blessed. Psa. xii. 27, and that they may have a righteous gospel judgment. We are commanded to watch and to pray and to wait for the coming of Christ and the kingdom, for they are the great central motive power presented in the gospel to lead men to repentance and salvation. Christ, the great teacher, commenced his teaching by saying, "Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand, (being the next kingdom to come) Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and pray, Thy kingdom come. He went about all Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom. He spoke of things pertaining to the kingdom forty days after his resurrection. Christ's coming, the resurrection and kingdom is the only way and means promised, through which future life and salvation can be obtained, without which death would have no waking, and those that have fallen asleep in Christ would be perished.

B. C. SIMONDS.

Prayer and Success.

It is related of a hero in Scottish history that when an overwhelming force was in full pursuit and all his followers were urging him to a more rapid flight, he coolly dismounted, in order to repair a flaw in his horse's harness. Whilst he busied himself with the broken buckle, the distant cloud swept down in nearer thunder, but just as the prancing hoofs, and eager spears were ready to dash down on him, the flaw was mended, the clasp was fastened, the steed was mounted, and like a sweeping falcon he vanished from their view. The broken buckle would have left him in the field an inglorious prisoner, the timely delay sent him in safety to his huzzahing comrades. There is in daily life the same profitable delay. The man, who from his prayerless waking bounces off to the business of the day, however admirable his talents and great his diligence, is only galloping on a steed harnessed with a broken buckle, and must not be astonished if in his hottest haste, his most hazardous leap, he is left inglorious in the dust.—The Pulpit.

M. JOBLIN, SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 18, 1901.

To offer a price for a priceless salvation is to subvert the whole economy of the gospel.

"IF you watch yourself closely, you will not be apt to pay yourself many compliments."

WILL some one who knows please send us the present address of G. E. Bradley, formerly of Mapleton, Oregon.

Do you ask what is the first declension? "Let him that thinketh he standeth." That is the first declension.

"Jesus mentions his laying down his life for the sheep, as a proof that he is the Good Shepherd: and we must be careful that we do not rob him of this distinction."

SOME one once said,—"I do not feel like condemning the game of chess; better men than I am have played at it: only I would just say, Write around your chess board, "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil."

THE Master says:—"Occupy till I come." Reader, Do you say you are occupied? If so, for whom? Do you say for your family? If so, is not the sparrow also occupied for her family? And the ant, is she not occupied for her family? Are you content to rise no higher than them?

AN Arab proverb says:—"By six qualities may a fool be known:—Anger without cause, speech without profit, change without motive, inquiry without an object,—putting trust in a stranger, and wanting capacity to discriminate between friend and foe."

"Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his Lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Of a truth I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all that he hath." Luke xii. 42–44; Matt. xxiv. 45–47; xxv. 21–23; Luke xix. 12–19."

WHEN the Duke of Norfolk addressed the Pope and hoped to see the temporal power again given him Leo XIII said in reply:—"Under our eyes, in this holy city, which should be the inviolate center of Catholicism, it is permitted to associations for religious propagation to take advantage of the sad economic conditions of the country to corrupt the faith of our children in the name of the specious doctrine of judgment, which pretends to leave each the right of interpreting in his own fashion the doctrine of Christ. You are right in protesting against this state of things, which enables you better to understand the grievous circumstances in which we have lived during the twenty-five years of our Pontificate." The Pope praises the English nation because it allows full liberty of conscience, yet wants to be given authority in Rome that he may cleanse it from the defilements of Protestantism, and prevent liberty of worship and conscience there. It makes a difference where it is, you see.

The Gospel.

The Gospel is not made up of silly anecdotes and pathetic stories to stir up the feelings, but of robust and life-giving things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ revealed in the writings of Moses, the prophets and the apostles. "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of diseases among the people." Matt. iv. 23.

"Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God; and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye and believe the good news." Mark i. 14, 15.

"And when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts viii. 12.

The gospel not only comprises the past suffering of Christ on Mount Calvary, but his future reign on Mount ...s proven by the following and ...Scriptures:—

"And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent; because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

"Therefore, being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." See also Matt. xix. 28.

Macauley the Historian.

Macauley the Historian, wrote as follows, concerning the soul:—

"As respects natural religion—revelation being for the present altogether left out of the question—it is not easy to see that a philosopher of the present day is more favorably situated than Thales or Simonides. He has before him just the same evidence of design in the structure of the universe which the early Greeks had.....As to the other great question—the question of what becomes of man after death—we do not see that a highly educated European, left to his unassisted reason, is more likely to be in the right than a Blackfoot Indian. Not a single one of the many sciences in which we surpass the Blackfoot Indians, throws the smallest light on the state of the soul after the animal life is extinct. In truth, all the philosophers, ancient and modern, who have attempted, without the help of revelation, to prove the immortality of man, from Plato down to Franklin, appear to us to have failed deplorably."

Respecting the faith of the coming of God's kingdom to earth at the second advent of Christ, this distinguished author wrote:—

"The Christian believes, as well as the Jew, that at some future time the present order of things will come to an end. Nay, many Christians believe that the Messiah will shortly appear and establish a kingdom on earth, and reign visibly over all its inhabitants. Whether this doctrine be orthodox or not, we shall not here enquire. The number of people who hold it is very much greater than the Jews residing in England. Many of those who hold it are distinguished by rank, wealth and ability. It is preached from the pulpits, both of the Scottish and English Church. Noblemen and Members of Parliament have written in defence of it."

"I Will Come Again."

Brethren and Sisters of the household of faith, are we ready for him? Are we living in reference to his glorious appearing? Are we striving to keep clear of worldly defilements? Are we watching for him as those who watch for the morning? Some of us have been a long time on the road; what progress are we making? Are we growing in God's favor? Are we keeping the flesh in subjection? Are our lamps trimmed and burning? Are we working together with God,—striving if by any means we may impart God's life-giving truth to others before the door is shut?

God has done wonderful things for us; but the Key of Truth has not been entrusted to us for nothing. As the moon reflects the light of the sun, we are expected to reflect the light of God's Truth. It has mercifully shone into our hearts, till we can rejoice in hope of the glory of God ourselves. We regard anxiety for the salvation of all in whom there is the least one of the best evidences of fervent love and gratitude, and active faith in God. O what a debt of love we owe; and while we will never be able to pay it, we can manifest our gratitude for our high calling by holding up the lamp of life to others. The good news is about the kingdom of God—tell it! This is a glorious kingdom,—tell it! It will soon be set up on earth,—tell it! All who believe it, repent, and are then immersed into the name of Jesus, will inherit that kingdom—providing they live Godly till or the end of this probationary season ends. This, truly is gracious news and ought to be told to every one who will listen to it. It should be told in the home especially. The children should know that God so loved the world of mankind that he provided a way out of the death-state, that whosoever will believe and from the heart obey the gospel of the grace of God may become joint-heirs with Christ at once, and by and by be joint-possessors with him of the world-wide

GERM OF OBEDIENCE,

THE GLAD DAY ARRIVES.

KINGDOM OF GOD.

We repeat, that every one who will respectfully listen should be told the good news. And to do this effectively the Word of Christ must dwell in us richly. We are persuaded that the time to work for God is short! A rapid and irresistible preparation for the mightiest of all revolutions is going on,—and as the Lord will certainly reward according to our works, we should let no time go to waste. We must

REDEEM THE TIME.

The promised land is just before us. We have long prayed, "Thy Kingdom Come," and lo, the King cometh,—comes to be King over all the earth,—to be eternally joined to his bride,—to dissipate the night of weeping,—to shed the light of the Sun of Righteousness all around. Hail happy day.

Naval Construction.

To carry out the various programmes of naval construction, as framed by the nations of the world, will require an outlay of five billion dollars. England set the pace several years ago, and now many of her great ships are out of date and out-classed.

The United States government arranged to spend $60,000,000, out of which $20,000,000 will be expended in 1901. The cost of the tools and places to repair ships, is almost as expensive as the ships themselves. The value of ships is ephemeral, owing to the constant changes in types.

England has under construction 17 battleships, 24 cruisers, 8 sloops of war and 55 torpedo destroyers, at a total cost of $133,000,000. This will not complete the fleet but moves them forward and completes those ordered, under a former appropriation.

France has provided for a naval construction reaching to 1907, in which a total of 220 vessels are to be built, the outlay of 1901 being figured at $124,000,000.

The plans of Germany cover 34 battle-ships, 32 cruisers and 80 torpedo boats. The appropriation for 1901 is $100,000,000. Russia's expenditures in 1901 is placed at $46,000,000 for the beginning of the work on new ships and completing those under way.

Poverty-stricken Italy will expend $30,000,000 on her navy in 1901. Japan's budget for naval equipment in 1901 is $23,000,000. Austria, Sweden, Holland and Denmark are preparing to double their naval expenditures. Verily, the wings of the angel of peace are not to be spread over the ocean during the early years of the new century.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 240 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

"DURING Queen Victoria's reign the population of Great Britain increased from 18,000,000 to 41,000,000; there were added to her empire 'India, rich portions of Africa, Hongkong, most of Australia, and many islands of the sea,' a grand total for the empire of 388,000,000 souls, inhabiting 11,355,000 square miles, making Great Britain 'the largest empire on the globe in area, and outdone in population by China alone.'"

Education. No. 2.

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gollotly, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—ED.]

THE NEBULAR THEORY.

"Keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings and oppositions of science falsely so called."—Paul.

After the dethronement of the Roman hierarchy in Europe the moral reaction against it was very great and took the form of antipathy to all connected with it and to all that even was claimed for it or claimed by it. Religion was tabooed on its account; the God it professed to worship was scorned; the Bible it professed to take as guide and endorsement was scoffed at. In Notre Dame they enthroned the "Goddess of Reason" and held high carnival in the names of science and liberty. Since then science has undertaken to be the guide of the nations, and liberty, alas, has been the catch-word that has rallied to many a folly and crime. But just as there is fake religion there is also a science that is "falsely so called," and there is no tyranny more pronounced and no bigotry more emphatic, and as the pontifical dynasty passes away its power, seat, and great authority are claimed by the scientific theorist. But we must be particular at the outset to carefully discriminate between the scientist with the fact—the true scientist—and the scientist with the theory—the fake; between the disciple and the student who sits raptured in wonder and in awe at the magnificent and incomprehensible manifestations in nature, and the shallow simpleton who stands ready to explain it all by a sweep of the tongue and a turn of the wrist. Not that there is any objection either, in a free country, to any one's theory so long as it is legally labelled as such, but when the same is promulgated as unalterable and incontestable truth, and scattered broadcast under the auspices of erudition and knowledge through the press in all its various channels, with the platform and even the pulpit as endorsers, then the thing takes on an altogether different aspect.

These remarks particularly apply to the modern so called scientific theory of creation known as the "nebular theory." Those who are readers will run against this theory everywhere in modern literature: in the daily papers, the weekly journals, the monthly magazines, the encyclopædias, and, with its legitimate offspring, the theory of the evolution of mankind from a "simian ancestry," even the religious press is tainted. In fact, one of the most popular religious books of modern times and the only one probably, not a novel, that made its author's fortune and fame, was founded on the "theory of evolution." I refer to "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," by Prof. Drummond. The nebular theory, to begin with, starts at the top, as it were, and comes down—or cools down, rather. It supposes that once upon a time the space of heaven was strewn with great clouds of material so hot that all was in a state of vapor, and very many degrees of temperature higher than any we can reach on earth by mechanical appliances. These clouds of vaporized metals and so forth were whirling round at such a rate that, to make a long story short, they broke up into rings and streaks, which eventually amalgamated themselves in liquid globular forms into planets, moons, etc., which, futhermore, in cooling formed a slight film or crust of solid minerals on the surface. This film or crust is, in the case of our planet, the earth, rocks, etc., on which we live, the inside being still in a state of fusion. In due time plant and animal life appeared—literally manifested itself, for mark well in passing that in all this there is not the slightest suggestion of a designing mind, not the faintest trace of intelligent direction. It just fell out thus, tumbled so "like a rolling thing before a whirlwind." "Blind force played skittles with chaos and cosmos was the result of a drawn game."

But on the outset here is trouble. As we are told that space is at a temperature of absolute zero, which is several hundred degrees below the freezing point of water, however could it happen that all that stuff could get itself so blazing hot in such a cold place, and how did it get such a tremendous shove off as to keep it whirling for so long, though according to these theorists it is cooling off and playing out all the time, only now running on its own momentum, like the poor wretch that is living on what money he has in his pocket with no prospects of a job. But we cannot take time to be too rational, but will pass on to the magnificent contemplation of other mammoth absurdities in these theoretical heavens where paradox reigns supreme.

After the nebular material had cooled off sufficiently to be habitable worlds, we are told that these planets, moons, etc., still keep passing around their central suns and each other, and all that keeps them suspended in position is the balance between centrifugal and centripetal forces: that is, to put it in plain terms, the attraction of gravitation pulls them in, and the swing of their own weight pushes them out, and the one just happens to offset the other. This remarkable coincidence is simply a crank case of "perpetual motion machine." There is no allowance for friction or derangement in all the construction, yet as we go along we will see that the friction to be overcome must be enormous, even that which we know of, and there may be others of which we have no conception, and every mechanic knows how friction affects speed and how instantly speed affects momentum. With the faintest loss of momentum there is absolute and entire loss of balance—and then what? In order to stop a crow that is flying overhead it is not necessary to wait till he is tired; it is not even necessary to kill him; only clip with a shot one or two pin feathers out of either wing and he will somersault to your feet. He has lost his power of balance. In skating on the ice it is only necessary for the heel of the skate to go outside of the line of gravitation and the skater forthwith sits down on his elbow or the back of his head, neither tarrieth he for a soft place to fall on, because he hath tipped over his balance. And so would it be on a larger scale if the heavenly bodies were only poised in such a slipshod manner as suggested, with the added difficulty that they would have two chances of disaster to the crow's or the skater's one, for they could fall either away, out or in.

Now, there are instruments called orreries that lecturers use to illustrate the movements of the heavenly bodies, but in these machines the miniature suns, moons and planets are hung to each other by wires, but if there was any truth in the theory that a globe will find its balance and keep it between attraction and swing, all that we would need is a good strong bar magnet—electric would be best, because we can apply any amount of power needed. This will answer as the central sun. For a planet we will take a steel ball, and the plane of earth's orbit will be a billiard table, or, better still, a level sheet of plate glass. Now let us try and spin that ball round that magnet just giving it enough force, and I wonder how long it would spin. I don't believe the juggler has been born yet that can make it go a full turn, but if he is we have more trouble in store for him—enough to whiten his hair. First, he will have to throw the ball so that it will circulate in the form of an ellipse, for this is how the planets circulate around the sun. In the case of the planet Mercury it is one-third of the radius closer to the center at one time than another. Then to illustrate the motion of the comets he will put the magnet at one end of the table and from the other end he will throw the ball so that it will make a neat half-turn and come back to his hand without striking anything, for, as is well known, the comet comes toward the sun in a practically bee line, and after rounding its goal goes off in the same direction that it came. Our juggler will have to do this performance every time, for it seems very easy for the comet to do! Those who know anything of mechanics or natural philosophy know that even with the intelligence of human beings, with the trained hand and eye, such feats are impossible. Theoretically it may be possible to make a ball spin so provided there is no friction to lessen the speed and no variation in the distance from the power of attraction which increases enormously as the distance lessens and decreases the same way as it increases (inversely as the square of the distance). It is very evident then that an attractive force that would just hold a globe in tow at a certain distance would never begin to hold it when it spun one-third further away, but it would instantly fly off for good. And again, a force that held a globe just in tow at a certain distance would get such a multiplied pull on it at one-third nearer that it would never get another chance to get away again. At least, that is the difficulty that our amateur juggler would soon discover, and some of the later astronomers have made a modification of the Newtonian theory of gravitation, which, however, as it plays havoc with preconceived notions is a little backward about coming forward and spoiling things. This new theory is to the effect that the heavenly bodies have a repulsion as well as an attraction that holds them in place and balance. This does not simplify matters any; it rather makes the thing more complicated, but it seems to be a truth so far.

"THE government of France has recently issued a pamphlet, showing the amount of real estate held by the Catholic monastic orders, which forms a basis of the present agitation against these societies. According to this pamphlet, the value of property held by these orders amounts to $220,000,000, over half of which has been accumulated within the last twenty years. In order to avoid payment of taxes on this property much of it has been made over to "men of straw." It is the purpose of the government to compel the real owners of this property to pay the taxes on it.

Obituary.

Christina Thomson, wife of Alexander Thomson, died in Cleveland, Ohio, on Feb. 5, 1901, in her 65th year. She was born in Fifeshire, Scotland. Shortly after marriage to Bro. Thomson they removed to America and settled in South Cleveland, Ohio, where they have ever since resided. She was brought up in the Presbyterian faith, and for many years was a member of that Church in the southern part of Cleveland. About twenty-five years ago she was told by members of the church of the Blessed Hope that her faith and hope were not according to the Scriptures and after much contention and searching she became obedient to the "Faith once delivered to the saints." She was an earnest defender of the "Word of life." Always contending for the truth, and her light was made to shine wherever she went, and her kind sympathetic words and Christian influence will be missed by a [illegible] who was kind, loving [illegible] devoted to her family, who now mourn her loss. The funeral was held at the house, and many relatives and friends were present. The 14th chapter of John's gospel was selected by her daughter Maggie to be read on the occasion, and the writer spoke words of comfort and consolation to the sorrowing relatives and friends. The selections from Scripture being Job 14th chapter 6 to 15th verses; 1 Cor. xv. 35 to 55 and Rev. xx. 1 to 6 inclusive. She was then borne away to Lake View Cemetery and laid to rest to await the resurrection morning. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." Rev. xiv. 13. The family desire to thank the brothers and sisters for their floral tributes.

Editor Restitution:

In my article on the "Ages" there is a mistake in paragraphing. Beginning on the thirteenth line of the article it should read, "From the time the promise was given to mother Eve in the garden down to the time Jesus was born and laid in the manger, God was engaged in carrying forward the work which was to result in the birth of the Messiah, which he had promised to Eve. The time seems long to us, with God it was only four days.

From the time of Abel down to the time Christ shall come for his bride the special and particular work in which our heavenly Father has been engaged, has been the taking out of a people for his name, who are to become the bride of Christ."

Kindly correct and oblige,

Poetry.

What Wilt Thou Have Me to Do?

Jesus, Master, whom I serve,
Though so feebly and so ill,
Strengthen hand and heart and nerve
At thy bidding to fulfill:
Open thou mine eyes to see
All the work thou hast for me.

Lord, thou needest not, I know,
Service such as I can bring;
Yet I long to prove and show
Full allegiance to my King;
Thou art light and life to me,
Let me be a praise to thee.

Jesus, Master, wilt thou use
One who owes thee more than all?
As thou wilt, I would not choose,
Only let me hear thy call:
Jesus let me always be
In thy service, glad and free.

Australian Letter. No. 6.

The southern march of discovery followed tardily in the wake of western exploration and settlement.

The Austral Land found its Columbus in Fernandes de Quiros. To Spain is given the honor of adding a newer continent to the "New World" already acquired by her. Throughout there is a striking analogy between the life of Quiros and that of Columbus. Philip III of Spain was as cautious as Ferdinand had been in giving aid to the unfortunate explorer. Though he did not directly assist, in the end he wrote a letter ordering the Governor of Peru to equip such vessels as were required for the expedition. Armed with this letter and another from the Pope commanding all good Christians to help in the enterprise he went to Peru. Here he was allowed three vessels somewhat superior to the three with which Columbus had begun his voyage one hundred and thirteen years before. The largest of the vessels, the Capitana, was commanded by De Quiros himself. The second, the Almiranti, was in charge of Luiz Vaez de Torres. The third vessel, the Zabin acted as tender.

Starting from Lima in 1605 they sailed westward. Tahiti was discovered first.

April 30, 1606 they sailed into a large open bay washing the shores of what they described as a "coast without end."

De Quiros was so confident that he had found the [illegible] that he named the land, Tierra Australia del Espiritu Santo, (Southern Land of the Holy Spirit.) In this he was mistaken as Columbus had been in landing upon the Bahamas. Instead of the great southern continent he had simply landed upon one of the New Hebrides Islands.

After remaining a month De Quiros was compelled to sail for Mexico, as the supplies were diminishing and the crews had become sick and consequently mutinous.

He reached Acapulco in safety on the 3rd of Oct. 1606. He sent an account of his discoveries to King Philip and with it a petition for permission to undertake another expedition. Like Columbus he was disheartened by delay. Though his request was finally granted he died at Panama on his way to Lima. Thus he also was not permitted to set foot on the continent he thought he had discovered.

Torres was a degree more successful. He did not return with De Quiros but sailing farther westward wound in and out among the islands northeast of Australia, discovered the strait which is named in his honor. He landed at Manilla in 1607. Unfortunately the account of his voyage was not translated and published until the British captured Manilla 1762.

It is probable that the north coast of Australia was visited by the Portugese early in the 16th Century but it is believed that Dutch sailors were the first Europeans to tread its shores. The Duyfhen (Dove) a Dutch East India vessel sent out to explore the coast of New Guinea, sailed into the Gulf of Carpentaria to a point called Cape Keerweer (Turnagain.)

In an encounter with the natives several of the crew were killed. They "turned again" without being aware that they had landed on a new continent.

From time to time other Dutch navigators visited its shores but made no permanent settlement.

In 1642 Antony Van Diemen, Dutch Governor of Java sent Abel Sang Tasman to ascertain whether New Holland was a part of the "Great South Land." November 24th 1642 he sighted Point Hibbs a promontory on the west coast of Tasmania. Soon after they anchored in Storm Bay.

The superstitious crew imagined they heard strange and mysterious noises, not understanding the peculiar manner in which the blacks catch the opossums. When they saw trees with notches five feet apart, cut in the trunks of two tall trees, they thought the country inhabited by a race of giants. Though they had two boat loads of well armed men they withdrew after the ship's carpenter had waded through the surf and planted a pole from which floated the flag of the Netherlands, thus taking possession in behalf of the Dutch.

Tasman called the island Van Diemen's Land. He also discovered the New Zealand Islands, Friendly and Fiji Islands. In a later expedition 1644 he surveyed the Gulf of Carpentaria and other portions of the north coast.

The Dutch commander, Vlaming, in 1696 landed on the west coast where he discovered and named the Swan River. So named on account of the great number of black swans that swim on its surface. He explored the coast as far as Shark Bay.

But it was left to the English to publish the first account of this southern land, to become acquainted with the natives, and to plant colonies on its sunny shores.

The American Vespucius of this continent, William Dampier was the pioneer. His history reads like a romance.

Leaving a life of adventure in the West Indies, he joined the Cygnet commanded by his friend, Captain Swan. They were compelled by the mutinous crew to join in a buccaneering cruise. The captain and forty others were abandoned on the Philippine Islands. Dampier remained on the Cygnet rather than fall into the hands of the Spaniards.

In 1688 the Cygnet stopped for repairs in the Buccaneers Archipelago off the north-west coast of Australia.

This afforded Dampier an opportunity for exploring the mainland which he utilized to good advantage. Soon after he was set ashore on Nicobar Islands, and after many adventures reached Europe where he published an account of his voyage.

He dedicated his book to a nobleman through whose influence he was enabled to make a subsequent voyage in the Roebuck.

Reaching Shark Bay August 1st, 1699 he cruised for one thousand miles along the northwest coast. The picture which he gives is not very inviting:—"This portion of the coast being barren and destitute of water, while the inhabitants were the most miserable wretches in the universe, having no houses, nor garments, and feeding on a few fish, cockles and periwinkles."

This description was so discouraging that the new continent was deemed unfit for settlement.

America offered so much better field that no attempt was made toward colonization for nearly a century.

It was through the expedition of Captain James Cook that the first favorable impression of the southern continent was obtained by the English people.

In 1768 Cook undertook an expedition to the South Seas for the purpose of making observations of the Transit of Venus and to ascertain whether Tasman's opinion that New Zealand formed part of the southern continent was correct.

The Endeavour sailed from Plymouth having on board the well known astronomer, Mr. Green, who had the required instruments with him, two botanists, Dr. Solander and Joseph Banks.

After making the desired observations from the island of Tahiti, Cook circumnavigated New Zealand making a map of its shores.

After leaving New Zealand he sailed east and came in sight of Australia. The first headland which he sighted he named for his first lieutenant, Point Hicks. Sailing northward he named the prominent points in passing, Cape Howe, Pigeon House, Cape George and many others. He anchored in Botany Bay, April 28, 1770. So named because of the enthusiasm of the botanists at the rare specimens found here. On account of the resemblance of its shores to those of southern Wales, Cook named the country New South Wales.

He remained some time in Botany Bay, where he hoisted the British flag daily. From here he sailed northward making charts of the coast. He passed Port Jackson, which he named but did not explore. He passed Broker and Moreton Bays. Continuing northward his vessel struck on the Great Barrier Reef. She was compelled to enter a river on the Queensland coast for repairs. Cook named this river "Endeavour." It was found that a large hole had been made in her keel, by a huge mass of coral which fortunately remained in the hole thus preventing the vessel from filling with water. She sailed northward from here, passed through Torres Straits, touched at Batavia and Cape Town, and reached England in 1771.

Cook's two subsequent voyages have little to do with Australian history though interesting in their further information of the southern hemisphere. In the second he explored the coast of Tasmania.

The glowing reports brought to England by Cook and his scientific friends gave a very different character to the Southern Land. The government for the first time began to think of the possibility of settlement.

Dear Restitution.

I have read with much interest the many testimonies of love and good cheer, and lessons of instruction, all together making our dear paper a perfect treat every week. I often think how full of truth are the words, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. Truly there is a sacredness in every sentence of God's Word, in which there is so much to be obtained. Yes, it is a continual feast. "If a man love me he will keep my Word; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." John xiv. 23. It is even true, the Father and our own dear Jesus will come and dwell with us. Yea, sup with us and we with them. Oh, what royal guests! Can we realize so much blessedness. If King Edward should condescend to dine with us, I rather think we would realize all the favor his presence would give, and perhaps we would cherish every word spoken. But these words of our Lord are for the poor of this world and heirs of the kingdom. They are living bread given us by the King of kings, if we love him and keep his commandments and abide in his love. Dear friends, in studying the Word I sometimes find a difficulty in arriving at a correct understanding. But I learn that God has made us workers together, so often during my anxious search for light, I receive a new RESTITUTION, and strange as it may seem to some of you, I there find a satisfactory solution of the matter. Some brother or sister had learned it for me, the very identical thing I was hunting for. What a loving Father we have; how sweet the promise of our Master, I will love him and will manifest myself to him. John xiv. 21. We shake the crumbs from our table cloth, and little sparrows come and feast upon them. "Ye are of more value than many sparrows." So the bread of life may be found after falling from the pen of some brother or sister that may give nourishment to some hungry one, thereby bringing in others to feast with us. So my brother, my sister, write again. I am glad to read so much that is profitable through our paper, and I often feel that I should like to hear from some of the faith at my own address, Neodesha, Kan., as we are so isolated, there being no one in the faith except myself, and an aged brother, and a Millennial Dawn sister here in our town, she is a sweet woman, and we have good times when we meet together. God bless our RESTITUTION, may it never stop until the kingdom comes. Then I hope to meet you all. Sin and death will cease for ever and there will be no more good bys. O what a gathering that will be. Your Sister in the blessed hope,

SALLIE BLACK.

Editor Restitution:

It is probably long since you received a letter from this quarter of the globe, especially from Lake Shore, Wash. But the churches at Lake Shore, Wash., Scholls, Oregon, and Wenatchee, Wash., are in a prosperous condition, and the fact that nothing has been sent you has been more from negligence than from lack of something to write. This letter is mainly for the purpose of informing your readers of the whereabouts and work of our esteemed brother, D. M. Hudler, of Muscatine, Ia. He has been with us here for the past three or four months, and is now practicing magnetic healing and suggestive therapeutics at Felida, a small place three miles north of here. His work there has been very satisfactory, and we all predict a bright future for him in the profession he has taken up. This method of healing disease is sure to become the leading process used in the cure of all ills, and Bro. Hudler seems well fitted by nature and education to practice this system of healing. We are pleased also to state that Bro. Hudler has not abandoned preaching, but preaches when ever time and opportunity will permit. On his arrival in Washington he and Bro. Skeels conducted a series of meetings here, preaching alternately. In the past few weeks he has given us three memorable sermons; at Felida, Jan. 27th, subject, "The Bridegroom," text Rev. xix. 7, 8. The following Sunday, Feb. 3rd, he preached at Lake Shore, subject "The Resurrection," text 1 Cor. xv. 20. Then two weeks from that date at Lake Shore, he gave a sermon, a convincing, appealing Bible study that I venture to say no one present will soon forget. His subject was, "The near approach of Christ's Coming," text, Dan. viii 14. On Monday March 14, Bro. Hudler will remove to Vancouver, Wash., a charming little city of five thousand inhabitants, seven miles distant from Portland, Oregon, where he will continue the practice of magnetic healing. Bro. Hudler sends greetings to the brethren and friends at Dixon, Lanark, Antioch, Ill., and at other places where he has preached the "Gospel of the Kingdom," and the "Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began;" and would be pleased to hear from any of the brethren. Your Sister in Christ,

ENDA MILLS.

I left my home near Portland, Ore., Jan. 18, to engage in my present evangelizing. Have held meetings on Guemes Island, 80 miles north of Seattle. Guemes is one of the many picturesque islands of the Sound. Had good interest; returning by way of Seattle to Tacoma. I got the brethren of the city together and we organized "The Church of God" in Tacoma, numbering thirteen active members, with the following working officers: Bro. Dr. Wilkins, Elder; L. G. Jaeger, Treasurer and deacon, and C. W. Cropp, Secretary and deacon. During the last two days I have spoken three times in West Seattle, an interest being shown in the third and closing meeting, Feb. 24th; but it was necessary to leave as I have work in view in eastern Washington, at Ellensburg, beginning this week. I had a most pleasant visit with friends and brethren at all points visited. When I reach Ellensburg I will be fifty miles from where Bro. Woodward's have been working at Wenatchee, but as snow clad mountains block the way, I will be in fact three hundred miles away from them by railway, but I hope to meet them before they leave the coast.

W. L. SKEELS.

Dear ones of the precious faith:

How I do wish that you isolated ones could with us have enjoyed the feast that has ended to night. Bro. A. H. Zilmer, of Plymouth Ind., has been with us two weeks, and such grand good discourses as we have listened to, and after having listened to the earnest, zealous, soul stirring exhortations, each one who has been baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus should strive more and more to live a Christian life. Bro. Zilmer is a workman who needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. One has to listen to him to learn of him, although his advice to us is not take his words for it, but to study our Bibles ourselves, dig it out as it were and then we have it. Search the Scriptures, is a blessed command. There can be no better employment for the Christian, nor the sinner in search of eternal life or the Scriptures pertaining to it. There have been no additions to the church during this meeting, but we trust the seed has been sown that will result in much good later on, for the truth has been presented in such a forcible clear manner that they who listen cannot help but learn. Let us all strive to be among the number, who shall be permitted to sing the new song and behold the face of our blessed Master, is the prayer of your Sister in Christ.

AZORAH M. SCROGGS.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

In the 27th Psalm there are some precious thoughts that come to me. In the 8th verse: "Seek ye my face. My heart said unto me, thy face, O Lord will I seek. Hide not thy face from me; put not thy servant away in anger. Thou hast been my help; leave me not; neither forsake me. O God of my salvation! when my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up. Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in thy plain path, or in the way of plainness, (margin) because of mine enemy, those which observe me." (margin) What a thought there is in the words of the margin. How the world watches professors today, and especially those who profess to be outside of the nominal church. Dear ones in Christ, do you realize the importance of being dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ? It means much more than a mere profession of being in the faith. If we are dishonest in our dealings, or if we drive a sharp bargain as the world does, how can we then say we are in Christ Jesus, because if we are in him, old things have passed away and behold all things become new, as we find in 2 Cor. v. 17. We all profess to be looking for the Master of the house, and if judgment is to begin at the house of God, which house we are if we hold fast the profession of our faith, where shall the sinner and the ungodly appear? It is a solemn thing loved ones to name the name of God, and we are exhorted by the Apostle to depart from iniquity. Now turning to the 27th Psalm again, the last verse. Dear ones, do you observe the thought that is in this verse? "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the Lord." Dear ones, let me put this question to you: Do you wait upon the Lord, do you believe that he answers prayer? In the 37th Psalm we have these words: "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him. Fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass." Is it not true that everything tends to drive you from the closet of prayer today? One thing I am impressed with more and more each day, that there is no fear of God before the people's eyes today. If there was they would not dare to practice what they do today. Truly we are living in the days of Noah and also in the days of Lot, and the injunction comes so close: "Remember Lot's wife." And also the solemn words of the Savior in Revelations: "Take heed that no one take thy crown." May the God of all grace strengthen and comfort you all. Amen. M. T. A.

Dear Restitution:

Once more I send greeting to the dear brothers and sisters of like precious faith. We are living in a grand and awful time, and it behooves us to have the whole armor on that we may be able to stand in these perilous times. The clouds are getting darker and darker. Let us lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh. THE RESTITUTION is a welcome visitor; I know of no one of like faith here. Your sister in the blessed hope,

MRS. SARAH J. LAMPHEAR.

Dear Restitution:

In my weakness I will try to write a few lines to the love feast. It is not because I do not want to write but because I do not know how. I thank the Lord for his help and mercy that he has bestowed upon me. Brothers and sisters, it makes my heart rejoice to see that some of you have preaching and good meetings to go to, but I am like a good many others that I read of in my papers, I do not hear any Bible doctrines; I have not heard a gospel sermon for some time, but I am still striving to overcome the trials and temptations of this world, but I do not know what I would do if it was not for my papers and the Bible, they give me strength to combat with the enemy of God. When I talk Bible truths to my neighbors they laugh at me and say, "that is an old hobby of the Advents." They call us Advents and infidels and everything but Christians. A person does not know what it is until he gets in a community by himself, but I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation to them that believeth it. We know what our Savior said, "Will I find faith on the earth when I come again?" Brothers and sisters, it looks like there would be none. I can say that I am glad that I have got their old hobby. We ought to be the happiest people on God's green earth when we can see we are not led by the blind. Brothers and sisters, I ask an interest in your prayers. Your brother in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord,

GUY WALLING.

Quarterly Conference Report.

Report of Quarterly Conference held at Lanark, Ill., Mch. 2, 1901. Committee met Saturday night. Treasurer's report shows a collection of $85.-00 since last quarterly meeting, and amount paid out $31.50. Leaving a balance on hand at this date of $231.-48. Next Quarterly Conference to meet at Dixon, Ill., first Sunday in June, if such arrangements can be made. Committee on printing report that a goodly numbe[r] "Salvation" and "Wh[at] ed" are on hand, and the[y] terly "Obedience of Faith" [will] be printed. These quarterlies can be had for the postage only; two copies for one cent, order from J. W. Wilson, 79 Dearbon St., Chicago, and help in a good cause, distributing these good works.

Sunday morning Bible class was led by Bro. S. J. Lindsay and he spoke for thirty minutes on the "Whole Armor," very refreshing. At 10:30 A. M. Bro. J. W. Wilson preached to an attentive audience on the Prophecies. At 2:30 P. M. S. J. Lindsay preached to a goodly house on "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation." This closed another one of those goodly gatherings, such as will build us up in the most holy faith.

An Old Tune.

It is found in the old "Valley Harmonist," page 96; in this book the characters called notes, were only four, so, la, me, fa. In that day my father taught vocal music, and this was one of my favorite pieces, and I yet love the good tune; it carries me back to the sweet days of childhood, but thank the Lord, in his providence and unbounding mercy I have had the eyes of my understanding enlightened since that day, and consequently the words used in that book for my favorite old tune, cannot be used now, for they teach contrary to the Word of the Lord. The old hymn says,

"When I can't see my title clear,
To mansions in the skies," but my Bible tells me that God has given the earth to the children of men. Psa. cxv. 16. And our Lord said, "The meek shall inherit the earth." Matt. v. 5. And again, we shall reign in the earth. Rev. v. 10. And our Lord taught his disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth." This all gives the saints a title to the earth instead of the skies. It reminds me of a circumstance which took place down in East Virginia. During the War in 1861, my husband and self spent some time in that section, during that time we made our first acquaintance with the kingdom believers, who had been brought into the truth by our much lamented brother, Dr. Thomas. During his labors there, on one occasion he was speaking to a large crowd of intelligent people and in his earnest manner he was proving that the saints would inherit the earth, and one gentleman of his congregation rose up and said, with a loud voice, "If Dr. Thomas goes to heaven, I don't want to go there." The Doctor very calmly replied and said, "The gentleman need not give himself any uneasiness about that," for he said, "we are traveling back to back, he is going up to the skies, and I expect to be recompensed in the earth when our Lord comes to reward his servants." Prov. xi. 31. Now I will add a few lines which I have composed to suit my favorite old tune.

The Gospel gate stands open wide,
'Tis open night and day,
Then enter in and brave the tide,
And wash your sins away. Acts xxii. 10.

The Savior says my burden's light,
My yoke is easy too,
Take up your cross and follow him,
'Tis all that you can do.

Make up your mind to serve the Lord,
Now while it's called today;
Don't wait until it is too late,
But make your choice today.

His promise stands for one and all,
Who trust the blessed Lord;
Obey the gospel while you may,
And feed upon his Word.

SARAH F. MORGAN.

Report of Labor.

Arriving at Oleander, Cal., Jan. 6, I was heartily received by brethren from whom I had been separated for three years, and spent many pleasant days among them. The church house was refused us, and we held the greater part of our meetings in the school house, a few being held in private houses. We found much to interfere with our work. The attendance was not satisfactory, but we trust some little good may have been accomplished. We also made an effort at Easton and Grangeville, but owing to existing circumstances could not follow up the opening. In order to accomplish much in this field of labor a continued residence would be necessary. In this State the people seem more than ordinarily given over to worldliness in all its forms. There seems to be not so much skepticism as indifference, and laborers are sadly needed. The brethren at Oleander are "holding the fort." May the Lord give them strength and guidance. All too soon we had to say farewell to those who had contributed so much to make our visit pleasant.

In hope,

EDWIN [illegible]

...unicated.

"If the righteous are scarcely saved, where then will the ungodly and sinners appear?"

Many individuals believe that the righteous will be saved, yet can't think that a man will be eternally lost if he is not of Christ. That an ordinary, good, moral man will surely be saved. Christ tells us emphatically that we are either for him or we are against him. He also says plainly that the righteous shall have as their reward eternal life, an abundant entrance into his kingdom, joy eternal, more abundant life. That is we shall be rewarded with a spiritual body and be able to enjoy life in a higher degree, in a degree so far above this present life that our mortal minds are unable to grasp it in the fullest sense. Our frail perceptive power is not strong enough to realize its wondrous magnitude. Also he says the ungodly and sinners shall be cast out. Now, if we believe Christ at all, we surely must believe him in all things, and when he says the wicked shall be cast into outer darkness, we are forced to take the Word as it reads. When men's minds have harbored evil thoughts for a time their mind continually grows harder and they drift on and on down with the current getting farther and further away from Christ, and deeper in to the mire until they have a condition, almost if not a disease, when their minds are very hard to arouse, they can't become interested again as they once did. A man once said, "Christ knocked at my door many times years ago and I used every means to ward him off, to turn him away, to shun him. Now he seems to knock no more, he has seemingly forsaken me. I can't arose myself, I can't be aroused, I am totally lost, I have sinned away my day of grace. Oh could I but feel as I once did, but alas! I cursed and would not own him." We should stand boldly out in defence of the Master's cause, fearing nothing except God. Christ is now knocking at our door, only a short season of work for the Master, then our reward of all things, joy unspeakable. The harvest is ready, the reapers few. Oh, can't we grasp it? How can we think of going down to everlasting death? If people could but realize what eternal death means. Think of it, being eternally away from God, in outer darkness, no joy, no happiness away from all.

There is only one way these moral men can possibly escape the wrath of God, and that is the strait way, only by coming to Christ, to repent, confess Christ to the world and be baptized. Baptizo en udatt, not "cheo," or "rano," but "baptizo." Christ is now knocking at the door of our hearts for admission. We are the judges now in this life, let us make haste now and let him in, else when we knock at the door of his kingdom he may say, "Depart, I never knew you." Yes, if we let him in while we are the judge, he will likewise let us into the next life when he is the judge, so let us strengthen one another with earnest prayers and encouraging words and by patient continuance in well doing we will grow gradually stronger and be able to get far more out of this life, with assurance of the blessed promise in the next. Let us testify of the Master, our prayers should be frequent and earnest, yet not necessarily always made in public, but our testimonials must be aloud in meeting in public everywhere. Let the world know where we stand that others in Christ will be strengthened with us. That others out of Christ seeing our earnestness will stop and investigate the blessed work and join in with us. Many people are weak and need encouragement, let us watch for them as we would for a drowning man and firmly grasp them up, bearing them along with us until they have strength to support themselves. Then they will assist others as we did them. Mortal man is frail, Paul says we are but babes born into Christ and need the milk of the gospel to nourish our feeble minds. "If the righteous are scarcely saved where will the ungodly and sinners appear?" Let us not just barely get into the kingdom alone but let us take something in with us for the Lord, we can take other souls in with us, that is all. That is enough. That I may meet you all when the blessed Savior chooses to reward us is my prayer. Your brother in Christ,

FRANK H. HEMPHILL.

Oh, that every professed follower of the Savior could say, "For me to live is Christ!" Filled with the Spirit, we should be as Christ in all things. Christ should be reproduced in us; Christ should be reflected through us.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

TWELVE WORDS, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

EARLY LESSONS, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

Strength for Service.

Lord, give me strength all faithfully to toil,
Converting barren earth to fruitful soil.
I long to be an instrument of thine,
To gather worshipers unto thy shrine;
To be the means one human soul to save
From the dark terrors of a hopeless grave.

Yet most I want a spirit of content
To work where'er thou'lt wish my labor spent,
Whether at home or in a stranger clime,
In days of joy, or sorrow's sternest time.
I want a spirit passive to be still,
And by thy power to do thy holy will.

"Get Away You Soul-Sleepers." No. 2.

I recently called attention to two preachers, viz. Messrs. Pallette and Mace, who were holding meeting at Willard Hall, Chicago, and how the said gentlemen attacked the doctrine of conditional immortality. The said preachers still continue to hold meetings at the above place, and still take the liberty to assail the fundamental truth of God. On Saturday Feb. 23, Mr Pallette attacked the promises of God, as saving gospel truth. He said: "You sometimes sing: 'I am standing on the promises of God, my Savior,' I pity you if you are." He also said, if you are standing on the promises, you are standing where the Old Testament saints stood, and that the New Testament saints were not standing on the promises, but on facts, the three facts of the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus.

I thank God that I am privileged to stand on the promises of God. How is it with you dear reader, do you depend upon the promises of God? Remove the promises of God from the Christian system, and what have we got left to stand upon? If they should be taken from us, all that would be left amounts to nothing more than a baseless fabric of a vision.

Consider the first promise made in the garden of Eden: "I will put enmity between thee (the serpent) and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it (the seed of the woman) shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." This, as yet, has been fulfilled only in part, but it is now in process of being fulfilled. Things are taking shape, which will culminate in fatally bruising the serpent's head. And do you know the promises of God in the gospel, have that end in view. The seed under God's promises is destined to triumph gloriously over the serpent's seed, after which the gospel promises of God (upon which we delight to stand,) will become blessed realities to be shared in by all nations. See Gen. xxii. 17: "Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Are not these foundation promises upon which we stand? If these promises of God should fail, there would be nothing left in the Christian religion.

Mr. Pallette cannot see clear enough to perceive that the three facts upon which he professes to stand, is but the working out or the unfolding of God's plan, to make good his promises as above quoted.

The conflict began in Eden's bowers, when the serpent took issue with God, and said: "Ye shall not surely die," and it has continued ever since. And today the serpent's seed is large, and numerous, and is scattered wherever man is found, engaged in proclaiming in public and in private, both from pulpit and rostrum, the same old lie, "Ye shall not surely die." The subtle cunning of the serpent is seen in the character of its agents who proclaim far and wide the above lie, they are men who call themselves servants of God, and ministers of Jesus Christ, like Messrs. Pallette and Mace.

Tell me, are not the promises of God in which the Old Testament saints rejoiced equally precious to New Testament saints? Suppose we turn to Heb. vi., and read of the oath-confirmed promise of God, to Abraham and the heirs of promise. And then turn to verse 18, and read that, "We (the New Testament saints), might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us, (in those promises) which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast."

What do we find in those promises? We find: 1, Strong consolation; 2. A place of refuge; 3, A sure and stedfast anchor. Can you stand on such promises? I can.

Now, let us turn to 2 Pet. i. 4, and read: "Whereby are given unto us (the New Testament saints) exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

"The Divine nature" is a deathless nature. The fact is, that now we are all poor dying creatures, but God in his matchless and marvelous love, has "given us exceeding great and precious promises," that those who believe his promises, (like faithful Abraham) might share in his divine and deathless nature. In view of this, cannot we heartily sing:

"I am standing on the promises of God."

Mr. Pallette cannot appreciate these promises of God, because he believes he already has the "Divine nature," independent of the promises. He has the testimony of the serpent to that effect: "Ye shall not surely die." Both Mr. Pallette, and his co-worker Mr. Mace, in effect, frequently proclaim to the public, who listen to their teaching: "Ye shall not surely die." It is in the promises made to Abraham, and the Seed of the woman, that God contemplates giving obedient believers the divine and deathless nature.

Indeed, God has in so many words declared, that those who are strangers to these covenants of promise, are in a desperate, destitute, desolate and pitiable condition; having neither hope, God or Christ. See Eph. ii. 11, 12: "That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, (and as a consequence) having no hope, and without God, in the world." Could any one think of a more desolate condition to be in? and yet Mr. Pallette does seek to belittle the necessity of New Testament saints standing on the promises of God. Are not such public preachers dangerous men, who thus teach, and lead their hearers into a condition, where they may be said to be without hope, God, or Christ. They had better become closer students of Holy Scripture, know whereof they affirm, before they attempt to teach the people, lest they teach damnable heresy, which may curse their hearers.

The covenants of promise which inspired Old Testament saints, were made long before the law of Moses came into effect, and was independent of the law, and could not be rendered of none effect, or disannulled by it. See Gal. iii. 17. "The covenant which was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."

According to Mr. Pallette, the promises, as a message of life, ceased with the passing away of the law, being confined to the Old Testament saints.

The promises were not antiquated when Jesus came, indeed in place of that, his mission was to confirm them. See Rom. xv. 8: "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers."

Now, Paul was specially chosen by Jesus, as a minister under the new order of things, and yet he firmly stood upon the promises of God, in which the Old Testament saints trusted. He got arrested for doing so, and at his trial he said: "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made unto our fathers. * * * For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead?"

Mr. Pallette said: "I am sorry for you, if you are standing on the promises, that is where the Old Testament saints stood."

There was a time, when Paul, before his conversion, thought it was the right thing to do, to persecute those who preached this old faith. He said he "was unknown unto the churches of Judea, which were in Christ; but they heard only, that he which persecuted us in times past, now preacheth the faith he once destroyed."

You will perceive that this faith of the Old Testament saints, involved the resurrection of the dead, as Paul said unto king Agrippa: "Why should it be thought a thing incredible, that God should raise the dead?" The fulfillment of these promises upon which we stand, demands a resurrection of the dead. We read, concerning those Old Testament saints: "These all died in faith (not doubting) not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were (not strangers to the covenants of promise Eph. ii. 12, but) strangers and pilgrims on the earth." Being dead, and not having received the things promised, it became a necessity that they should rise from the dead. If the teachings of both Mr. Pallette and Mr. Mace, that man is immortal, and can never die, and that which we call death, is the open door to heaven for the "never-dying spirit," then the talk about the resurrection, is not a necessity, and Paul must have been mistaken when he said: "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised. Then if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." How could they "perish," if man is a never-dying soul? Paul did not seem to know anything about never-dying souls, and hence declared that those who had fallen asleep in Christ, "are perished." "If the dead rise not," and the faith they had in the promises, "is also vain," "if so be that the dead rise not."

Question No. 2.

"If born part divine and part human, in what respect was he lower than the angels?"

In nature he was made like unto his brethren of the Abrahamic family flesh and blood. He was therefore a little lower than the angels in nature for the suffering of death. Had he been made like the angels he could not have tasted death, nor could he have borne our sins in his own body to the tree. The Apostle says, "that inasmuch as the children partook of flesh and blood, he also partook of the same." This statement is sufficient to settle the question of nature.

The supernatural conception and birth of Jesus does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that he was part divine and part human, a mixture of flesh and spirit. I am not unmindful of the fact that certain writers try to force this conclusion upon those who believe the record as given by Matthew and Luke. But we are not inclined to accept of any deduction or conclusion that is not Scriptural. The pure testimony unmixed with vain philosophy will steer one clear of all the sophistry of speculative reasoning. We are content to accept of Jesus as the Son of God, and the Anointed One, because such is the testimony concerning him. We do not concern ourselves as to trinitarianism, or as to the other extreme Unitarianism for neither are expressive of the truth. The latter is a reaction from the former, but both are unscriptural. Our ambition should be to know what saith the record regardless of human speculation. When a man begins to philosophize within himself concerning divine things, he will invariably go astray, ending in confusion, and misapprehension of the truth.

Jesus was a man approved of God by signs and wonders, and in all things well pleasing to the Father. He said himself, "I do always those things that pleaseth the Father," hence he could say, "I and the Father are one." This was something no other man was ever able to say. All others were blemished with infirmities that disfigured them, and made them through weakness come short of that approval bestowed upon Jesus. Had Jesus been the son of Joseph, as some contend, his sinful emotions would have proved destructive of the work and purpose for which he was born. All before him had failed and come short of the glory of God.

Jesus, though a man, differed from other men, in that he did not sin, and therefore did not earn the wages of sin—death. What was the basis of this difference? It was the perfect adaptability for the work before him. "Lo I come to do thy will, O God." "I delight to do thy will." "I came down from heaven to do the will of my Father." What is the cause of this perfect adaption to the purpose for which he came? Organization. "Thy hands have made me, and fashioned me." "My substance was not hid from thee when I was made in secret" ....."In thy book all my members were written." Jehovah's hand was manifest at the fountain of his existence, and so controlled circumstances as to give him an organization that would adapt him to the purpose and give him strength to do what others failed to accomplish through hereditary weakness. Luke makes all this clear and easy of apprehension. "The holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God." The mystery of godliness is here fully revealed—the substance of the covenant made with David "ordered in all things and sure," is brought into the open light, in the actual birth of Jehovah's Son. The beginning of a new creation not out of dust, as in the case of Adam, nor of angelic nature, but of flesh and blood, who "was begotten not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." How any thoughtful mind can satisfactorily account for the exceptional career and character of Jesus on any other ground than as is located in the record above given, it is impossible for me to say, or even to see. There is no reason to think that Joseph though acknowledged to be just, was any better morally than his ancestors, that like them he was the product of human nature with its sin perverted instincts and the attendant infirmities and various weaknesses common to the Adamic race, and for this reason could not give to the world a son perfect in character, absolutely free from sin,—a "lamb unblemished to bear away the sins of his people." But on the other hand when we consider the pre-natal cause—a spiritually minded woman, under a holy influence, overshadowed by Almighty power, as stated by Luke, we can see how her son could be one on whom, and in whom the necessary strength would abide and inhere, to make manifest the way of righteousness, by perfect obedience to the divine will.

Further comment and argument would be apparently superfluous. Certain things are self-evident. Why should we be compelled to defend what ought to be seen at a glance? Mary's son was as declared by Simeon the "salvation prepared of God." This preparation begins at the foundation, the very inciptency of life and being, whether men believe it or not. With divine testimony to start us right, why need any one go astray? Question No. 3 in my next.

Short Sermons. No. 14.

What are we sowing to? Be not deceived, God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. vi. 7, 8. All men and women too, are included in this sowing. And it is safe to say that a large majority are simply sowing to the flesh, and will of the flesh reap corruption. What is it to sow to the flesh? Let Paul tell. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying: but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lust thereof. For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the spirit, the things of the spirit. For to be carnally (or fleshly) minded is death, or leads to death, but to be spiritually minded is life (or leads to life) and peace. To sow to the flesh is simply to live to gratify the natural, fleshly propensities—eat, drink and be merry just as the world does. This is the broad road that leads to death, and tens of thousands walk together there. But oh, how natural and how easy it is to walk on this road, and that is the reason why so many choose this road, no restraints or sacrifices to make, simply take your own course and bulge ahead down to destruction. On the other hand it requires faith and perseverance and lots of it to choose to walk in the narrow way to life, and to walk it. This is the way our Master chose to walk and he was very careful not to step aside out of this narrow way—who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is now set down at the right hand of God. Many start on the narrow way, and run well for a short time, and then their faith falls them like it did Peter of old in the storm, and they turn aside from the Master and begin to go down. The surging crowds on the broad road with their delusive enchantments are much like a cyclone turning and twisting and tearing up and carrying away everything that is loose, and it is no small matter to anchor safely against their force. Like a strong current of deep water it sucks and surges and picks up and carries away all the loose drift wood. And to sow to the spirit is not to follow our own feelings and whims, as that is in reality sowing to the flesh, but it is to study and understand and believe and obey and follow the Spirit's teaching through the Word. To follow the Spirit's teaching through the Word is a safe guard to all who would reap life everlasting. If there is a road leading to eternal life, then its reception in reality is future, which is a Bible doctrine. Let no one try to walk in both roads, for it will be a failure. And to sow to the flesh by minding its dictations and inclinations, and see how near they can walk up to the pit of corruption and destruction is inexcusable folly. An unfading crown of life will richly repay us for all the toil and sacrifice in this life.

Editor Restitution:

I will drop a few lines that the one faith may know I am still battling away for the truth, as I see it and read it. And Philip said, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And the Eunuch said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." Acts viii. 27. Brethren, this seems to me to be a good confession, would that all men believed that one fact, as the Eunuch, there would be less confusion in the churches. It seems to me there could be no doubt, for we have an abundance of proof of the fact, that it was the Seed of the woman, that should possess the gate of the enemy (not of man). The Apostle Matthew speaking of the same thing by the angel, backed up by the prophet Isaiah vii. 14. We find she was to be a virgin. Mary asked the question, "How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?" I do not think she was mistaken in the matter. Luke i. 34. Joseph found her in that condition and thought or minded to put her away privily, he being a just man, but the angel convinced him of the fact. "And he knew her not, till she had brought forth her first-born Son, and called his name Jesus." Matt. i. 25. I am apprised there are some that doubt, which are called, I will not say. It seems to me the Jewish maid has appeared to them. By reading John's testimony in speaking of those that should believe on his name, which was born (or begotten) not of blood, nor the will of the of man, but of God. John i. 12, 13. To deny the conception of Jesus would overthrow the church. And Simon Peter said, "Thou art the Christ, (Anointed) Son of the living God," (note) this was before he was put to death. And Jesus answered and said unto him, "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father, (whose father? Jesus' Father) which is in heaven." Why should any sane person think that Peter would be blessed for not telling the truth? Never, no never. It seems by reading, that Jesus was the Son of God, and after he was baptized God called him his beloved (or obedient) Son. We, the church, have to obey the same, or yield obedience to the divine regulation, which is held up for us. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ (Body) have put on Christ (or anointed)." Then if we are Christ's, or anointed, (not before) our past sins being remitted, we then are adopted sons and daughters. To what? To an heirship with Abraham and the promises God made him. Type Jesus was the adopted son of Joseph without a doubt, and Jesus was the Son of God. With love to all, I submit these few lines. Yours looking for the King of all the earth.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of Kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Whom are We Commanded to Please?

Certainly not ourselves. "Even Christ pleased not himself." He took not the easy path; he toiled on, over rough places and cruel thorns; endured poverty, loss of friends, the taunts of enemies and a shameful death that he might be approved of God.

Are we walking in his steps? I ask the question solemnly of myself, as well as of you, dear ones. How little a thing it takes to make us stumble. A word of blame, a difference of opinion as to how work should move on in the church, a mere trifle, light as air, and the ranks are broke; we are out of step, we are pleasing ourselves! How often, dear ones, has this been my experience; how often has it been yours! Grieved at heart, we have said, "I am going home, I can't stand it," and have even picked up our things and started, only to go back, ashamed and abashed at our foolish sensitiveness and lack of courage to bear. O keep in step with Jesus! To feel that we are marching with him! To be never out of our places, because he was never out of his! To be never out of our places, though everything goes wrong, to be found doing our duty, though others fall, to move calmly on, when others are swept aside or mown down, by the fiery darts of the enemy. Who is strong enough for this? Not one of us, if we lose sight of Jesus. He never went out of the path, not even for Judas. The great men held different views, but it did not matter. He was here to do the Father's will. Simon might scold, but he would please God. The way he took might lower him in the estimation of men, but it would not in the estimation of God. It would all come right by and by.

"Under the cloud and through the sea;" that is the way to Canaan; there is no other. To please the Father we must endure to the end. We sing many a song of triumph, ere we have gone through the fire. Not less of song, do we need, but more of patience to bear.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Very tender was the parting, for dearly did he love them, and dearly they loved him. He was all the world to them, and they were to be left to struggle on as best they could without the comfort of his visible presence. He knew it all, and so he braced, as he embraced, them with his blessing. And how richly that blessing rested! Already they began to feel the power of his resurrection. Already they began to realize the truth of that saying, "It is expedient for you that I go away." Very different feelings now from what they were on that sorrowful night when he ate with them the last passover. Very different from their feelings on that fateful day when he hung upon the cross on Calvary, and he parted with them and his life, together. But now he is "carried up into heaven," and they saw it.—Baptist Teacher.

Plymouth, Indiana, March 20, 1901.

Brother Austin is holding meetings at Burr Oak, Ind. with good success.

Benjamin Harrison—ex-President of the United States died at Indianapolis Ind., March 13, and was buried on last Sunday.

"And if ye call on the Father, who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourn here in fear." 1 Peter i. 17.

In Portugal there is Anti-Jesuit agitation, and a demand that religious societies be abolished, and a new church formed, under Papal authority, but with Portuguese priests.

The English and Russians are in a quarrel over the rights of each to some land in Tien Tsin in China, and the guards are each holding their position waiting action of their governments.

The Chinese differences are dragging on with small indications of final settlement. Some of the powers wanting one thing and some another, and so long as there is no unity of action the wily Chinaman sees it and gets the benefit.

The Pope has plainly told the French government that no negotiations will be entered into so long as the bill to abolish all religious societies in France is up. That must be taken away, and then he is ready to treat to amend the wrongs complained of, otherwise he will leave France to her fate.

The "Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia" under the head of "Origenism," defines it as "The opinions held by, or attributed to the Greek Father Origen of Alexandria," and adds that he was born about A. D. 185, and died about 253. The main characteristics of Origen's teaching were its union of philosophical speculations with Christian doctrine, and its mystical and allegorizing interpretation of Scripture. He insisted especially on the unity of all creation; he regarded Scripture as having generally a threefold sense, literal, moral and mystical; he held the essential divinity and eternity of each person of the Trinity, but maintained that the Son is inferior to the Father, and the Holy Ghost to the Son: he was the first to formulate the orthodox doctrine of eternal generation; he rejected prayer to Christ; though he defended prayer in the name of Christ; he regarded all sin as proceeding from a voluntary and moral self-determination to evil; he held that the human soul of Christ pre-existed with other human souls; that the soul came into the body as a penalty for sin in a pre-existent state; and he believed in a further moral progress and development after the present life, and defended as a probable of opinion the restoration and final salvation of all men and of the fallen angels." Orthodoxy can find the foundation of many of their tenets was laid over two hundred years after Christ, and AFTER the finished work of his first appearance. But all the same, he has to-day more disciples in so-called Christendom than any other man, and a thousand times more than the Christ himself. His Christ is not the Christ of Moses and the prophets; and his human-pre-existent souls were in no way related to the one formed of dust and caused to live by the spirit of the breath of lives.

The Atonement. No. 1.

For Brother B., of Ontario:—

Instead of reviewing the Sermon sent we will state what we believe to be the truth on this subject.

Paul in 1 Cor. ii. 2, says:—"For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus the Anointed, and him crucified." The pre-eminence assigned to this subject calls for serious attention. We have not had the time to devote to it that its importance entitles it to; but lest it should be thought that it had been forgotten, or not deemed a suitable subject, we have concluded to set forth what we understand the purpose of Christ's death to be.

In Romans v 10, 11 the Spirit in Paul says:—"For if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life; and not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement."

The word which is translated "reconcile" in the 10th verse, is translated "atone" in the 11th, pretty conclusive evidence that the meaning is the same. The two words were used by the translators as exactly synonomous, and the word Atonement was printed in the first editions of the English Bible, At-one-ment. It is similarly used in the same manner by other writers in the time of James I., so that its meaning is well established, and as this is the only passage in the New Testament where it occurs, we deem it safe to say that the doctrine of Atonement and the doctrine of Reconciliation are the same thing. And having decided that to be the case the thought comes over us with tremendous force, that it is the supreme, all comprehensive doctrine in Jehovah's scheme for saving. Other truths there are of vast importance, but as it seems to us, only as subsidiary to this; that is they teach us how to become reconciled to God, and help to that end; in fact, all religious truth is important in proportion as it shows sinners the way of salvation, and helps them to walk in it after it is found.

THE NECESSITY

of reconciliation arises from the fact that mankind are sinners. "God made man upright, but he sought out many inventions that ran counter to God's will till there was not a just man upon earth, that doeth (altogether) good, and sinneth not. It is not necessary to explain how this came to pass to our readers; the fact is undeniable, and out of it came the need of redemption. Were there no rebellion or alienation there could be no reconciliation. The whole have no need for a physician. It was the discovery that we were rebellious sinners and that led us to seek to be brought near to him, and to be at peace with him. This is not an abstract subject, but the most practical subject we could entertain. How can the burdened conscience throw off its load? Where can the despairing heart find hope? Where can the weary and heavy laden find rest and peace? How can the sinner be justified, reconciled and restored to God's favor? If we consult those laws of God's government called Nature, we can readily obtain but it is not an answer of peace. Instead of forgiveness, we get "Pay that thou owest." "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? And if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." It is the voice of the stern, unpitying exaction. "Everywhere in Nature we read Law, inexorable, unrelenting, Law. She governs by laws indeed, that are always adapted to the GOOD OF THE WHOLE, but under them the INDIVIDUAL is continually being crushed.

ALIENATED FROM GOD

AN ANSWER,

NATURE NEVER PARDONS.

Her wheels thunder along their iron track; never turning out to spare a helpless mortal who has fallen beneath them. Ignorance of the Law is no excuse. Helplessness is no exemption. There is no appeal to any court of error,—prompt execution follows judgment. The innocent child who touches fire, is burned. The man who in the night walks over a precipice loses his life." If the laws of

GOD'S MORAL GOVERNMENT

were equally unbending there would be no hope for man; his sins would surely find him out some time, and work his destruction. And if we turn to the moral part of our organism the same stern unpitying answer comes to us. Conscience speaks no word of pardon; it gives no assurance that God's favor will be restored to those who have forfeited it, even after years of penitence. If it looks upward it seems to see the Almighty

CLOTHED WITH VENGEANCE;

its own fears read anger in his face,—and drives the uninformed sinner to cruel self-torture and scourging, vainly striving to expiate sin by suffering physically. Sometimes it will deceive one with the hope that by offering payment by building costly churches, or institutions of charity and other works of philanthropy his debts may be discharged; but no satisfaction follows:—Reason, alone, finds no escape from the retributions of a violated law, some higher and better teaching is needed. There is no debt that CANNOT BE PAID.

And the most joyful tidings from God to man conceivable would be that upon conditions which we are able to comply with there is forgiveness with him; so that he will not impute to men their past offenses but will freely justify them and graciously accept them, in the exercise of his infinite mercy. Happily, these are just the tidings we have. He not only sends us word to this effect but gives us encouragement and help in complying with the conditions. More than this, he has who goes before and leads the way we have to walk in,—disarms death of its terrors, reveals the Father to us clothed in tenderness and love, besides giving us glimpses of the kingdom and glory to which he invites us, and beckons us on. In what words can we express our gratitude, except to say, "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift?" He is to every one having a faith that works by love, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption at last; and while on the rugged road of discipline he gives words of blessed healing and heavenly comfort by his holy apostle, saying, in view of anticipated short-comings, "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ the Righteous."

PROVIDED A SAVIOR

We had proceeded but a little way when it became apparent that we could not do any sort of justice to this great subject in one article,—and changed our plan, and merely cleared the way for the subject proper. One thing that induced us to change was, that our literature shows that the subject of the Atonement is understood very imperfectly by many, in our humble opinion, because many of the references to it evidently take their coloring from the erroneous theories prevalent in the world religious. Another reason was that it is not probable that we will ever travel this road again,—and as occasion calls for an explanation of this subject now, will make it as clear as we are able, D. V.

"What We Fear."

"It is not Atheism, so much in the present times as Pantheism. It is not the system which says nothing is true, so much as the system which says everything is true. It is not the system which says there is no Savior, so much as the system that says there are many Saviors, and many ways to peace. It is the system which is so liberal that it dare not say anything is false. It is the system which is that it will allow everything to be true. It is the system which seems ready to honor other religions as well as that of our Lord Jesus Christ; to class them all together, and to hope well of all who profess them. It is the system which will smile complacently on all creeds and systems of religion—the Bible and the Koran—the Hindoo Vedas and the Persian Zendovests—the old wives fables of Rabbinical writers, and the rubbish of Patristic traditions—the Racovian Catechism and the Thirty-nine articles—the Revelations of Emanuel Swedenbourg and the Book of Mormon of John Smith; all are to be listened to; none are to be

SO CHARITABLE,

DENOUNCED AS LIES.

It is the system which is so scrupulous about the feelings of others, that we are never to say they are wrong. It is the system which is so liberal that it calls a man a bigot who dares to say his views are right. This is the system which we desire to testify against and denounce. What is it but a sacrificing of truth upon the altar of a caricature of charity? Beware of it, if you BELIEVE THE BIBLE!

Has the Lord spoken to us in the Bible, or has he not? Has he shown us the way of salvation plainly, or has he not? Let us gird up the loins of our mind and look the matter gravely in the face, and give it an honest answer. Grant for a moment that the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible, is and then it will be seen that sincerity without truth will save no one. From the liberality which says everybody is right,—from the charity which forbids one to say that anybody is wrong,—from the peace which is bought at the expense of truth, may the Lord deliver us!"

GOD'S TRUTH,

How to Find Truth. No. 1.

"Knowing this first that no prophesy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation."

The following is submitted for the careful consideration of all lovers of truth.

We are constantly confronted by the statement, coming from thoughtful, intelligent people (confused) "So many and contradictory interpretations of the Scriptures, and each having some Scripture to support their theory. We know not what to believe, or whether or not to believe anything." And things most vital are involved,—remission of sins, the reception of the Holy Spirit, etc. No wonder this is so, could not easily be otherwise, so long as teachers will continue to formulate theories, built upon isolated passages, separated from their immediate qualifications, and other testimony on the subject. For all can find some passage, when thus taken, that will apparently support their theory, be it what it may. In this manner the establishment of any faith or belief, depends wholly on the "smartness" or shrewdness of the advocate. Can it be that we, the common people, are left thus entirely dependent on the shrewdness of mortal man to determine for us what is truth? God forbid. He never gave to us his Word to be thus manipulated. Do the Scriptures themselves give us no certain, definite rule whereby we may determine for ourselves as to truth? I answer they most assuredly do. How, do you ask? By simply paying heed to what is contained in our text—"Knowing this first that no prophecy of the Scripture is of (any) private interpretation." (R. V. leaves out the word any). That all prophecy of Scripture is not of its own solution, (Diaglott). "Private," means separate, unconnected with others. (Webster).

In a judicial court the facts in the case are not determined by part or even all that one witness may say exclusive of other witnesses, but by the harmony of the testimony of all the witnesses. Perhaps neither one stated all the facts, but taken together the facts are established. In like manner God's truth pertaining to us in our age and times may and can be determined definitely. God has selected and duly qualified with the requisite knowledge through Holy Spirit, his own witnesses to testify to us, (notwithstanding the many self-constituted witnesses). What his witnesses testify is truth. Yet of them one alone may not and usually does not give all the facts pertaining to a given subject, yet their united testimony does, because of additional facts, making clear any seeming ambiguity in the statements of the others, and thus complete unanimity and harmony is obtained, and the facts established. Just so long as we find our comprehension of any statement or passage to be in conflict with other passages, we may be sure we have not yet apprehended all the evidence in the case. The Word of God is not yea, yea, and nay, nay. His witnesses are his mouth-piece to us, collectively taken, are in perfect agreement.

The great commission given by our Lord after his resurrection will afford a good illustration. There are four witnesses as to what it contained, viz: Matt. xxiii. 19, 20; Mark xvi. 15, 16; Luke xxiv. 47-49; John xx. 21-23. Each giving part of what he said, but neither giving all. Mark states, "And he said unto them, go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." This taken alone would justify the conclusion, that this much and no more required to be taught. Without further testimony we would be justified in the conclusion that they were unnecessary. But Luke adds, "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem." John also testifies as to their remitting sins, leaving out the how (by teaching them) as given by Luke.

All, unless it be Matthew, speak of the promise of the Holy Spirit power to be given them. But Luke only as to when, where and for what purpose. Taking John's testimony separate and alone, some (strange to say) have arrived to the conclusion, from what John states immediately following, "As my Father hath sent me so send I you, He breathed on (them) or he breathed on saying to them, Receive ye the Holy Spirit," (Diaglott) that therefore he breathed it into them then and there regardless of Luke's specific statement to the contrary. "Behold I send the promise.... but tarry ye in Jerusalem until"..... Luke xxiv. 49. Also in Acts i. 4. "But wait for the promise of the Father." They did wait and it so came. Acts ii. In like manner and with the same logic, others come to the conclusion, because John said "Whosoever sins ye remit," etc., that therefore they then and there received power to remit the sins of others without waiting the slow process of teaching them the law of remissions as stated by Luke (this latter is simply Romanism, or if not entirely, so it is then Protestantism Romanized.)

The fact is John's testimony says not a word as to when, where or how they should receive the Spirit, nor how (by what means they could remit sins) nor when or where they should commence. But Luke's testimony is very specific as to all this in every particular, and further, that they fully complied as to time and place of beginning the work, after being endued, and that they did teach and practice the law of remission. Acts ii. 38. Therefore instead of confliction, when taken all together we have perfect unity and complete harmony.

Will conclude by article No. 2 to follow.

Dear Restitution:

On Feb. 23 we had the opportunity of getting to Cleveland, it being our greatest desire, as long as it is our nearest place of worship. We were met at the station by Bro. Tomlinson, who took us to his home where we received a hearty welcome. We remained there over night. In the morning we all went to Sabbath school, which we enjoyed very much, every one taking such an interest in the parts laid out to them. After Sabbath school preaching at 10:30 by Bro. M. Joblin, which we greatly enjoyed, it being the first sermon mother has had the privilege of listening to for so many years, and the first I had ever heard. After the services I was baptized and partook of the Lord's Supper with the brethren and sisters, which makes us one in Christ Jesus. I now ask an interest in all your prayers that I may prove faithful to the end. After services were over we had the privilege of meeting all the brothers and sisters of like precious faith and received a hearty welcome from all. We were then taken by Brother and Sister Joblin, where another hearty welcome awaited us by them and a sister of like precious faith (Miss Bradshaw), who is visiting from Alliance. But the time comes when we all must part. We were very sorry we could not be with the brothers and sisters for evening services. When we were ready to go Bro. Tomlinson came and took us back to the station, where we went on our way rejoicing that we had been permitted to meet with the good brothers and sisters, and that much good had been accomplished. Again asking an interest in all your prayers we remain your sisters in like precious faith.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest [illegible] and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 280 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Poetry.

The Coming Reign.

O we dream of a day that is nearing,
A day of sweet promise and trust,
When the captive and long-trodden city
Of Zion shall wake from the dust;
When Salem in beautiful garments
Shall shake off her burden of pain,
And the north and the south without money
Shall loosen her captives again.

When the hoped for Messiah of Ages
Shall bring the bright mansions adown,
And shall take as a gift from the Father,
Of earth's mighty kingdoms the crown,
When the fierce haughty rulers of nations
To him in submission shall bow,
And the cruel, cold steel of the warrior,
Be changed for the hook and the plow.

When the saints in their raiment of glory,
Shall sit with the Son on his throne,
And shall make to all nations and kindreds
The blessing of Abrahm known;
When the band of the harpers shall praise him
With song that no other may learn,
And the palm-bearing ones, give their service
Wherever his footsteps may turn.

O we dream of a day that is nearing,
A day of sweet promise and trust,
When the earth in her vestments of beauty
Shall be the bright home of the just.
When forgotten the day of our trouble,
The tears shall be wiped from our face,
And the sorrow and crying and anguish
Have never in Eden a place.

Australian Letter. No. 7.

After the American Colonies had thrown off their allegiance to England convicts could no longer be sent to Virginia. The English prisons were overflowing, for it will be borne in mind that in those days many people were imprisoned and transported for very trivial offenses. In this emergency attention was directed to Australia as a desirable place of banishment, owing to its great distance and the supposed fertility of the soil.

In 1787 Viscount Sydney, Secretary of State for the Colonies in Pitts Cabinet selected Captain Arthur Philip as Governor and sent him with a fleet of eleven vessels, in all, to found a colony in New South Wales. Of the one thousand persons comprising this company 756 were prisoners, 192 of whom were women.

The first half century of Australian history is the record of contests between the free settlers and convicts. The struggle from starvation and resistance to tyranical governors, and fighting the liquor traffic.

The first attempt toward free institutions was a war waged for the freedom of the press. The first representative government was established in 1824 by the appointment of an executive council of seven nominated by the Governor. Before this time the will of the Governor had been absolute except as he had been held in check through fear of public opinion. Not until this year had there been trial by jury, except military jurors.

In 1828 the Legislative Council was enlarged from seven to fifteen, as a reflex influence of the arbitrary conduct of the Governor.

Representative institutions were extended to the colony by an Imperial Act of 1842, which provided for the establishment of a new Legislative Council, consisting of 36 members, 24 of whom were elected and 12 were Crown nominees.

In virtue of this act the first representative Legislature of New South Wales met August 1st, 1843.

The agitation continued owing to a dislike to the councillors appointed by the Crown until in 1851 they were given Responsible Government.

The British Government instructed each of the legislative councils of the different colonies to draw up the form of constitution they deemed most suitable for their respective requirements.

The Sydney Council decided in favor of the English system of government by two houses, requesting further that the colony should be granted responsible government so that those who controlled the affairs of the country should in future be chosen by parliament to advise the governor, and should be liable to be replaced when their policy was not in harmony with the wishes of parliament.

Previously to responsible government the sovereign acting through the governor, exercised almost despotic power, and personal liberty and independence were in no small degree in the governor's hands.

The Draft Constitution Act which had been agreed to by the legislative council in Sydney was sent to England for the sanction of the Imperial Parliament. It was agreed to and the new constitution was inaugurated on the 19th of December 1855. The first Parliament under responsible government met in 1856.

Since responsible government also the representative of the Queen, although he reigns has ceased to govern.

He follows strictly the advice of his ministers, except in a few matters of Imperial concern.

There are but few differences in the matter of government in the younger colonies.

Victoria was granted responsible government in 1855.

The upper house is elective under the Victorian Constitution.

Queensland was not separated from New South Wales until 1859. She adopted a constitution similar to the mother colony, two houses of parliament, a council and assembly.

West Australia was a branch convict settlement and was proclaimed a British Colony in 1829.

In 1870 West Australia ceased to be a crown colony, and responsible government was introduced in 1890.

South Australia was granted responsible government in 1856. Its distinguishing features are the Real Property Act of 1858 and the successful operation of Womanhood Suffrage.

Tasmania also received responsible government in 1856.

FEDERATED AUSTRALIA.

Australia being so distant and until the past few years so entirely removed from our practical life, it was known only as the fabled land of the "Golden Fleece." It furnished an abundant field for writers of sensational romance in the bloody deeds of the bushrangers and provided a literary dumping ground for the Micawbers who realized here the dream of a lifetime that something would "turn up."

Perhaps the majority of Americans in thinking of Australia, naturally, have considered it as a whole and not as comprised of five separate and distinct colonies each having its own government and each directly responsible to the English Crown.

In a measure the conditions are analogous to the formation of our own colonies into a great nation.

The settlement and growth of these southern colonies followed much the same principles of development. The causes which led to the original settlement were somewhat different, but the result very similar.

The union of our colonies into one Federal Government was brought about as the result of a long and bloody Revolution, by which they severed entirely the bonds which connected them with the Mother Country.

The Federation of Australia was accomplished by peaceable negotiations. She still maintains a connecting link with the Crown. The five Continental Colonies, New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia and West Australia with the colony on the Island of Tasmania agreed to unite under one general government.

This agreement culminated in the "Federation Act" which was passed by the English Parliament and signed by the Queen.

The colonial governments were very similar, all being modeled after the English forms. Slight innovations were introduced to meet the demands or whims of the specific colony, or the interest of the legislators.

The New South Wales Government comprises two main departments, the Executive and Legislative Establishments. The Judicial being under the Minister for Justice, one of the members of the Governor's Cabinet, which is styled Executive Council, and is composed of a President (who is the Governor appointed by the Queen.) Vice President. Colonial Secretary, Premier and Colonial Treasurer. Attorney General. Secretary for Lands. Secretary for Public Works. Minister of Public Instruction. Minister for Justice. Secretary for Mines and Agriculture. Postmaster General. Clerk of the Council.

The Legislative Council comprises a President. Chairman of Committees. Clerk of Parliaments. Clerk Assistant. First Clerk and Clerk of Select Committees. Usher of the Black Rod and the Members. This comprises the Upper House of Parliament.

The Lower House or Legislative Assembly is composed of Speaker. Chairman of Committees. Clerk of Assembly. Clerk Assistant. Second Clerk Assistant and Members. There are seventy-five members of the Council and one hundred and twenty-five of the Assembly.

There is agitation now on the subject of abolishing the Council under Federal Government in order to reduce expenses. It is not likely to be accomplished.

The Commonwealth of Australia which came into existence on the 1st of Jan. 1901, when Earl Hopetown took the oath of office as Governor General, comprises the Six Colonies, now called States.

"The Legislative power of the Commonwealth is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the King (represented by a Governor General,) a Senate, and a House of Representatives. The Senate is to be composed of Six Senators for each State. The House of Representatives is to be composed of members directly chosen by the people of the Commonwealth, and the number of members is to be, as nearly as practicable, twice the number of Senators.

The number of Representatives is apportioned to each State on the basis of population. Each Senator and each member of the House of Representatives is to receive £400 per annum. The Federal Parliament is to have power to make laws with respect to trade and commerce: taxation; postal and telegraphic services; naval and military defence; light-houses, astronomical and meteorological observations; quarantine, census, and statistics, currency, coinage, banking, insurance, weights and measures, bills of exchange and promissory notes, bankruptcy, copyrights, patents of inventions and trade marks, naturalization and aliens, marriage and divorce, immigration.

On a date or dates to be proclaimed, the following departments of the public service in each State are to be transferred to the Commonwealth. Posts, telegraphs and telephones; naval and military defence; light-houses etc., and quarantine; but the departments of Customs and Excise are immediately transferred to the Commonwealth on its establishment.

A Federal Executive Council is to be chosen by the Governor-General, and from these the Governor-General will appoint officers to administer such departments of State as the Governor General in Council may establish. These officers are to be the King's Ministers of State, and are not to exceed seven in number."

The Governor-General is also Commander-in-Chief. In this military department he has a military Secretary, an Aide-de Camp, and Extra-Aide-de-Camp. He also has a Private Secretary and Assistant Secretary.

Soon after his arrival, Lord Hopetown selected Sir William Lyne, Premier of New South Wales to form a Ministry. Sir William could not gain the co-operation of the Premiers of the other colonies and was obliged to decline the honor.

Mr. Barton was then selected. This choice met with general approval as Mr. Barton is perhaps the most popular man in Australia, and since the death of Sir Henry Parks, the "Father of Federation," has done more toward its success than any other man. He is Prime Minister or Federal Premier.

The seven departments of State established and the Ministers who represent them are as follows:—

The Department of External Affairs,—the Right Honorable Edward Barton, P. C. New South Wales.

The Attorney General's Department—The Honorable Alfred Deakin, Victoria.

The Department of Home Affairs,—The Honorable Sir William Lyne, K. C. M. G. New South Wales.

The Department of the Treasury,—The Right Honorable Sir Geo. Turner, P. C., K. C. M. G. Victoria.

The Department of Trade and Customs, The Right Honorable Charles Cameron Kingston, P. C. South Australia.

The Department of Defence,—The Honorable Sir James Robert Dickson, K. C. M. G. Queensland.

The Postmaster General's Department,—The Right Honorable Sir John Forrest, P. C., G. C. M. G. Western Australia.

Mr. R. E. O'Connor and Mr. N. E. Lewis are selected as Executive Ministers without portfolios. Mr. O'Connor was added to the Ministry on account of his statesmanship, Mr. Lewis in order to give Tasmania some representation.

MRS. PHEBE THOMPSON-WILLEY.

Genesis. Chap. 20.

1. And Habraam moved from there into the land at the southwest, and took up his abode between Kadesa and Sour, and sojourned in Gerara.

2. And Habraam said concerning Sarra his wife that she was his sister. For he was afraid to say, She is my wife, lest the prominent men of the city should kill him for her sake; and Abimeleck king of Gerara sent and took Sarra.

3. And God came in unto Abimeleck in sleep by night and said, Lo, thou art condemned to die for the woman whom thou hast taken; for she hath cohabited with a husband.

4. But Abimelech had not touched her, and he said, O Lord, Thou wilt not destroy an ignorant and justified nation, wilt thou?

5. Did he not say unto me, She is my sister? And did not she say unto me, He is my brother? With a clean heart and with righteousness of hands did I do this.

6. And God said unto him in sleep, I also know that thou didst do this with a clean heart, and I have spared thee from sloning against me. For this reason I did not allow thee to touch her.

7. And now return the woman to the man because he is a prophet and he will offer votive-prayer for thee and thou wilt live; but if thou dost not return her, know that thou wilt die and all thine.

8. And Abimelech arose at dawn and called all his house-men, and talked in their ears all these oracular words; and all the men were exceedingly afraid.

9. And Abimelech called Habraam and said unto him. Why hast thou done this unto us? Had we sinned at all against thee, that thou hast brought upon me and upon my kingdom a great sin? A deed that no one will do thou hast done unto me.

10. And Abimelech said unto Habraam, Why didst thou knowingly do this?

11. And Habraam said, Because said I, surely there is no respect for God in this place, and they will kill me for my wife's sake.

12. And because she is truly my sister on my father's side, but not on the mother's side. And she became my wife.

13. And it came to pass, when God led me out of the house of my father, that I also said unto her, Do thou this act of righteousness unto me. In every place where we shall have gone in, there do thou say, He is my brother.

14. And Abimelech took a thousand double drachmas and sheep and yearling-bullocks and men-servants and women servants, and gave them to Habraam, and gave him back Sarra his wife.

15. And Abimelech said unto Habraam, Lo, my land is before thee. Dwell wherever it pleaseth thee.

16. And unto Sarra he said, Lo, I have given a thousand double drachmas to thy brother. These shall be for thee and all thy women with thee for the honor of thy face, and mayest thou become truthful in all respects.

17 And Habraam offered votive-prayer unto God and God healed Abimelech and his wife and his house-maids and they brought forth.

18. Because the Lord had closed every womb in the household of Abimelech from the outside on account of Sarra the wife of Habraam.

COMMENT.

In the 1st verse R. V. "Gerar" should be "Gerara."

In the 2nd verse R. V. omits the part of the verse giving the reason why Habraam did as he did.

In the 3rd verse R. V. substitutes the word "dream" for the word "sleep" and translates "condemned to die" by "thou art but a dead man" and changes the statement though not the sense of the last clause.

In the 4th verse R. V. says "had not come near her." Text says "had not touched her." We know from the context that he had come near her. Also substitutes "a righteous nation" for "an ignorant and justified nation"—a very different thought.

In the 5th verse R. V. substitutes "integrity of heart" for "a clean heart" and "innocence" for "righteousness."

In the 6th verse makes the same changes of statement as above and omits God's reason for "sparing" and "withholding him to commit the sin of "touching her."

The 7th verse is substantially correct.

The 8th verse likewise.

In the 9th verse the question is not "what" but "why."

In the 10th verse R. V. "What sawest thou" not in the text but another thought entirely.

In the 11th verse R. V. has "fear" instead of "respect."

In the 18th R. V. has "caused to wander" instead of "led." Habraam wasn't wandering according to the record, but was being accurately led by God "to the city which hath the foundations," etc.

And again "this kindness" R. V. is "this act of righteousness" in the text.

In the 14th verse R. V. omits entirely "a thousand double drachmas" a part of the gift of Abimelech to Habraam.

In the 16th verse R. V. says the "thousand of silver" "is for thee a covering of the eyes to all that are with thee and in respect of all thou art righted." There is no such veiled insinuation as this in the text, an insinuation that would have been an insult to any virtuous woman. On the other hand what he does say is a compliment and a tribute to her beauty and the honor she has conferred on him; and there is a well turned rebuke in the last clause which reads "And become truthful in all respects."

In 18th verse R. V. omits "from the outside."

Hereafter I shall be more general in my comments. I have been thus far specific to show how differently the C. V. and R. V. have rendered the text or some text, and to demonstrate the ignorance and absurdity of the claims that have been so long made for this sort of scholarship.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Jesus is Coming Again.

As I was looking over some old books the other day, I came to an old song book, and opening it my eyes fell on this piece, "Jesus is Coming Again." The last verse accords so well with what the world is today.

"Nations are angry, by this we do know,
Jesus is coming again;
Knowledge increases, men run to and fro,
Jesus is coming again."

How true it is, Jesus is coming again. We do not realize, brethren, how near he is, he is even at the door. The signs that were to transpire in the last days have nearly all been fulfilled. He is coming soon and sure. He is coming to judge the quick and the dead. The dead in Christ shall rise first, afterward they that are alive at his coming. All will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and be caught up in the air to meet our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It behoves us, brethren, to live such lives here in this wicked world, that others seeing our good works may glorify our Father which is in heaven. That we may be one of the overcomers, and receive a crown of righteousness, which the righteous Judge shall give at his coming, and bask in the sunlight of an eternal day. We know of a surety, Jesus is coming again. For he has said, "If I go away, I will come again and receive you unto myself." We have his own blessed Word that he is coming again, and also the word of the holy angels, for in Acts i. 9, 10, 11, we read, "And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

What a blessed promise, Jesus is coming again. This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner. A cloud received him out of their sight and we read that he is coming the second time in the clouds, with great glory, and all the holy angels with him. That is the glorious time we are looking forward to, and striving to fit our bodies as the temple of the living God. Oh, how terrible it would be to fail to live a Christian life, to fail to put on the whole armor of God, and to hear him say, "Depart from me, I never knew you;" instead of "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundations of the world."

Brothers and sisters, I want to be one that will inherit the kingdom, but to do so, we have to search the Scriptures daily, for they are they which testify of me. Not only search them, but live up to the light we gain thereby, and then our salvation is sure. And let us ever remember that Jesus is coming again; let us be ready to go out to meet him; let us get into the ark of safety, and become one of the little band that is watching for his appearance, and praying come, Lord Jesus and come quickly.

Brother and Sister Woodward are with us once more; we never expected to see them in this far distant land, but all things work to the interest of those who serve the Lord. Much good is being done by them. Fifteen came forward at Wenatchee, and ten have been baptized here and two more came forward.. Meetings will still continue here for a few days. Bro. Woodward's health is better since he came to this state, it agrees with him here. He has not missed an appointment, and he has been here six weeks. It is grand to see so many leaving the world, and coming forward to serve our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Your Brother in like precious faith,
CLEO E. BARNHILL.

In Memoriam.

Iley Maria Elton was born in East Cleveland township, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, August 30, 1857. In the spring of 1860 her parents moved to what was then called Frogsville, or the McIlrath settlement, where they still reside, now Collinwood village and township. Iley was educated in our common schools, and for the higher grades she went to the Shaw Academy in Collamer, generally "footing" it there and back.

On December 28, 1881, she was married to Mr. Sydney P. Smith, her father, Mr. Elton officiating.

In June, 1882, her husband and she went west to Wyoming, where they remained till 1893, when they returned to Ohio, residing some time in Cleveland, but for nearly two years their home was with her parents in Collinwood.

She was not very robust in health, and for several weeks she was a very great sufferer, till at last, January 17, 1901, she fell asleep in Jesus, in the city of Cleveland. The funeral was held from the home of her sister, Mrs. F. Hornbuckle, from whence she was borne to Lake View cemetery.

She has left to mourn for her a husband, father and mother, one brother and three sisters, besides other relatives and all who knew her.

In religion she and all the members of the family were members of the Church of God, meeting in Cleveland. They do not hold the doctrine of the immortality of the soul of all men, but that the righteous only will be made immortal by the Lord Jesus at his coming, eternal life being the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. "We believe that God has given unto us eternal life, that this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."—Collinwood News.

The Church-Tramp.

"What church do you attend?" was once asked of a bright young fellow, doing business in one of our large cities.

"Oh, I just run around," he answered, gaily. "I don't understand the difference between the churches; in fact, there is a great in the Bible itself that I don't understand, and until I do, of course I can't join any church."

"How many hours a day do you spend studying this matter?" asked his questioner.

"Hours?" he repeated in surprise.

"Well, then, minutes?"

The young man was dumb.

"Ah," said his companion, with patient sadness, "not one! If you thought a knowledge of geology necessary to your success in life, or astronomy, or short-hand, you would not think of spending less than one hour a day in its study, perhaps two, perhaps three; and you would not expect to know or understand it without that exertion. But the knowledge of God, of Jesus Christ, of salvation—the highest and deepest of all knowledge—you sit around and wait for, as if it would come like a flash of lightning."

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Our Letter Drawer.

Dear brothers and sisters of the household of faith:

I feel this morning like joining in your love feast. I am surrounded by kind friends and those that are trying to follow the Master, and yet I seldom see one of like precious faith aside from my own family, and I sometimes feel as though we were alone in the world. Yet these days of loneliness and trial have brought me very near to the Master, and I have been able to say in some very hard trials, "Thy will, O Lord, not mine, be done." I am trying to let my light shine and stand by God's Word, even if by so doing I lose my last friend. Pray for me and mine that we may be faithful and gain an entrance into that everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Your sister in the faith,

A. M. SIPLE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I write you, as I wish to have a part in the love feast although I am late, for I cannot think of doing without the dear paper as long as the Lord blesses me with means to pay for it; my father took it in all its different names, it was his delight to read it. Since his death I have taken it; its weekly visits have been a great source of comfort to me in all my lonely hours of sorrow and trouble. I always find something that cheers me on to battle with all the battles of this transitory life. Our Saviour is still spared while others are dying all around us. I was called to the funeral of my dear brother, who died the 21st of Feb., after an illness of one short week. What frail, mortal dying worms of the dust we are; how it stands us in hand to be ready and waiting for whatever awaits us. Oh, how I long for the time to come when sickness, sorrow, pain and death will be done away. We sorrow not as those which have no hope, for we have the promise in his holy Word, that all those that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, then we will meet all our dear ones that have gone before; then they will come forth in immortal beauty to die no more. O blessed thought, to meet to part no more. How it cheers my heart to read the letters from all the loved ones of like precious faith. How I would like to hear a gospel sermon once more, have not heard one since dear Brother Zilmer was here two years ago. How I would like to hear him again. I am always pleased to read something from him in our dear paper. I hope he may be the means of doing much good and may he be blessed in all his undertakings, as far as he goes in accordance with God's will, and his dear family. I feel very sorry to see that so many are behind in their subscriptions. We who profess to be looking for the Lord's coming should be up and doing our duty, for fear they may be found like the foolish virgins whose lamps have gone out; may we be like the wise virgins and ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb, there to go out no more, and walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem and bask in the sunbeams of an endless day. The signs of the times betoken his coming near; may we be on the watch tower and not sleeping at our posts, that that day overtake us as a thief in the night, but be ready and waiting for the Bridegroom's call. I beg an interest in all your prayers, that I may be found faithful and meet you all in that blissful home prepared for all God's dear children is the prayer of your sister in Christ. I hope to be able to go home soon.

MRS. MAGGIE C. FAREWELL.

Brother Underwood;

I wish to express my gratitude for sending me THE RESTITUTION so long free. I am not able to subscribe for it, you will have to stop the paper if the funds are such that you cannot send it free; it is all the preacher we have since Brother Williams' death. Sister Carrie has left the city. We have formerly met at her house for Bible study and the breaking of bread. The few that were here are scattered. I am longing and looking for the dear Lord from heaven to come. It seems like the signs of his coming are not in the far off distance. I want my lamp to be trimmed and burning. I love to read the letters from the brethren and sisters. I praise God that through Jesus Christ I was brought into the light, no immortality out of Christ. The Word of God has been opened to my mind wonderfully; my heart melts in love and tenderness before him for his wonderful works to the children of men. Pray for the isolated ones. Yours in the one hope of the gospel.

MRS. H. S. DRESSER.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Perfect Peace.

Oh, child of God, be still.
Let the past be what it may;
Live now as for the Father's will,
And him obey.

And let the tumult and the rush,
And the doubts and questionerness;
Give God thy care—and know the hush
Of perfect peace.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

"Dear Bro. Turney: I forward the foregoing report of our meeting, hoping you will give it publicity. The doctrine on this issue laid by us we feel able to prove was identical with what Dr. Thomas believed for some time before his death. The Doctor told me that if he lived to go over to England, and to get control of Roberts' paper he would teach it regardless of seeming self-contradictions."

S. W. COFFMAN.

The meeting here referred to was a gathering of representatives of Ecclesias from various states, held at Adeline, Ogle County, Illinois, in June, 1875. It extended over part of three days. The report says that "the following Ecclesias were represented, either in person or by letter, viz:—Detroit, Mich., Milwaukee, Wis.; Chicago, Ill.; State Centre, Iowa; Boston, Mass.; and Worcester, Mass. Letters were also received from the following brethren and sister."....

On the call of the chairman (J. D. Benedict of Bristol, Wis.) Bro. S. W. Coffman stated the object of the meeting as follows:

In consequence of misunderstandings and divisions of Ecclesias on the subject of the 'doctrine of Christ,' more especially relating to the substantial relation of the only begotten Son of God to the Father, the Ogle Co., Ecclesia thought it well to invite representatives from the several American Ecclesias, to meet together and present their views to one another on this important question, for their mutual edification, so that any differences of understanding found to exist, might, if possible, be harmonized," etc.

The report in the Lamp extends to 23 columns, the Editor's remarks occupying 2 columns besides. The drift of the speaking was to maintain the truth that Jesus was "the only begotten Son of God" in opposition to the idea held by some that this was an act of creation. One speaker (Bro. James Donaldson of Detroit, Mich.) said, "Over 30 times in the New Testament is Jesus declared to be the Son of God. Four times the only begotten Son of God; and yet men professing a love for the simplicity that is in Christ Jesus, pervert the plain teaching of Scripture by contending that he was a son of the substance of Mary by creative power, as was Adam of dust."

The Editor of the Lamp remarks, "The key-note of the Adeline meeting was the divine Sonship of the Christ. No more worthy or important topic could have engaged the intellect and affections of the persons assembled, etc.....We might not, judging from the report, have been able to acquiesce in all that transpired. There are several texts of Scripture misapplied, some probably through following the English translation, which is incorrect..... At another time we may perhaps deal with the defects alluded to."....

The impression apt to be received by an intelligent and impartial reader seems to have been fitly expressed in a letter from a brother (C. Askew.) He says, "I am surprised that any one professing to believe the testimony should have any doubt as to the fact of Jesus being 'the only begotten Son of God.'" The fact is that no speaker who made the allegation referred to named any brother who had in so many words denied the doctrine maintained, or any Ecclesia where such denial was tolerated. The "surprise" becomes intensified when it seemed necessary to bring a company of men such long distances to give expression to their convictions on such a matter. From anything the writer has observed on this point it is only in a very qualified manner that any one has spoken of the birth of our Lord as in some way implying an act of creative power.

One speaker, the representative from Detroit, Mich. (Bro. James Donaldson) put the matter in this way which seems to bear out what the writer of this has suggested. He says, "We have been called together in view of the divisions and strife among Christadelphians on the Sonship of Jesus the Christ..... We have found over 30 proofs that Jesus is the Son of God, and yet in the face of all this testimony it is boldly asserted by teachers among us that Jesus was a created son.....The time is come for a united defence of the Scripture doctrine that Jesus is the only begotten Son of God," etc.....

A letter which was received after the meeting was over, but which was printed along with the report, (from W. A. Harris, Chicago), contains some remarks which have a curious bearing on the "gladiatorism" so much practised among Christadelphians on this very subject. He says, "The occupation of dispersing 'milk' to 'babes,' is undoubtedly an important and essential feature of the truth, and we find this is more actively pursued on the other side of the Atlantic than on this, for very obvious reasons. The same may also be said of direct onslaughts made on the camp of Satan as embodied in the superstitions of the State and dissenting establishments. This is most zealously followed up, and pugilistic combativeness in an intellectual form finds full play in the demolishing of pagan and papal dogmas, which fall an easy prey to those who wield the Sword of the Spirit.

"The question arises before us, are these things the end and sole object of the saints' warfare in view of the apostolic injunction to 'grow in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ'?.....Does this advanced knowledge consist in the art of public speaking to the edification of the multitude, or in the ability to write in elegant phrases for the benefit of the brotherhood, desirable as both these accomplishments may be?

"Your assembly is a negative answer to these questions, and is for a higher purpose, and though your numbers may not be large, you are met with the laudable and exalted desire to know God's Son more perfectly."....

This brother seems to imagine that on the British side of the Atlantic all the "pugilistic combativeness" is expended on outsiders—"direct onslaughts on the camp of Satan," etc. He seems to have forgotten that British Christadelphian literature discloses the fact that for now 36 years pugilism has to a large extent been exercised by the Christadelphians themselves against each other. Is it not an example of this we behold in the Adeline meeting? Is it not there distinctly stated, as already quoted, that certain things "boldly asserted by teachers among us" was the occasion of the gathering, "for a united defence of the Scriptural doctrine," and that against "some Christadelphians," their fellow disciples.

It may be mentioned that most of the addresses dealt at length with what some called the "physiological" aspect of the narrative concerning the birth of our Lord as recorded in Matthew and Luke's gospels. In connection with this the terms "substance" and "substantial" are brought into recognition. Bro. S. W. Coffman says, "It has now become a necessity to use the term 'substance' in order to show our well-meaning friends their mistake in supposing that the 'only begotten Son of God' pre-existed merely in the mind or purpose of his Father, afterwards to be created from Mary's substance, and officially endowed with power."

A communication from the Ecclesia at Worcester, Mass. was read. It consisted of 15 numbered paragraphs. In Par. IX. referring to our Lord it is said, "he declares 'I and my Father are one.' One what? In the language of Moses, one Yahweh, whom alone they could worship.

In Par. X. it is said "Paul asserts that although he was 'rich,' yet he became 'poor' that through his poverty, we might be made rich. Par. XI. in continuation, "The Antecedent he was Yahwah, who communicated with Moses at the bush."....

In his address, Bro. S. W. Coffman says, "Our position cannot be construed into Trinitarianism, Unitarianism, or Mere-Manism. Our Savior is Jehovah and none else, and though he was manifested in flesh, he was none the less Jehovah, but as the Apostle teaches, 'God manifested in the flesh' The only begotten Son of God who declares, 'I and my Father are one.'"

From what has been narrated in these articles regarding the discussion of "God manifestation" by the Christadelphian brotherhood, it is evident that the Editor of the Christadelphian was right when he characterized the affair as a "subtle controversy." This was in 1873. But Dr. Thomas had previously classed it with "metaphysics." Notwithstanding this it would appear that neither of these leaders gave effect to this acknowledgement in their own subsequent action in the matter. The Doctor's project of coming to England, and, as controller of the Christadelphian for the purpose of teaching his latest view of the subject, is proof of this on his part. This was in evident opposition to what had been the doctrine maintained in that magazine. It certainly betokens a curious psychological phenomenon. The old "gladiatorism" on what must have proved a forlorn hope. Not an "onslaught on the camp of Satan" in preaching, the "gospel of the kingdom," or even a fresh exposition of the fulfilment of prophecy, but a contention in favor of a particular phase of opinion on a subject which had been regarded by himself as "metaphysics," and by Bro. Roberts as a "subtle controversy."

The expression "seeming self-contradictions" would appear to indicate that anything like real change of mind on the part of the Doctor might turn out to be only in seeming. This is only part of the "subtlety" and "metaphysics" which belong to the subject.

(To be continued.)

Final Salvation of All Men.

A Brother writes:—

"There seems to be but one point that troubles you in relation to the redemption of the race; and that is the sin against the Holy Ghost. Will you allow me to give you a little light on that point?

First, that language was spoken to the Jewish Sanhedrim only. When Jesus came up out of the water, the Holy Ghost descended from heaven in a bodily shape like a dove; and a voice came also, saying, "This is my beloved Son; hear ye him." They refused to hear him after hearing ocular demonstration as to who he was. It was the only time the Holy Spirit was ever seen in a bodily shape, and an audible voice from heaven directed to any people to hear God's Son. This they refused to do; and this was the sin against the Holy Ghost. No other people ever had a chance to commit that sin; and Paul wrote to the Hebrews about it and to no one else.

Now mark! It was the law age yet; and to the Jew it was today; and the gospel was not given to the Gentiles until the day of Pentecost, (or after) It is still Gentile age or world. Blindness still rests on the Jewish world, and will until the Gentile world ends; then the Deliverer will come out of Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is God's Covenant unto them when he takes away their sins; and then all Israel will be saved; for God hath concluded all under sin that he may have mercy on all. O, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God. For of him and through him are all things; to whom be glory in all ages, Amen. Signed in love. F.

REPLY.

It becomes me, and all others, to be thankful for any honest attempt to give us light on the Scriptures of truth. I thank friend F. for his work of love. Before replying directly a few mistakes in his statements must be corrected.

1st. If there was a bodily shape of the Holy Spirit, there is no evidence in the record that the Sanhedrim saw it, or any other person except John the Baptist. The sight was given him as the proof of the Messiaship of the person to be manifested.

2nd. The voice which came from heaven, at that time, said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," but did not say, "Hear ye him." This command was given only to Peter, James, and John, out of the cloud on the Mount of Transfiguration, Matt. xvii. 5; Mark ix. 7. The command was not addressed to the Sanhedrim, as my friend supposes; no ocular demonstration was given to them at Jesus baptism.

3rd. The discourse of Jesus in relation to the sin against the Holy Ghost does not appear to have been addressed to the Jewish Sanhedrim at all. It was a general discourse though occasioned by some of the scribes and pharisees accusing him of casting out demons by the prince of demons: or in other words doing it in league with an evil power. There seems no more reason for confining that discourse to the Jews than any other of Jesus' instructions about sin. To my mind it is clearly a lesson for all people whoever and wherever the gospel should be preached with the Holy Spirit, whether in the Jewish age or any other of the ages to come. To suppose otherwise is to conclude that whatsoever things were aforetime were not written for our learning (Rom. xv. 4. And [illegible] inspiration is useless to [illegible]

My friend's remarks [illegible] designed to enlighten me [illegible] the ultimate end of all the human race is to be saved, as commonly understood by universalist and broader hope brethren. He seems to think if he can succeed in confining the unpardonable sin to the Jewish sanhedrim, his object will be accomplished. Could he confine it there, universal salvation would not follow, for the persons composing that sanhedrim would never be forgiven. Mark iii. 29.

Apparent, to ward off the force of the argument that some of the race will ultimately be hopelessly lost, my friend refers to the fact that the Epistle, which seems clearly to set forth that result, was written to the Hebrews, and to no one else. Were the Hebrews, to whom Paul wrote that epistle, a part of the Jewish Sanhedrim? Were they not holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling? Heb. iii. 1; and did he not exhort to go on to perfection; for it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly calling, or gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit and have tasted the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance, etc., Heb. vi. 1–8. And furthermore, did not Paul say, "If we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins; but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversary." Heb. x. 26, 27.

Do all these testimonies relate to the Jews and to them only? Are they not clearly addressed to all men who have professed faith in Christ, and have been made partakers of the Holy Spirit, "My words they are spirit and they are life, let the words of Christ dwell in you richly (how?) by faith (in Jesus Christ.) How, then dare I tell men that "no other people ever had the chance to commit the sin against the Holy Spirit?" Those who do so must act on their own responsibility; I cannot share it with them.

That every son and daughter of Adam will have a fair and honest opportunity to gain an ultimate or final salvation into an endless life, I have no doubt. That view indicates the true character of God as honest, just, and good, to every soul of man to whom he has given life: and further, if any soul of Adam's race, has by unavoidable circumstances been deprived of the opportunity to secure an endless existence, while in the present life, they have secured to them by the promise and oath of God such an opportunity in a future state. This view gives no license to carelessness or neglect in the use of means now granted us of knowing the only true God and Jesus Christ; and recognizes man's responsibility to God for the use he makes of the means before him.

Till final salvation can be proven to be unconditional, I cannot accept the doctrine of what is called "Universalism," or "Broader Hope."

If man is a responsible being, possessed of freedom of will, then a liability to fail is inevitable. If he is not responsible, and a failure is impossible, then law seems a mockery and grace is only an act of justice, which the Creator is bound to exercise; and man is but a machine for the working of which the Creator alone is responsible; and all threatenings and promises are a mere pretense, the same as they would be to any other machine; and no blame or praise belongs to man in any event. Such a condition of things is fatalism, and whatever is, is right; and to call anything sin, is a misnomer; because sin is impossible, or the Creator is the only sinner. But if the Bible is our guide, man is responsible, and is liable to fail, and the Creator asks, Why will ye die? and says with an oath, As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Ezek. xxxiii. 11. But God is long-suffering, not willing that any should [illegible] that all should come to repentance (learning) 2 Peter iii. 9. Yet the day of [illegible] of ungodly men will [illegible] there can be no ungodly men if [illegible] is not responsible, and has not a free will, and the great and final sin for which men will ultimately perish is a wilful rejection of the truth concerning the only true God and Jesus Christ, confirmed by the Holy Spirit; such sinners will never have forgiveness, but are in danger of eternal condemnation, Mark iii. 29. If there is no such condemnation, no man can be in danger of it; and it would be an absurdity to use such an expression. As to the word "all," of its primary meaning there can be no doubt; and unless there are exceptions made, or the circumstances forbid it, it must have its unlimited sense, as when it is said, Christ gave himself a ransom for all. There being no limitation, nor any circumstances limiting the application to all men; it has its primary signification, and embraces the entire race; and this sense is confirmed by many other testimonies of the Scriptures. In a multitude of other cases it is necessarily limited to the mass, or multitudes, as when Paul says, "Death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Rom. v. 12. Now it may be a fact that the latter "all" has no limitation; but the first "all" has a limitation, or has exceptions, though none are expressed in this text. As a fact, however, we know Enoch and Elijah are exceptions, and that the saints who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord will also be exceptions—they will not die. So, when Paul says, "All Israel shall be saved," it is manifest that he speaks of the mass, and not of every individual of Israel; for there are those of Israel, (the Jewish Sanhedrim) who have sinned the sin unto death. 1 John v. 16, even blaspheming against the Holy Spirit, which never hath forgiveness. The prophets also, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, have clearly spoken of exceptions of some of Israel who will not be forgiven. Please read Ezek. xx. 33–38, where it is clearly shown that there will be rebels at the final gathering who will be purged out from among the mass and shall not enter into the land of Israel. Thus Paul's All Israel shall be saved, has its exceptions, but the salvation of the mass of Israel is a certainty, both from the prophets and from the New Testament utterances. But as I regard the matter, we have no authority to encourage any man that his final salvation is infallibly secured. He must and will have his trial, and a fair and impartial opportunity to secure an endless life, but he must secure it by an improvement of the means and opportunity granted him as a responsible creature, or utterly perish at last. For, it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that prophet, (the Christ,) the prophet like unto Moses, shall be utterly exterminated from among the people, Acts iii. 23. No language can more strongly express a hopeless and final extermination than this, and my friend must admit that the Jewish Sanhedrim has committed the sin here spoken of, whether any other of the race have done or will do it; hence I cannot accept what he calls his light, and must still maintain that we have not authority to affirm that every individual of the human race will finally be saved. Let us rejoice that every person will have an opportunity to secure that result, and can only fail by a wilful rejection of the Life-Giver when made known to them.

Hoping now, dear brethren, that I have made this subject so plain that you can all see where I stand, with so many misrepresenting my views. I am no Universalist, no Broader Hope man, but a fair and an impartial trial and judgment for all men. I believe that the wages of sin is death, and the gift of God is eternal life. Paul said, "And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." Heb. ix. 27; Acts xvii. 31. "Because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world. (not the church, but the world) in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given us assurance (security) unto all men [illegible] that he hath raised him from the dead." (Good security.)

Brethren let us wait until the Righteous Judge will judge the people. We are not capable of giving righteous judgment.

Submitted in love, and in hope of life when Jesus comes.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King, the Lord and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, as pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and—Oh [illegible] as essential for final salvation.

Plain truth must have plain words. She is innocent and accounts it no shame to be seen naked. Whereas the hypocrite or double-dealer hides himself in ambiguities and reserves. *

It is the action of the waves that keeps the ocean fresh; it is the discussion of great truths that establishes and vindicates what God has inspired, and what men's hearts yearn for to make them wiser, happier and better. *

A card dated Mar. 20, informs us that Brother and Sister Woodward have been instrumental in adding 36 more to the churches at Waterville and Wenatchee, Wash., and are to go to Scholls Oregon. This is good news that we hasten to give out.

It was a saying of Aristotle that "Virtue is necessary to the young,—to age comfortable, to the poor serviceable, to the rich an ornament, to the fortunate an honor, to the unfortunate support; that she ennobles the slave, and exalts nobility itself." *

Riches, beauty, honor, strength, or any other worldly good that we have enjoyed and is past, only grieves us. That which is present does not satisfy: that which may be hoped for, as future is very uncertain; what folly or madness, then, is it to trust to any of them? *

Lying is a sin destructive to society; for there is no trade where there is no trust; and no trust where there is no truth; and yet this cursed business of lying creeps into all trades, as if there was no living without lying. But one had better be losers than liars, for he makes a bad bargain who sells his conscience with his commodity. Plato said:—"There is nothing so delightful as the hearing or the speaking of truth. For this reason there is no conversation so agreeable as that of the man of integrity, who hears without any intention to betray, and speaks without any intention to deceive."

The Atonement. No. 2.

In the light of the popular teaching respecting the death of Christ, we cannot see that there can be any forgiveness of sin with God. The idea that "Jesus has paid it all," seems to be almost universal; and if that be the truth in the case of all or one, all or one should go free. If we owe a debt to God and another pays it for us, how can we still be indebted to him? If our debt to God could only be discharged by our death, or that of the Lord Jesus, and that the latter did really we do not see how the just and good God could collect the account from us also. Neither can we understand how a creditor who receives all that is due him from a debtor can claim to have forgiven the debt. The fact of its coming from a third party does not alter the case. If in the case of God and the debtor man, it be said that it is because

DIE FOR US—

God provided the person who pays the debt, that he is said to have forgiven him,—we do not see that the matter is helped any. The question is, is the debt paid, or is it still owing? If it is paid it cannot be owing,—and if still owing it is not paid, neither has it been forgiven. To say that God paid himself and arranged for an apparent "satisfaction of divine justice," seems to us a very unworthy representation of the Divine procedure, because it pictures God as dealing in legal fiction tending to conceal the real transaction. And it makes us breathe much freer to turn to Eph. i. 7 and read that God, according to the good pleasure of his will, freely bestowed his grace upon us in the beloved, "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses according to the riches of his grace." And this brings to mind the words of the Psalmist, cxxx. 7, 8, "With the Lord there is mercy, and with him

PLENTEOUS REDEMTION;"

while an earlier verse says, "If thou Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, O, Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared." Again the Psalmist says, "Thou Lord art good and ready to forgive, and plenteous in mercy to all that call upon thee." And it appears plain from the 50th Psalm that the idea of

PURCHASING PARDON

was repugnant to the Divine mind. "I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices, nor for thy burnt offerings which are continually before me. I will take no bullock out of thy house, nor he goat out of thy folds; for every beast of the forest is mine (already,—and therefore has no purchasing power) and the cattle upon a thousand hills. If I were hungry I would not tell thee, and the fullness thereof: will I eat the flesh of bulls or drink the blood of goats?" Psa. l. 8, 13. But why should we multiply proof-texts on this point of forgiveness, while the words of the Spirit in Eph. ii. 5, 8. are on record? "By grace (favor) are ye saved, through faith."

FOR THE WORLD IS MINE

Another popular error that we oppose, is that Christ died to appease the vindictive wrath of God. The Scriptures already referred to ought to forever settle that matter; but they do not; and so we will go on record as saying that instead of dying to appease his wrath,—he died to commend the Father's amazing love to the children of a mortal race; that he died, not to reconcile God to man, but that the entire, great, glorious and eternal purpose of God in the redemption of man is an exhibition of his love: and that all he has done in this work of divine benevolence and mercy has been done to produce in man true faith, in order to justification unto life: and that Christ's death, the crowning evidence of his love, was part of this purpose; and that believing they might have

MAN TO GOD;

LIFE THROUGH HIS NAME."

It is held that the justice and righteousness of God stood in the way of pardoning the sinner because it says in the 3rd of Romans that Christ Jesus has been "set forth by God to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God." The righteousness of God did, and ever will stand in the way of pardoning the guilty,—we mean the un-repentant sinner. Were he to pardon such it would be a virtual approval of sin. It is sin that renders [illegible] character

[illegible] ODIOUS TO GOD.

If he reform the same dis[illegible] God which abhorred what he [illegible] fore, approves what he is now; [illegible] has not changed, but the man has. And the whole scheme of redemption has the change of man in view, not change on God's part. The word propitiation is read with the idea already in the mind that Jesus was to do something to make God propitious,—that is, to influence to pardon. This cannot be true because it is God who takes the initiative. It is God who makes advances,—

God who sends Jesus.

Would he do this at all if he were not ready to pardon? The word propitiation is rendered mercy-seat by the Diaglott, Arch-bishop Newcomb and many others. This gives the idea that Christ is the channel through whom God's mercy flows, and refers us back to "the patterns of things in the heavens," Heb. ix. 23. The High Priest of Israel entered the Holiest Place of all within the veil once a year, carrying in the blood of the slain goat, for, or in behalf of the people, which he sprinkled upon the mercy-seat eastward, and seven times before the mercy-seat. The common idea regarding this is, that this act of the High Priest propitiated God; that is, that it was an offering to him of a compensation or satisfaction for the sins of the people; and that in consideration of this, the

A GOLDEN BASIN

GUILTY PAIR UNPUNISHED.

In our judgment there is no foundation or authority for this view except the popular theology of the age. The high priest entered the veil with the blood of an animal ceremonially pure in his hand. He stands before the seat of mercy, upon which, toward the seat, he sprinkled, and then sprinkled it seven times in front of it, amid the fumes of ascending incense. Does this signify that the blood so sprinkled has inclined

God to be merciful?

O, no; we think not. There is the seat upon which God, represented by the shekinah is sitting; and dear readers, the BLOOD did not change a judicial seat into a mercy-seat. Thank God, it was a mercy-seat at the beginning! The High Priest carried NO SYMBOLIC PRICE, but a SYMBOLIC CONFESSION!

He virtually said, "We, thy people, imperfect and sinful, cast our lives [the blood is the life] upon thy mercy. O, lift upon us the light of thy countenance,—the mark of thy favor, [as the sun rising in his beauty in the east] we accept the conditions of thy mercy, which are that we present ourselves as LIVING sacrifices, etc., etc., and therefore sprinkle this blood, the symbol of our lives seven times before

THY THRONE OF FAVOR."

O, that every reader could realize from first to last that this was an appeal to mercy; a transaction of Sovereign Grace,—a ray of heavenly light, how we would praise our Father in heaven! We are confident that this is all about the 'pardon of sin, not sin satisfied for;—At-one-ment, reconciliation effected, not by typical compensation, but through God's mercy. He was the Lord God merciful and gracious before, he is the same still,—he has not changed.

God is holy as well as merciful, and cannot admit a sinner to his presence, or allow him to dwell in his favor. The worshipers in the temple were required to come before the Lord with a symbol of personal purity. On the day of atonement or reconciliation one of the two goats was slain for a sin offering and presented on the consecrated altar to God. The disposal of this sacrificed animal expressed, in our judgment, the acknowledgement that holiness becomes God's people; the animal was without blemish. The entrails were washed, and the fat which adhered to them, which is thought to express the idea of the richest or best portion, was carefully collected and burnt. The kidneys or reins, which in Scripture signifies the most

SECRET THOUGHTS

and feelings of the mind, because of their retired position in the animal, were also laid upon the altar with the fat. Then it was that the blood was taken within the veil and sprinkled as already seen. All this sprinkling etc, before the mercy-seat would seem to indicate that the profession of personal obedience gave the worshipper

NO TITLE WHATEVER

to God's favor on the ground of merit; the very opposite of this. It was an act of condescension and mercy on his part to accept this offering from [illegible]. We verily believe therefore, [illegible] service on the day of atonement declared symbolically this, that [illegible] holiness no man [illegible]

[illegible] BEFORE THE LORD."

[illegible] great Day of Atonement two [illegible] were brought to the high priest; [illegible] of them was to be put to death, and was called a sin offering; the other was called the scape-goat; or the escape-goat because he was driven away and allowed to escape in the wilderness. In Leviticus we learn that the use of the scape-goat was to make an atonement, or at-one-ment. If God had done nothing wrong;—if he was essentially holy, and just, and kind, and good, and

MERCIFUL AND GRACIOUS,

then of course nothing could change him for the better; to change him would be for the worst. And besides that, were he to be changed we would know nothing about him; he has revealed himself once,—and that revelation reveals unchangeableness as one of his attributes. It is man that needs changing, and therefore it is man that is NOT AT-ONE WITH GOD.

Were we to say that God was not at-one with man, it would imply that man and God were on an equal footing;—and that by mutual concessions the two can come to an understanding! Nothing is more certain than that that condition of things did not exist. God was the Law-giver! Man was the offender. It was certainly God's prerogative to make the Law, and most certainly it was the man who NEEDED RECONCILIATION.

The question is, HOW under the law, was this to be effected by the Scape-goat? At-one-ment was the end attained, but HOW? Let us see:—The scape-goat was alive, and Aaron placed both hands on its head and confessed over it all the sins of the people,—and symbolically laid them on the head of the animal. We think —indeed we feel certain that this is the only animal upon whose head sins were ever laid. In other cases the offerer's hands, and not the priest's hands were laid on the heads of sacrifices,—and the offerer seemed to say:—

"BY THIS ACT OF MINE

I identify myself with this offering. But not to lose sight of the goat on whose head the sins of the people were laid,—let us imagine ourselves there. There stands the goat before all the people, the very embodiment of the nation's corruption. It is here those who teach SUBSTITUTION fancy they stand on solid ground; think this is altogether favorable to their view; and, from a superficial glance it appears just so. But, if an At-one-ment be attainable, we want to know on what principle? What of the goat? Does he

SUFFER THE PENALTY

due their sins? Is he put to death in token of his punishment INSTEAD of them? Is he sacrificed upon the altar as an expiation of sin? Nothing of the kind! Expiation is the pagan notion of the meaning of sacrifices. Just think of offering to God the very embodiment of the nation's sins! As the scape-goat certainly personified the sins of all the people we should now be interested to know what becomes of them. We will put the truth in the premises as we believe it, into the mouth of

THE HIGH PRIEST,

he being mouth-piece for Jehovah, and saying:—"Behold my people how I will deal with your sins. I will neither punish you, nor a substitute for you. I will show no displeasure: you have confessed your sins, and by the symbol of the

GOAT THAT WAS SLAIN

you profess to have repented of the past, and aim to live a life of obedience. Take, then this scape-goat into the wilderness, never more to be seen or known; thus will I put your sins far away from you. They shall be remembered no more." And when the people saw the goat hurried away into the wilderness, it seems to us they would think of that comforting declaration, "As far as the East is from the West, thus far hath he put our transgressions from us." Thus At-one-ment was made by the scape-goat. And it would not be surprising if every adopted child of God should here be reminded of the blessed apostolic assurance that "if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." *

FRICTION.

"The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork."—David.

There is a story of the colored debating club who were trying to settle the question of the chicken's maternity, and just as the decision was about to go in favor of the brooding hen, one member arose and delivered himself thus: "Supposin' I puts a settin' o' duck eggs under a hen, and she hatches 'em out, is dat hen de mudder o' dose ducks?" Whereupon the chairman arose and, with dignity, replied: "De question dat is befo' dis yer meetin' is 'whether de hen dat lays de egg or de hen dat hatches it out is de mudder of de chicken?' derefore, I rule as ducks is out." Now this is the sage and diplomatic policy adopted by the nebular theorist. By carefully ignoring or slighting all conflicting evidence they can, by special pleading, make out a pretty good case. Thus Prof. Ball, in discussing the theory in the Encyclopedia Britannica, says: "We must at once put the comets out of view," and again, "We must put the comets on one side for the present and discuss the nebular theory without any reference thereto." When one has practiced with a steel ball and magnet, on a level table, and noticed how the ball hugs the centre of attraction and never tries to get away again, the reason for setting comets on the one side will be obvious, for the most marvelous thing about the comet is its rebounding out again from the central sun, in complete contradiction and refutation of all the "laws of gravitation" of the school books.

But there are still greater liberties taken with facts of which we have much better knowledge. In the nebular theory the idea of friction in the heavenly bodies is expunged, because friction involves continual change of condition and there is no supply of power to take the place of what is expended, and loss of speed would mean loss of momentum, loss of momentum would mean loss of balance, loss of balance would mean crash, as before explained, in a former paper; therefore, nothing must interfere. There must be no chance incidents by the way and no grinding of wheels, for in this engine we have no arrangement for taking up the wear and tear and the slack, no reserve of force, and no engineer on board to make repairs. So we must have no wear, no slack, no expenditure, no accidents. Yet, as a matter of fact, friction is one of the most conspicuous things in nature as we see it around us; and we dwell on one of the heavenly bodies. Friction is the one word written large over all the geological strata: every boulder, pebble and grain of sand adds its own little tale to the overwhelming testimony, and over against it, in equally legible letters, is written the word Force, sustaining Force, overwhelming Force.

Over the now comparatively restful earth we still have, in active opposition, the strife of wind and wave. All power of growth encounters friction. The seed that bursts through in spring cracks and casts off the clods on either side; the acorn pushes its root aground through the resisting soil, thrusts its stem, waving upward and to the zenith, and holds out its rugged branches at right angles in open defiance of gravitation. In the animal world it is the same. The horse pawels the valley and the vulture soars through the cloud by, through and in spite of friction, and we ourselves, the greatest of the creatures, live, move and have our being in continual friction—friction in all forms—physical, intellectual, moral, spiritual. Life is one long strife against inertia or antagonism. And so it is with our revolving earth. Let us consider for a while one of the things we know it has daily to encounter in its revolution. From where I sit now I can look out of the window and see a noble sheet of water—just one bend in the Great Choptank River, from one side to the other to where it winds out of sight behind the verdure—considerably over one square mile. Twice every day there is thrust up and over this wide area a volume of water that covers it to the depth of three or four feet, sometimes much more. Now, for ease in calculating, let us take a minimum average of about two feet and a-half. This will give about one pound to the square inch, which over this surface alone is the magnificent figure of two million tons. Now all these tons have wound themselves through thirty miles of tortorous river, in company with other thousands of tons more, which have flooded up the side creeks, risen over the flats, and swashed through the reedy marshes and "cripples"—countless millions of tons of dead water. Yet all this is a bagatelle. In any ordinary map of the United States this whole river is not even marked; even the broad Chesapeake Bay, into which it flows, is but a tiny slit, that with its two hundred miles of water, ten or twelve miles wide, with all its thousand and one tributaries, has belched into its bottle mouth twice a day, billions of tons which, twice a day, is sloshed out again. Then consider all the sounds and bays, rivers and creeks, along the coast of our country alone, and the mind is dazed in the effort to conceive the magnitude of that mighty swash, calculating only two and a-half feet rise of tide. Think of fifty feet of water thrusting itself into the Bay of Funday; or even the ten or twenty that always swells and sways round the British Isles—everywhere brushing against the rock-bound coast, rushing through narrow passages, roaring through "bores," whirling around eddies,—friction incalculable! Yet, although once every thirteen hours the overhanging moon pulls up this water barrier for the flying continents to slosh through, since the memory of man not the slightest dimunition in the diurnal motion of our planet has ever been observed; all this mass of water, with its sullen back thrust, is but as the hem of the racing athletes' garment that flaps against his thigh.

But not content with the difficulties of the situation the "nebular theory" invents troubles for itself. Such, for instance, is the idea of liquid planets. It is maintained that our planet, with the others, has condensed from a gaseous to a liquid condition, and that it only has a comparatively thin scum of solid material on the outside, varying, in various opinions, from ten to a hundred miles, and which is called "Earth's crust." Now it is claimed that the earth mass is over five times heavier than water and, therefore, the action of the moon, which we see demonstrated on the sea, would be proportionately greater on this much heavier liquid; moreover, there are no shallows in this vast deep, no wall of continents for it to lash against and partly break its stupendous swing. In such case, therefore, we would have a land tidal wave every forenoon that would smash up all things terrestrial as easy as the steam boat swell smashes half inch ice on the river, and long, long ago we would all have slid through into what Dr. Talmage courteously designates "the region of perpetual conflagration."

It ought to be mentioned, though, before closing, that this subject—this liquid globe absurdity—is being eliminated from the more recent educational text books.

Married.

Married at the Baptist church, Vincent, Calcasieu Parish, Louisiana, on Wednesday evening, Mar. 13, Brother Claude C. Overman and Miss Dorothy Vincent. Brother Claude is the worthy son of Sister Sarah E. Overman, formerly of the State of Iowa, and brother of Sister Clementine, whose excellent letters will be remembered by many Restitution readers. He is held in high esteem in southwest Louisiana, and is one of the most practical and industrious of the young rice farmers of that prosperous region. The bride is reported to be one of the most charming and sensible young ladies of the parish and is of one of the best known families of the Old South. She speaks French readily as well as English and is a good Christian.

Brother Underwood:

Please say to the readers of The Restitution and especially to those two brethren who so kindly offered me a home with them, that my sister, Mrs. James Fisher and her unmarried daughter have offered me a home with them at Beaver Dam, Wis. I have accepted and am now with kind friends who are doing all in their power to make me comfortable and happy, and I certainly appreciate their kindness after being left in Conn. without a kindred to sympathize with me. Yours in the gospel hope which increases with greater lustre as the days and years go by.

Daniel Howard.

Notice.

There will be a meeting at Shaw, Kansas, (Neosho County) March 30, 31 to April 3, at which time the brethren will keep the Passover [illegible] All of the brethren are cordially invited. Brother Poore is to be with us.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

Poetry.

Yearning for the End.

Breathe soft and low, O whispering wind,
Above the tangled grasses deep,
Where those who loved me long ago
Forgot the world and went to sleep.
No towering shaft or sculptured urn,
Or mausoleum's empty pride,
Tells, to the curious passer-by,
Their virtues, or the time they died.

I count the old, familiar names,
O'ergrown with grass and lie's n gray;
Where tangled briars and creeping vines
Across the crumbled tablets stray.
The summer's sky is softly blue:
The birds still sing the sweet old strain;
But something from the summer-time
Is gone, that will not come again.

So many voices have been hushed,
So many songs have ceased for aye,
So many hands I used to touch
Are folded over hearts of clay!
The noisy world recedes from me;
I cease to hear its praise or blame;
The mossy marbles echo back
No hollow sound of empty fame.

I only know, that calm and still
They sleep, beyond life's woe and wail;
Beyond the fleet of sailing clouds,
Beyond the shadow of the vale.
I only feel that tired and worn,
I fain upon the highway here,
And gaze with yearning eyes, beyond,
On fields that shine supremely fair.

Resurrection Matters.

Dear Bro. Joblin:

Excuse me for taking up your time in reading my letters, but I wanted to have a little conversation with you. I am keeping pretty comfortable for an old man, 84 years old this month; and the rest of us are about as common. I am glad that notwithstanding your chronic complaint you are able to keep busy, and not disposed to hide your light under a bushel or under the bed, but letting it shine on a candlestick. In addition to this I want to say to you that it seems a very difficult matter to show ourselves workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. It requires much close application, because if we give expression to ideas that are out of harmony with

THE ORACLES OF GOD,

they may grow like tares and do a vast amount of harm that can never be remedied. We do not all see exactly alike on many points of doctrine, and perhaps it is not to be expected we should considering the variety of the human mind. It is bewildering to witness the multitude of sects, all professing to found their faith on the Bible. It is no wonder we are put in the same category. They say, "Well, that's your belief, others believe differently, and they take the Bible the same as you, for their authority, and

WHO AM I TO BELIEVE?

And so we labor under difficulties which it is impossible to remedy, except to a very limited extent. "As it was in the beginning, and ever shall be, world without end." So, we will have to wait,—falling back on the fact that "all things are of God." I would like to say a few words respecting the programme that consists eight ages and epochs. I, in all my long life have never seen the like before. I have never believed in what is commonly called or a "universal resurrection,"—expressions which are not found in the Bible. I am aware there are a few texts which seem to teach that all the dead will be raised, but other texts as clearly seem to qualify, restrict or limit the application of the first class, which some think conveys the idea of a universal or the universality of resurrection. It then requires reverence for God and his truth to compare Scripture with Scripture and let

A GENERAL RESURRECTION;

THE SPIRIT OF GOD

in and by his Word guide to a just conclusion on this most important subject, that shall stand approved of God in the Great Day. The 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians elaborates the doctrine of the resurrection to my mind, satisfactorily. It teaches clearly that death came by Adam, and that resurrection came by Christ, the last Adam. This is certain, and the qualifying terms seem equally certain:—"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." The first clause is taken as if it read,—that the "all in Adam," is identified with

THE "ALL IN CHRIST;"

as if all the human race in Adam, were also in Christ; and which would, if true, make out universal salvation; for all in Christ must certainly be saved. But we read of a class who are "without Christ, having no hope, and without God in the world." "Without Christ ye can do nothing." All such are spoken of as "aliens from the life of God." The phrase "In Christ," occurs 85 times and is descriptive of the true Christian state of grace. Can it be possible that this phrase "In Christ" should embrace both those who are called of God, and

BAPTIZED INTO CHRIST,

and those without Christ? Of course not. We must make a distinction between those who are justified through the obedience of faith from those who are condemned by unbelief and disobedience,—not necessarily touching the irresponsible and the idiotic as such. This leaves those without law, and those in honor and understand not, to go to the grave as those who shall never see light. Now let the Lord be God, and let his Word be the truth; there we find firm footing that nothing can shake. Thus we are compelled to the conclusion that the resurrection from the dead is qualified. If so, (as the most distinctive texts do teach), it necessarily follows that it is limited to those having the necessary qualifications. There we may with reverence leave those without law. "The man in honor, who, as the heathen understand not,"—"The other lords (Gentile kings) who ruled over Israel, etc., to not rise, never see light, but perish and consume in the grave. On this line we avoid all responsibility;

"HIS COUNSEL WILL STAND."

"He will do as he said." This view of course does not tally with the theory of the eight ages or epochs. Of all the papers written on the resurrection I have never read any so definite as I should like. They are all mixed up with a "second death," which no writer has ever explained. We must make the Scripture consistent with itself in our expositions. I cannot see that two physical deaths are

THE WAGES OF SIN.

Taking the first three chapters of Genesis, Luke xx. 33 39; 1 Cor. xv.; 1 Thes. iv. 13-18, these Scriptures with many others, proves to me conclusively that resurrection is a conditional affair,—a hope not belonging to every body. "For the hope and resurrection of the dead," says Paul, "I am called in question." It seems to me that this belief of universal resurrection is the corner stone of Universalism, and that is really what the masses are drifting to. Between the lids of the Bible I have yet to find a single passage teaching that a single individual is to be raised in mortal flesh and blood to receive corporal punishment and turned over

TO DIE AGAIN.

Those who have died out of Christ, will remain in the congregation of the dead. A catalogue of crimes and sins is given in the last part of Romans i., and the verdict of God is as follows: "Who knowing the judgment of God, they who commit such things are worthy (of a resurrection to have another good whipping?) It doesn't read that way, but are worthy of death. He that is of the truth will hear his voice when the resurrection day arrives,—will the wicked hear it? "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall

RAISE UP US ALSO

by Jesus, and shall present us with you." 2 Cor. iv. 15; 1 Cor. vi. 14. "God hath both raised up the Lord Jesus and will also raise up us also by his own power." Don't turn me over for a heretic, because I believe in the resurrection, to die no more. The Bible is the best commentary notwithstanding there are some things hard to understand. If it is the will of God to raise 50,000,000,000 of human beings—all who have ever drawn a breath

I WOULD NOT OPPOSE

his will a moment, "for the judge of all the earth will do right." What I say is there's nothing about it in our Bible, which represents human nature or the natural man, or nations of such as a drop in a bucket; as the dust in a balance,—as accounted as nothing, and less than nothing in his sight. "And even at their best estate (as David says) altogether vanity." "What is man that thou art mindful of him?" "His thoughts are not as our thoughts nor his ways as our ways,"—as much higher as the heavens are above the earth. If he was strict to mark iniquity

"O LORD, WHO SHALL STAND?"

"But there is forgiveness with thee that thou mayest be feared. Although the animal man,—as far as life and death is concerned has no pre-eminence above the beast,—his brain power is far superior. Man is godlike in capacities and capabilities, but they will be of no avail unless exercised in a godly channel. The ungodly are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. [illegible] not one that will reflect on one of the principles of Jehovah's attributes,—his omniscience. I have written in the fear of God, and because the ideas I oppose puts a premium on wickedness, and could not fail to give a note of warning.

Yours in the blessed hope,
J. O. WOODRUFF.

Divine Healing.

To the pretended healers by faith of the body of Christ, I would say stop, and examine the Scriptures, and learn for sure, if Christ and the Apostles healed by the will of man, if they did, then go on with your hypnotism or mesmerism through the power of your own will. But if you find as I do, that it was done by the will of God, through Christ, then try the same methods that Christ and Apostles used and not your own, and see what success you will have. I verily believe if you have any success, it will be more perceptible and more accepted and permanent than any thing in that line, you have ever done. You may say, how do you understand that the sick were healed, if not as we do it. Christ said, as thy faith is, be it unto thee, or thy faith hath made thee whole, and it was done, and Apostles said in the name of Christ, be thou whole and it was so. Even the vagabond Jews knew that these things should be done in the name of Jesus, whom Paul preacheth, and what is the use to try to do these things in any other name. Try laying your hands on the sick, and at the same time say, in the name of Jesus Christ be thou whole, and if you are successful, then all right, go on, but if not, then stop until you know that the time has come when you are successful.

Now to the afflicted of the household of faith, I would say, let no mortal man hypnotize or mesmerize you, or in other words have control of your organ of individuality, for you don't know what you are exposing yourself to; you don't know what temptations you are placing before others. Then the reproach thrown upon the cause of our faith. No man can render only temporal relief, so what is the use. Christ is the man, and the only man that we should surrender ourselves to, look over to him, who is the author and finisher of our faith. The sealing of the servants of our God in their forehead is but the knowledge of God and his plan of salvation; and his control of us, control of individuality and we should never surrender to any other. The mark of the beast is like unto it in or upon the forehead, or in the hand, and how is it done? Simply without contact through the organ of individuality, or with or by contact through the hand, by hypnotism, mesmerism, spiritism, or devilism, and should be steered clear of by all true believers. In fact the science of healing is something that all nominal christendom and the world is engaged in, and anything that is of the world is of the devil, and Christians are having no better success than the world. The knowledge of the Scriptures is able to make one wise unto salvation, and the knowledge is stored away in the forehead. The knowledge of the devil is able to do the reverse, and is stored in the same place. The science of healing is but one of the devil's last schemes to deceive the very elect, if it is possible, and I hope that those of the household of faith will open their eyes to the true situation, and leave off all contrary to the teachings of Christ and the Apostles, and run with patience the race set before us.

Submitted in love for the truth,

The Gospel of Christ.

"Now I make known to you brethren, the gospel which I preached to you, which also ye received, and in which ye stand; by which ye also are saved, if ye remember in what manner I preached to you; unless indeed ye have believed rashly. For I delivered to you among the first things, what also I received first, that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures."

The above is a rendering of the first four verses of the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians by McKnight. The people calling themselves disciples of Christ or Christians, quote this to prove "a three fact gospel." It is very evident that they ignore a great deal of plain Scripture in trying to prove that their gospel was taught by Christ and his Apostles. I was informed by one of their sect that it was not proper to use now what we call the Lord's prayer, viz: "Our Father who art in heaven," etc., because it contained the phrase "thy kingdom come, thy will be done," etc., claiming that Christ's kingdom was set up on the day of Pentecost. I asked of him a plain "saith the Lord" for his statement, but I did not get it. When the angel announced to Mary that she should bring forth a son and the Lord God would give unto him the throne of his father David and he should rule over the house of Jacob for ever and unto his kingdom there should be no end; he preached the gospel. Mark says 1st ch. 14th v., "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." Luke ix. 2, "And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God," etc. Now, the 6th verse says, they departed and went through the town preaching the gospel. To preach the gospel is to preach the kingdom of God. Was this same gospel preached after Pentecost? See Acts ii. 30; God raised up Christ to sit on David's throne. Acts viii. 12. Preached the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Acts xiv. 7, And they preached the gospel. Acts xix. 8, And Paul was disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God. Acts xxviii. 30, 31, And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all who came unto him, preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with all confidence, no man forbidding him. Is it right to preach the facts and not the gospel? Does it constitute a saving faith? We think not. Faith, repentance and baptism brings us into covenant relation with God. If the first step is faulty, will the following be effectual? Surely not. Paul said that he did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. Is it not safe to follow in his footsteps? I have been listening to preaching by these people calling themselves Christians, but have never heard them preach the gospel of the kingdom of God. In Gal. iii. 16 we read, Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. The seed here spoken of Paul says is Christ. Not to the many but the one seed. God promised Abraham a land and life. Gen. xvii. 8, I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God. The land is here described as an everlasting possession, which is also an everlasting life. Rom. says: [illegible] his seed possess the land [illegible] the law. Read carefully [illegible] would have you read Acts [illegible]. In this discourse Stephen says, verse 5, God gave Abraham not so much as one foot of it, yet he promised he would give it to him. Christ says, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." When our Savior shall come with his saints and this earth shall have been delivered from the curse, then will the promise be made good, viz. Gen. xxii. 18, In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. In this age he is taking out of the Gentiles a people for his name, not blessing the nations, as we so often hear from the pulpits of the day.

In conclusion let me say, if we would receive the promise given, we must have an intelligent faith. First, believe the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and be baptized and live a true Christian life, and not try to live a blameless life without obeying that mold or form of doctrine spoken of by Paul. Faith, hope and charity is the order, not hope, charity and faith. God's plan and not man's will give us everlasting life in the kingdom of God.

D. C. ROBISON.

Opening of the Seals.

We now come to the period of the great sword of the second seal. After the death of Numerianus, A. D., 284, Diocletian came to the throne in whose reign the assassins for a time ceased their murderous work. The most noted events in his reign are the ten persecutions from A. D. 303 to 313. It seems to have been the intention of Galerius who inspired Diocletian to the bloody work to blot out the Christian name. "The diligence and zeal of the Roman magistrates in the execution of the edicts nearly proved fatal to the Christian cause." Mosheim p. 78. With the accession of Constantine to the throne, the tide of events changed in favor of the Christians. The wars carried on by Constantine to obtain control of the empire fairly reveals the time of the great sword of the second seal. In A. D. 312 civil war broke out between Constantine and Maxentius; Constantine was in Gaul at the time, and in command of an army of Roman veterans. The whole force of Constantine consisted of ninety thousand foot and eight thousand horse; after leaving troops for the defence of the Rhine, he marched at the head of forty thousand soldiers to encounter an enemy whose numbers were at least four times that of his own. He crossed the Alps by way of Mount Cenis, captured Thecily of Susa at the foot of the mountain, cut in pieces the greater part of the garrison. About forty miles from there a more severe battle was fought in the plains of Turin, Constantine being again victorious. The gates of Turin being by the inhabitants closed against the defeated party, very few escaped the sword of the victorious soldiers of Constantine. He next laid siege to Verona. Defeated Maxentius in a severe battle, leaving the field covered with many thousands of the vanquished Italians; after which the city of Verona immediately surrendered. Constantine now resumes his march towards Rome. At a place called Saxa Rubra, about nine miles from Rome, he discovered the army of Maxentius prepared to give him battle. Constantine disposed his troops with consummate skill, and charged in person the cavalry of his rival, and his irresistable attack determined the fortune of the day. The confusion became general and the troops of Maxentius pursued by an implacable enemy rushed by thousands into the deep and rapid stream of the Tiber. The Emperor in trying to escape was drowned in the river, and not more than fifty-eight days elapsed between the surrender of Verona and the final decision of the war A. D. 312.

The Roman world was now divided between Constantine and Lucinius, the former was master of the West, and the latter of the East. But in about one year's time they turned their arms against each other and in A. D. 322 Constantine was victorious in a war with the Goths. And in the year following he was engaged in war with Lucinius, and in the battle of Hadrianople thirty-four thousand men were reported slain. The siege of Byzantium, and the naval victory of Crispus, followed by the battle Chrysopolis disposed of all opposition to Constantine, and the Roman world was again united under one Emperor. A. D. 324. It is necessary to keep in mind that the color of the horse indicates the spirit of the heaven during the period symbolized by each horse [illegible] formed by Zech. vi. 5. Thus far we [illegible] discovered no change in the [illegible] of war manifested in the Roman [illegible] empire, and indicated by the symbols of the second seal, and in the remaining part of the fourth century up to the fall of Rome A. D. 476 is most emphatically a time of war, aptly symbolized by a great sword, the sword of the northern Goths that wounded the imperial head of the leopard beast. Rev. xiii. 3. In A. D. 376 the Emperor Valens led a large army against the Goths; the battle was fought near Hadrianople; the emperor was killed, and only a few thousand of his large army was saved by flight, under cover of the darkness of the night that followed the day of battle. During this period of the great sword, the Christians have overcome the Pagans, and the Gothic horde has for the time being overcome the Roman empire—given it a deadly wound by a sword. Rev. xiii. 14. But under the influence of the Papacy, the empire that had been so low from the effect of the sword, so that it is difficult to locate the head that followed the imperial head that existed in John's day. Rev. xvii. 10. This empire revived under the influence of the Papacy. In our next communication it will be in order to speak of the black horse of the third seal.

"Resolved, That inasmuch as the Conference Board have an over abundance of labor to perform, that they be relieved from seeing after the expenditure of the evangelical fund, after raising the same, and this Conference by appointment constitute a separate and distinct Evangelical Board for this purpose.

That said Board be constituted of five members, at [illegible] two of whom, with the President as chairman, shall constitute a quorum to do business, all of whom shall be selected apart from the ministers, thus guarding against any possible suspicion of desire for preferment, or of desire to have any thing promulgated other than the gospel and its obedience.

This Board is to obtain information from over the State where best to work, and in conjunction with the Evangelist direct accordingly.

The means from each individual of the congregations to be paid to the Secretary thereof, by him sent to Secretary of Conference, and he...to hand same to the Treasurer, who shall disburse the same by paying over to [illegible] evangelical Board, as ordered by [illegible] Board."

Further, at following November Conference the following was presented by committee on ways and means and unanimously adopted and confirmed by the Conference. To wit: "Resolved that the Evangelical Board be authorized to fill vacancies in the position of State Evangelist, or to employ additional help, so long as said Board does not contract beyond the amount of means provided."

Twenty Years a Pope.

[Brother J. M. Fyfe sends us the following article taken from a St. Louis paper of Feb. 20, 1898. It is a letter written from Rome, and gives an idea of what has been accomplished since Leo XIII. took his seat. Our readers will note the changes in the French nation since this was written, and also the condition of affairs in England, as has been given of late in this paper.—ED.]

"Tomorrow, February 20, Leo XIII. completes the twentieth year of his papacy, the longest reign in the entire history of the Roman Catholic Church, and advantage may be taken of the opportunity to draw attention to the importance of his eventful term. When he succeeded to the tiara, the prestige of the Vatican was at a singularly low ebb. The Holy See was in open conflict with Germany and with Russia, in both of which countries the leading Roman Catholic prelates were imprisoned or exiled. With France the relations were so strained that actually the Ministers of the day declared from the rostrum of the Chamber of Deputies that clericalism was the chief evil of the country and the principal foe of the republic. The other nations of Europe had become so wearied by the constant and undignified complaints of Pius IX. against the Italian Government that they had ended by treating the protests of the Holy See with polite indifference and as a bore, while the relations between the Italian Government and the papacy were such that the former committed all sorts of arbitrary acts, and even threatened at the time of the conclave to occupy the Vatican with its troops unless its wishes were complied with with regard to the election of the new Pope.

Today the tables are turned. It is the Italian Government which is craving the support of the Vatican against the forces of the revolution which threaten to engulf the monarchy, the Pope holding in his hands the key to the situation, through his power, to send to the polls at least 60 per cent of the entire electorate, who have hitherto been kept from taking part in any of the parliamentary elections by his order. Leo XIII. can send these 60 per cent of the electorate to the polls either for the monarchy or in support of a republic, and thus has the whip hand over the Italian Government.

It is probable that a far better understanding exists between church and state in Italy than people abroad realize. For it must be borne in mind that any appearance of an alliance between church and state in Italy would inevitably impair the power and influence of the Vatican abroad, and at the same time diminish its resources. The latter are chiefly derived from foreign contributions, which are subscribed abroad under the impression that the Pope is subjected to persecution. Were the contrary to be known there would no longer be any reason for this financial form of sympathy, and it is a significant fact that the subscriptions from abroad have always been the largest when the relations between church and state here have seemed at their worst, while as soon as there was an appearance of more friendly relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal the contributions have notably declined.

Then, too, there is no doubt that foreign governments and even the foreign clergy would be less obedient to the orders of the Pope were they to believe for one moment that he was influenced by the Italian Government or even by the considerations which might appeal to him as a patriotic Italian. For, while foreign Catholics are ready to accept the supremacy of an Italian Pope in matters eccle-siastical, they are extremely alive to the danger of his spiritual supremacy and influence being utilized for the furtherance of ordinary Italian politics abroad. This in itself will show how extremely careful the Pope has been in steering the papacy midway between a war on the Quirinal leading to reprisals and a peace with the Vatican government which would impair the power of the Holy See abroad. . .

Leo XIII., while he has never yet abandoned his claims for the restoration of temporal power, has never relegated them to the background and devoted his entire attention to the development of the moral power and influence of the Holy See. And in this he has succeeded to an astounding degree, as will be realized by comparing foreign relations of the Vatican today to what they were when he became Pope. He has not only made peace with Germany, but has reduced that greatest military power of Europe to the position of a petitioner, asking for his support in its internal affairs. For without the support of the Pope the Kaiser would never have obtained the passage through the Reichstag either of his military septennate bill nor of his naval programme, the Emperor in return having not only consented to the return to Germany of the exiled religious orders and now of the Jesuits, but likewise undertaking to present to the Catholic Church the Coenaculum, or building at Jerusalem, in which the last supper took place, and which has been given to him by the Sultan—a building to obtain possession of which Russia went to war with Turkey in 1854.

Leo XIII. has likewise re-established friendly relations with Russia. The Catholic bishops and clergy have been recalled from exile and restored to their sees. In Spain it is admittedly the support of the holy father that keeps little King Alfonso on the throne and the Carlists at bay, and the same may be said with regard to King Charles of Portugal. In France the church is today hand in glove with the republic, which latter owes to Leo XIII a deep debt of gratitude for having withdrawn the support of the French clergy from the monarchical cause and transferred it to the existing regime. In the Netherlands, formerly the home of the reformation, Catholicism has developed to such a degree within the last twenty years under Leo's guidance that today the majority of the council of guardians of the young Queen are members of the Church at Rome. In England, too, all old-time prejudices with regard to popery seem to have disappeared, the government being about to build a Roman Catholic university in Ireland, while state and society accord to Cardinal Vaughn, the Catholic metropolitan, the same honors and regard as to the primate of the Church of England.

Above all is Leo XIII. entitled to admiration by his endeavors to keep his church abreast of modern progress and enlightenment and to prove that Catholicism is not reactionary, but liberal. An aristocrat by birth, he is the most democratic prelate who has ever occupied the chair of St. Peter, and seeks to instill the precept of the founder of the Christian faith to the approval of [redacted] effect that the church is the mother of [redacted] those who most need her care, that is to say, the poor, the oppressed, in a word, those who are popularly described as step children of nature. He is of the masses, in fact, rather than the classes, and is never tired of recalling that the founder of the faith, although born of the royal line of David, saw daylight in a stable, spent his early career among fishermen and artisans and died the death reserved for the basest of criminals.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 3, 1901. NUMBER 13.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with Him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Seeds.

Think what a number of queer little seeds,
Of flowers and mosses, of ferns and of weeds,
Are under the leaves and under the snow,
Waiting to grow!

Nothing's so small or hidden so well
That God cannot find it, and soon he will tell
His sun where to shine, and the rain where to go,
Helping it grow!

Selections.

The Moral Tendencies of the Twentieth Century.

As one stands on the boundary of the year, the decade, and the century, and looks out into the future, the question springs to the lip, What have these periods for us? The future is sometimes scanned by the light of the past; and what will be is fairly well calculated by what has been.

Now, if from our altitude on this boundary line, we take a retrospect, we shall see that the century from which we have passed, has been the most wonderful of any in this world's history. In many respects the world has been wonderfully transformed during the past century. This century has given birth to Bible societies, mission societies, tract societies, religious journalism, and the most of the great philanthropic institutions, which are calculated to mitigate sufferings, and elevate from degradation. It has been a wonderful century.

We cannot in this brief article speak at length of its wonderful improvement in the mechanical departments. Some things have become so common, and we consider them so essential, that we almost forget that they had their birth into existence in the nineteenth century. For instance, the first steel pens in 1880; envelopes in 1885; the first iron steamship in 1830; the first steel plate in 1880; the first street cars in 1827. Locomotives were first used in this country in 1829. Kerosene was first used for lighting purposes in 1826. The first complete sewing machine was patented by Elias Howe in 1846. The first telegraph instrument was successfully operated by Prof. Morse in 1842. The manufacture of pins in this country commenced this side of 1812. These are only a few of the more common things that we had almost forgotten were of such recent date.

But when a careful study is made of the improvements of the century, one stands amazed at the marvelous increase of knowledge, and asks, "What shall be the end of these wonders?" Our educational institutions and methods of teaching have kept pace with all else, and the world has never before witnessed an approach even, to the educational refinement of the present time.

But what are the moral tendencies of these times? Is there more of faith in God and his Word? more of reverence and trust, more of self-sacrificing devotion to the work of God? more of love for, and confidence in each other? Is there more of worship, and love for God and man? Is there less of the saloon, and more of the church than when this century came in? Does the need of disciplinary institutions decrease with the passing of the years? Is the record of crime diminishing? Are there any municipalities that have no further need of police force? any counties that are without jails? any commonwealths that have no penitentiaries? Is the gallows a relic of the past?

The truth is, that the century closes, with this world's inhabitants facing the marvelous paradox of unparalleled civilization and barbarism; sobriety and drunkenness; spirituality and infidelity; refinement and ignorance; devotion and irreverence. In spite of all improvements named, and facilities for improvement enjoyed at the close of the best century of the ages, the moral tendencies are downward. Crime is reduced to a fine art. Prison capacities are necessarily increased. In prison garb may be found educational refinement, as well as barbarous ignorance. The filthiness of Pompeii is rivaled by every city of every country. Gambling hells, dives, and brothels are passed by the authorities with scarcely a notice. When police attention is called to them, one is met by the reply that no complaint is made of them. We have become used to these things. The church, the saloon, the school, and the distillery seem to be on quite friendly terms, not to say intimate.

We know of one city in New England, whose city school board is presided over by a brewer; and in that same city there is a church of elegant brownstone, with a saloon actually butted up against it. There seems to be friendly accord between them. One entrance takes one into the place where it is read from the Book of God: "No drunkard hath eternal life," and a few feet farther, one enters the regularly legalized and protected drunkard manufactory.

This refined age has become so used to sin, that a sense of "the exceeding sinfulness of sin" is pretty nearly lost. Old-fashioned conviction for sin is a well-nigh lost experience. Conversions that have reformation in them are rare. The church has become in too many cases a playhouse, and its membership a religious club for mutual entertainment. As a rule, the man who in a wealthy pulpit condemns the saloon, speaks his convictions concerning the theatre, the whist-club, progressive euchre, and advises honest and Christian methods of church finance, and calls for separation of Christians from heathen lodges, is preparing to move. Often the church member lights his cigar, or a pipe, as soon as well out of the sacred service, disapprovingly criticises the sermon over his wine at dinner, if wealthy, cider or beer, if not wealthy.

Official figures show that more money is spent in the United States for intoxicants and tobacco than for housekeeping, church, schools and missions combined. There are comparatively few churches in cities that do not pay more for lodge dues, and theatre tickets, than for church expenses, and then cry hard times, and resort to all kinds of fantastical advertising to raise church funds. Can it be thought a strange thing that the church of God is crawling in weakness, and losing her hold upon the masses?

The unchurched masses are conscious of these conditions, and pass the church by with a feeling of disgust. The pulpit has tamely surrendered, and in many cases leads in this wholesale apostacy. In many cases there are as rank expressions of infidelity heard from the pulpit as from the lecture platform. The press greedily grasps what will sell; everybody reads these flippant expressions of infidelity, and they are passed along; young people read them and think it progressive to be more or less skeptical.

These are the general moral tendencies attending the crossing of this line of the centuries. But is there no good? Yes, much. There are sincere, devoted, spiritual Christian people who mourn this condition. And we are thankful that there are so many, who have eyes and ears and heart for these times. There probably was never a time when the church and the world needed men, "tall men" and "love-crowned" more than now. And there never was a time probably, when there were better men than now. They have not all bowed to Baal and kissed him. They are old-fashioned; they still believe the Bible. They utilize the great improvements of this wonderful age for Christian purposes. They attend church, both preaching service and prayer-meeting, and many of them even feel an interest in the Sunday school work, and that of the various departments of the church. These are not all old people like Simeon and Anna either; many of them are young people of the good old gospel type. They are not ashamed of Jesus as he is on trial in his truth, present up-to-date truth before the bar of popular sentiment. Jesus will not be ashamed of them at his coming, when things are reversed, and the world stands before his bar, which will surely be the case ere long.

The moral tendencies which mark the opening of the twentieth century will continue, and develop until the Master comes. The prophecies declare it. The Noachic conditions are to be duplicated (Matt. xxiv. 37). A pen painting of the last day condition of the nominal church is found in 2 Tim. iii. and also chapter iv., and other passages. The attitude of the true church may be read in Matt. xxv. 1-13 inclusive. There will be some [illegible] translation, deathless, at [illegible] read in 1 Thes. iv. 13, and onward.

How far shall the church pass into this century ere he shall come? Who can tell? Happy they who are walking in the old paths (Jer. vi. 16) when he comes, and are looking for him, and loving his appearing (2 Tim. iv. 8). The individuals who stood amid these currents and moral tendencies will compare favorably with martyrs.

Gospel work in every department grows more difficult continually. Methods which were fruitful twenty-five years ago are comparatively fruitless at present. There are comparatively few people who read good, sound, saving Scriptural literature today. People in general do not attend church as formerly. Even those who tell us that to be right with God is to reach and save multitudes of sinners condemn themselves, for in many instances they are the poorest soul-winners amongst us. The truth is the nominal members of the churches are growing more worldly, while the spiritual are coming nearer to God, and the outside world cares less every year for the church and is more lodge-bound. These are the moral tendencies of our times. And my dear reader, if you are not caught in the fatal current, it will be because of the grace of God that saves and keeps his own. 2 Cor. vi. 14-18 reads now just as it used to, and happy they who read, learn, believe and obey.—O. H. Wallace in Crisis.

Question No. 3.

If part human and part divine, what was the use of sending him the Spirit at his baptism?

In his physical make-up or constitution there was no admixture of flesh and spirit. He was not part mortal and part immortal. The animal first, separate and distinct, afterward the spiritual. No such thing is possible as a mixture of the animal and spiritual natures. His conception and birth had a great deal to do in shaping his career, but knowledge and discipline that followed added to his natural proclivities perfected him. Spiritual perception in men and women is born in them, and may be cultivated and made strong by use or exercise in responding kindly to revealed truth. It is possible to be intellectually great and morally idiotic. Jesus was not of that make,—he was not a vessel of dishonor, nor was he misshapen in the hand of the Potter. God laid the Cornerstone of his existence, excluding the infirm will and purpose of man with his inordinate lusts, and uncontrolled passions of the flesh. There was purpose in the birth of him who was not only to be the Lord's Anointed higher than the kings of the earth, but a man of "sorrow and acquainted with grief," whose soul or life was to be an acceptable sin offering. Figuratively speaking he is styled the "Lamb of God" without spot or blemish to make an offering for sin in behalf of those who being "without strength" were unable to deliver themselves.

There is perhaps no other element of revealed truth more offensive to the natural man, be he learned or unlearned in the wisdom of the world, than the idea of blood-cleansing for sin,—that is the necessity of becoming justified—made free from sin by the divinely appointed way of sin's forgiveness. "If the Son make you free ye shall be free indeed, said Jesus, to the Jews. He that serveth sin is the servant thereof, and the servant abideth not in the house forever," but the Son abideth and is able to make you free. The Jews claimed they were free born, and were never in bondage, and this is just what the people in our day feel and say. They see no necessity for a sin offering. They can see Jesus as a martyr, but nothing more, and a martyr would as well be the son of a sin-stricken man, as the Son of God. It is humiliating to the independent mind to think itself estranged from God on account of sin, and therefore needing justification through blood [illegible] that Jesus died for us, that is on our account. It required a sinless man to become an acceptable offering, and this is why Deity interposed to prepare what man could not possibly provide, because of weakness. The gift of the Holy Spirit at his baptism made him manifest to Israel as the Son of God and the long promised Anointed One. John was informed that upon whom he saw the Spirit descending and remaining upon him, the same is he who baptizeth with the Holy Spirit. John further says, I saw and bear record "that this is the Son of God." Moreover, a voice from heaven declared, "This is my Son in whom I am well pleased." The abiding power of the Holy Spirit was evidence of his approval, it was also the testimony of the Father bearing witness in the marvelous signs and wonders he performed in the eyes of the people. The Holy Spirit added nothing to his inner character, it did not convert a sinner into a saint, for he pleased the Father before his baptism, no less than after his immersion in the Jordan. The reception of the Holy Spirit is not designed to destroy the infinities of human nature, but rather to make manifest the power and glory of God in attestation of some message or work being accomplished through the agency of man. Moses, Samuel, David, Solomon and many others were possessed of the Holy Spirit, but nevertheless subject to various weaknesses; none were perfect in character. When they spake, being moved by the Spirit, they gave utterance to the truth, but when they acted from the impulse of the flesh, they went astray. Jesus was the one and only exception—who did always those things that pleased the Father. It was unnecessary for him to offer animal sacrifices, for he was not a sinner. "Burnt offerings" were not required of him, for he delighted to do the will of the Father, and he did it to perfection. Deity organized him, or as Scripturally expressed prepared him for this very purpose—not permitting him to become subject to hereditary infirmities common to the sons of men. The secret of godliness ought to be apparent to the thinking mind. From whence did he derive the ability to succeed where all others had failed? Matthew's and Luke's narrative of his conception and birth makes all plain. Further comment is needless. The theory that he was the son of Joseph is weak every way. It cannot account for the "prepared body"—the perfect obedience, the absolute perfection, pertaining to the unblemished "Lamb of God."

Question 4 next.

GEO. MOYER.

Are We Orthodox?

Orthodoxy is soundness of doctrine. To be orthodox is to have a true opinion, a true belief, a true faith. At different times tenets of orthodoxy have been established under the assumption that they were expressive of Bible doctrine, but true orthodoxy must nevertheless not be judged by these tenets but by the direct testimony of Holy Writ.

We may first ask, "Who are not orthodox?" Evidently they who do not accept the Bible as the book of sound doctrine, of a sound faith, of a sound hope. Merely holding that the Bible is a good book, that Jesus was a good man, that God revealed some truths to Abraham, Moses and the Prophets, to Jesus and his disciples, constitutes but a weak, a partial faith. Though there is but one God and Jesus the Christ is his Son, the so-called Unitarian church, cannot be included as orthodox, i. e. [illegible] orthodox, inasmuch as it disregards much of the Bible, however good and earnest its members may be. Though God desires the salvation of all men and would not that any be lost, though a universal kingdom is promised to the Anointed One to be established in the age to come, the Universalist church does not claim Bible authority, unless it be very partially, for its teachings and is rightly called unorthodox. Though God is a spirit and we should [illegible] spirit, though we [illegible] life, the various classes of spiritualists, new church followers, spiritual scientists, and the like accept human, generally pagan, definitions of spirit and spiritual, and discard more or less the Bible. These and other Bible unbelievers are not orthodox.

All that aim to accept the whole Bible under various somewhat reasonable interpretations may in a literal sense be regarded as of the orthodoxy. Yet many of these must be extremely doubtful. Many cast away all practical belief in a real resurrection, many in a Biblical, a real and personal second coming, second appearance, second presence of the Christ. Many accept what has struck their fancy and discard or interpret away whatever does not agree with it. In a strict sense none of these should be called orthodox.

What are we? In the strictest sense, in every reasonable sense orthodox. We examine all Scripture for truth. We make use of all clear light. We prove, i. e., try, test, examine, study all things and hold fast that which has full substantiation, that which is harmonious with all God's teachings. We are pleased to investigate all sensible evidence. We weigh all opinions in Bible scales. But we will accept no innovations of doctrine, nothing on this side of the Apostolic church, the true Church of God of Pentecostal, of Pauline purity. We need never deny orthodoxy, but may well affirm it with vigor.

J. C. HATCH.

Editor Restitution:—

It has been nearly a year since I have written any thing for the dear old paper, and I would like to write a few thoughts along the line of spiritual blessedness as given by Christ and the Apostles. We find in Luke xiii. 23, that Jesus was asked a very pointed question concerning the future destiny of the human family. he says, "Lord, are there few that be saved?" Jesus answered saying, "Strive to enter in at the straight gate: for many I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." I do not apprehend this would be very encouraging to one who was inclined to be skeptical or weak in the faith. The word strive means to put forth every effort that we can to gain eternal life, and a home in the kingdom of God. Who is there that starts out in any kind of business and makes a success of it, if they do not put forth every effort to come out successful in their undertaking. The true Christian has to put forth every effort to gain their reward of future life. Paul says in his letter to the Romans, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice unto God, which is your reasonable service." God has not asked us to do anything that is unreasonable, or beyond our power to do. Now the Apostle says, "Be not conformed to this world," that is to say, do not give way to the evil propensities of your nature, as they would lead you in that broad highway that leads to destruction, "But be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God," or in other words, we should "Study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." That is, we should study for the purpose of finding out how much we can do to please God, and not for the purpose of finding out how little we can do and still retain his favor. For Jesus says, "Many I say unto you will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." Why is it that some will seek to enter and not be able to gain an entrance? We think we have an answer in the parable of the talents in Matt. xxv. 14 to 28, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man that was called into a far country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods, he gave to one five talents, to another two, and to another one, and after a while the master came back and called his servants to make an account, the one to whom [illegible] and good are the talents, the master said, Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. He also that had received two talents came with two other talents, and the master gave him the same answer as the first, but when the third one came he said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou had not sown, and I was afraid and went and hid thy talent in the earth, lo, there thou has that is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, take therefore the talent from him and give it unto him that hath ten talents." Yes, dear brothers and sisters in Christ, if we fail to improve the talents that we have, our crown will be given to another who is more worthy than we. Oh, let us strive with all our might to keep in that straight and narrow way, that will finally bring us a crown of rejoicing that fadeth not away. Paul compares it to a race, he says, "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith;" in another place he tells us to "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, where unto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." Oh, are we girt about with the breastplate of righteousness, or are we becoming weak and overpowered by the iniquity that is in the world? Jesus says, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." We should ever be on our guard, and be ready, for we know not when the Master will come. Yours in hope of the soon coming kingdom,

JOS. WILLIAMS.

Blasphemy.

"Blasphemy in Scripture means not so much a speaking against God, as the assumption of divine attributes or divine power where no rightful claim exists. Thus in Matt. ix. the scribes said of Jesus, 'This man blasphemeth,' because he said to the sick of the palsy, 'Thy sins be forgiven thee.' Jesus could rightly say so, therefore their charge was false. Rome through her priests cannot rightly say so, therefore our charge against her is true; she blasphemeth. Again in John x. 30-33, we read that when Jesus said, 'I and my Father are one,' the Jews took up stones to stone him, saying, 'For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy, and because that thou being a man, makest thyself God.' Jesus and his Father were one (in purpose), therefore the charge of blasphemy was vain; the Pope and God are not one, therefore our charge of blasphemy is true. He that says, 'I am the sole last supreme judge of what is right and wrong,' blasphemeth." Words of the Little Horn by H. E. Brookes.

Report.

"Rejoicing in hope" are eight others of Adam's posterity, because of having heard and obeyed the teachings and commandments of Jesus. The writer held a series of meetings at Burr Oak, Ind., beginning Feb. 20; closing March 22, during which time seven were baptized into the name of Christ. On Sunday afternoon, the 24th, one more, desirous of the same hope decided to comply with the holy commandments. The church at Burr Oak is small, but the majority of its members are doing active service in the Master's vineyard, which is attested by the above report. May each one continue active throughout their mortal career, and eventually hear the "well done."

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 3, 1901.

"WORDS hurt more than blows and heal more than balsams."

"No man without intense faith in something," said James Russell Lowell, "can ever be in earnest."

SALVATION is not a present possession, but a future reward. 1 Pet. i. 5; 13; Heb. ix. 28; Rev. xii. 10.

It is not the soul which is so precious,—but its redemption. Psa. xlix. 8; 1 Pet. i. 17, 19; and ii. 4, 7.

"WORK at something,—anything rather than nothing. Idleness leaves the mind a prey to reverie, and reverie tips to the ditch."

SALVATION is not the deliverance of immortal souls from the flames of hell, but resurrection to eternal life. John v. 29; 1 Cor. xv. 42, 53.

WHY do not the clergy preach from a "Thus saith the Lord, the soul is immortal? Ans. Because the Lord never said any such thing."

IT is not ignorant babes, but believing adults, who are the proper subjects of baptism. Mark xvi. 15, 16; Acts xix. 5; John iii. 5.

BAPTISM is not an unessential and optional ordinance, but a saving,—and therefore an imperative ordinance. 1 Pet. iii. 21; John iii. 5; Gal. iii. 26, 29.

THE apostacy and not apostolicity, was to prevail between the two advents of Christ. 2 Thess. ii. 1–12; 2 Tim. iv. 3, 4; Rev. xvii. 1–6; Acts xx. 29, 30; Luke xviii. 8.

EVERY increase of privilege or ability means obligation to contribute to the general well-being. Favored men ignore this law, but it will awake to bite them some day."

"Beautiful faces are they that wear
The light of a pleasant spirit there.
Beautiful hands are they that do
Deeds that are noble, good and true;
Beautiful feet are those that go
Swiftly to lighten another's woe."

THE Jesus commission to preach the gospel in all the world was not left to the clergy to do, but accomplished by the apostles. Rom. x. 18; Col. i. 23. The gospel preached from the pulpits is not the gospel of God, but the most daring negation of all that God ever promised.

REPENTANCE is not sorrow for sin, but a change of mind. The Greek word "Metanoia" so signifies. "Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance; (or reformation) for ye were made sorry after a Godly manner that ye might receive damage by us in nothing; for Godly sorrow worketh (produceth) repentance (or reformation) to salvation, not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death."

Punishments and Rewards.

The punishment of sin is not unending torture, but death. Rom. v. 12; and vi. 23; Eeck. xviii. 4.

The time of reward is not at death, but at the resurrection. Luke xiv. 14.

The locality of reward and punishment is not in the sky or under the earth, but on the earth. Prov. xi. 31; Psa. xxxvii. 9, 11, 22, 29, 34.

Believers are not rewarded by piecemeal, or installment, but all at once and all together. 1 Thess. iv. 17, and v. 10; Col. iii. 4.

The righteous only, and not the wicked, will be able to dwell with the everlasting burnings. Isa. iii. 14, 15, 16, 17; Rev. ii. 11.

The nature of believers' reward in not harp-playing where there is neither time nor space, but nation-ruling for 1000 years. Rev. xx. 4; v. 10; and ii. 26.

The people are not rewarded first and judged afterwards, but vice versa. Matt. xxv. 36–41; Heb. ix. 27.

"Never Give Up."

"Never give up" if you have a noble aim. Never confess yourself beaten. If there are difficulties in the way, struggle with them like a man. Use all your resources,—put forth all your strength, and "never say die." The case may seem hopeless, but there is generally a way out somewhow. Are you bound and fettered by hurtful habits? Do not despair. You can't do much to help yourself, it is true, but there is One who never fails to strengthen the young when he makes an honest attempt to overcome temptation and master an evil passion. "He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings." That is the experience of thousands of fellows who have felt their feet slipping, who have begun to sink in the quicksands of sin, and have reached out a hand to accept the loving help of the strong and gentle Christ. While he lives and loves, no man need ever "give up."

The Atonement. No. 3.

In resuming this important study, we invite our readers to return with us to Rom. iii. 24–26, where Jesus is set forth by God as a propitiation,—(not as a propitator) through faith in his blood, not through substitution; so that the passage as it stands ought to refute that idea. In the next place it should be noted with emphasis that God set him forth to be a propitiation. This hardly looks as if God needed to be propitiated. And we read in 1 John ii. 2 that "He is the propitiation, (not propitiator) for [illegible] we refer the questioner back to Romans iii. again, for the answer:—"Through not through vicarious suffering. In 1 John iv. 10 we read, "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation (not propitiator) for our sins." Had his blood not been shed no one could have had faith in it, and then of course, according to Rom. iii. 24–26 there could have been neither justification nor reconciliation. If God had not been

FAITH IN HIS BLOOD,"

PROPITIOUS ALREADY,

no proposition would have been set forth,—and no propitiation possible. How strange that people of far more than ordinary intelligence so readily accept the vicarious view of Christ's work. If at all vicarious, is it not wholly vicarious? If he died instead of sinners, did he not render perfect obedience to God instead of them? and if so, should not sinners be relieved of their other obligations? We see no use of talking about

PARTIAL SUBSTITUTION.

It surely must be one thing or the other. The fact that every one is to be judged according to his works, to our mind, disproves substitution. We are fully aware that the Lord Jesus is called "the Lord our righteousness;" and that "he was made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption." But if these words prove imputed righteousness, do they not also prove imputed wisdom, imputed sanctification, and

IMPUTED REDEMPTION,

etc? This being true what becomes of us, if he is righteous, and wise, and sanctified, and redeemed instead of us? This is the essence of substitution, if we understand it. Mr. Spurgeon addressing an audience of 20,000 people in the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, once summed up the gospel by the word "Substitution" and said, "Christ took the cup in both his hands and drank damnation dry;" and yet for many years subsequently, he depicted the sufferings of

LOST SOULS IN HELL

in lurid language; and thus exhibited an utter disregard for consistency, to say nothing of the truth or falsity of the doctrine. Not to extend the argument further; it will be understood that we believe and teach that Jesus performed the only act that could reconcile us to God. We agree with Paul that this was to make peace by the death of the cross. Not for a moment do we question the necessity of

CHRIST'S DEATH;

or claim salvation for any one without it; but we oppose the doctrine of substitution, because we believe in justification by faith; and because we do not believe guilt can be transferred to an innocent person; and because we believe our God to be just and righteous altogether, and therefore could not punish the innocent instead of the guilty, and because men die now, just as they died

BEFORE CHRIST DIED,

which they could not, if a substitute for them had been accepted; and because death, the wages of sin, was not a death to last for three days and three nights, but a death that returned the sinner to the dust as he was before he was formed out of it; and because Christ never saw corruption,—and because he is but alive, and alive forevermore. And because Romans iii. 25 shows that God set forth Christ a propitiation through faith to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God! The idea of forbearance is at variance with substitution, certainly. What need is there of forbearance after the acceptance of a substitute? If the debt is paid, how can it be forgiven?

NOT DEAD NOW

FAITH IN THE BLOOD

of Christ is necessary to forgiveness of sins,—therefore the doctrine of substitution is not true. Truly Christ died for us; but for does not mean in the place of, but in behalf of, as the other conditions exacted prove.

We will close this hasty statement of our convictions respecting the purpose of Christ's death with several reasons why it was necessary for Christ to die, although he did not die instead of any one:—

1. The Covenant made with Abraham, was the Covenant by which God brought Jesus again from the dead, after it had been brought into force by his own blood. Heb. xiii. 20; 1 Cor. xi. 25. All his brethren must receive life from that same Covenant.

2. Without shedding of blood is no remission of sin. Heb. ix. 22. Blood of bulls and goats would not suffice.

3. Covenants are not of force without the death of the testator.

4. He died [illegible] the curse of the law which was contrary to them, and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross.

5. He was made a curse for us (as above) that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles,—by removing the barrier, the wall of partition.

6. It was necessary for God to condemn sin in the flesh of the Alamic race.

7. He died that he might be Lord both of the dead and the living. Rom. xiv. 9.

8. He had to die to abolish death in his own case, and get the keys of death and the grave, and liberate his saints.

9. He died as an example for us to do likewise if need be.

10. He died to manifest the amazing love of the Father and of the Son for sinners doomed to die.

11. It was thus written and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem.

12. He was raised again for our justification; this involved his death first. Being raised he was set before us as the object of justifying faith. Had he remained under the power of death himself,—he could save no one. So that the rallying point and power which gave a lasting impetus to the gospel was not Jesus crucified on the cross; but the Son of God raised from the dead,—triumphing over death! He was put to death because he claimed to be God's Anointed Son. Such a claim could only be successfully maintained by demonstrating the truth of it. His resurrection did this. Thank God for the words of the angel: "He is not here, he is risen as he said."

Trusting that what we have said on this great theme may be helpful to our correspondent and others, if in nothing else, in causing them to search and see if these things be so,—and having proved all things, hold fast to that which is good. Every ray of divine light will cause the devout believer to love God more and to serve him more faithfully.

Obituary.

To our Christian Friends:

My husband, Edwin Hoyt, Sr., fell asleep in Jesus, on the morning of the 23rd of March, 1901, at the age of 87 years, 3 months and 13 days; having been born in Castleton, Vt., the 10th of December, 1813. His faith in God and his Word, and of life in Christ never wavered, and even when his mind was impaired to see almost everything else in a false light, he would not relinquish what had become as second nature to him, daily reading the Bible and as long as possible to bend his knees in prayer, until less than ten days before he expired. He was only four days on his bed, the last two entirely unconscious. Circumstances rendered it necessary to have our last care for him as quiet as possible. The pastor of the First Congregational church, who had conducted similar services for three other members of our family in about one and a half years, read the Scriptures largely, some hymns of our selection, prayer, made some appropriate remarks on his life and character; and we laid him to rest until the "illustrious morn" shall dawn. As the casket was being softly and silently lowered to its resting place, the pastor read the hymn, commencing:

"Dares thy bosom faithful tomb," etc.

As I am able to write but little, any brother or sister who have known him during our residence here of 44 years, and his labors, may add anything they wish to this brief notice.

In love and hope,
CATHARINE G. HOYT.

For Our Children.

To My Dear Young Friend.

Not many days are given us for youth,
They are the days that fit us for the rest.
In them we form the base of noblest truth,
Of all life's duties, all that's purest, best
In God's good world; or else of self we make
But a poor curse in his far-reaching realm,
A curse to pay him ill who for our sake
Did give as his own Son to take the helm
To steer us through this age's every storm,
To guide us onward to the "Age to Come."
May you, in youth, e'er feel that truth doth form
A sure passport to Christ's prophetic home.

The Story of Israel. No. 100.

THE DIVISION OF THE LAND.

Num. xxxiii. 50–56; xxxiv. 1–29; xxxv. 1–15; Deut. xx.

Well, little Glen, you are here this time are you? And Ward, and Cleo? Glad to see you all. It is pleasant to meet again. I should not wonder if some little Jewish boys would join our class before long. They want to study [illegible] and learn the story of their people. I wish we knew their names; it would be nice to talk to them.

Who speaks in the first verse of our lesson, Glen?

"The Lord himself. The people were still in the plains of Moab by Jordan, near Jericho."

What did he say to Moses?

"That when they had passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan, they must drive all the inhabitants of the land out before them."

Did they think they could do it, Glen?

"I am quite sure they did for they did not act naughty this time like they did when the Lord brought them so near to Canaan before?"

"Why were they to destroy the pictures, Auntie? What was there bad about them?"

They were bad pictures Ward, or pictures that were worshipped just as images are. Roman Catholics have pictures in their churches that they bow before. We never do. All the molten images were to be destroyed with the pictures; and the high places were to be torn down.

"But I would'nt have thought God would have had people driven out of their homes Auntie, I should not like to be driven out of mine."

It was God's land, little Glen. He had a right to rent it to whomsoever he pleased. He had set apart this land for his own people a long time before the Canaanites settled in it. He intended it to be the Metropolitan land of the world—or the land from which all the rest of the earth was to be ruled. The seat of God's government,—the New Jerusalem and the throne of Jesus are to be there. It is "the fold," into which the Good Shepherd will gather his sheep. All the people who have taken possession of that land since Israel and Judah lost it, have been thelves. They have not come into the heirship to the beautiful fold by getting into Christ, and so, they have no title to it no more than the Canaanites had of old. Only the descendants of Abraham, and those who come into that nation by adoption, can live there and share in its blessings and glories when Jesus comes, for only they have their names in the deed made to Abraham, in the 15th chapter of Genesis.

God said to Israel, "I have given you the land to possess it." So there was nothing else for the Canaanites to do but to get out. God had been very patient with them. He had let them stay in his land a long time, and all the time they were not paying him a single cent for its use, but instead, were giving his money to make images, and pictures, and altars, and temples for the worship of Baal,—the great Sun-god of Babylon. They were not so bad when they first settled in Canaan, for in Abraham's time "Their cup of iniquity was not yet full". Gen. xv. 16. It is full now and they are to be punished and partially destroyed for their wickedness.

How was the land divided Auntie?

By lot, Jessie. You cast lots sometimes to see who shall have the prettiest dress or book. You do this by cutting strips of paper, or straws of different lengths and drawing them from some one's hand. The lot falls to the one who gets the longest piece. We do not know how the Israelites cast lots. The tribe that had the most people got the most land, the tribes that had fewer names got a less inheritance. Num. xxvi. 53–56.

Eleazer and Joshua, together with one prince out of each tribe, were to "divide the land by inheritance." Num. xxxiv. 17, 18–29.

To the Levites were to be given 48 cities with suburbs around each, "for their cattle, their goods and all their beasts." These suburbs were to reach out from the walls of the city for two thousand cubits, north, south, east and west. If the cubit used, measured 25 inches, who can tell how many acres of land belonged to one of these cities? Who will answer? Out of the 48 cities, six were to be taken for cities of refuge; three of these to be on one side of the river Jordan and three on the other. If an Israelite killed a man accidentally, and fled to one of these cities, he was safe, but if a friend of the dead man found him outside of the city of refuge, he was at liberty to avenge the death of his relative, by putting the manslayer to death. Num. xxxv. 27.

"How long did the slayer have to stay in the city?"

Until the death of the high priest, Ward.

"But what if a murderer fled to one of these cities?"

He could be taken and tried and put to death. Nothing could save the life of a murderer; no satisfaction (or money) was to be taken instead of his life. The land was accounted polluted if it was not "cleansed of the blood that was shed therein, by the blood of him that shed it. It could be cleansed in no other way, and the Israelites were commanded by the Lord not to defile the land by letting murderers go free. Num. xxxv. 30–34.

"Who were to give to the Levites their cities, Auntie?"

The tribes who had many cities, were to give many, those who had but few were to give few, Evelyn. Can any one give the names of the cities on this side Jordan, that were to be for cities of refuge, and tell who set them apart for the purpose?

"Bezer in the wilderness, in the plain country of the Reubenites; Ramath, in Gilead of the Gadites; and Golan in Bashan, of the Manassites, and it was Moses, who chose them. It is in Deut. iv. 41, 42, 43."

You must study the Bible a good deal, Neva, or you could not answer such questions so readily.

"I do, for I am so anxious to learn all I can, and now I want to ask a question. Why did Moses recount all the journeyings of the children of Israel, and write them out?"

Because the Lord commanded him to do it, that both they and we might trace their course in after ages.

"Another question Auntie,—Why did Moses repeat the ten commandments, and the whole civil law of the nation of Israel again?"

Because, the forty years were nearly up now. It was the first day of the eleventh month of the fortieth year. When he "spake to the children of Israel" "on this side Jordan in the wilderness;" "according unto all that the Lord had given him in commandment unto them." Deut. i. 1–4. All were dead of the older people who had heard him give the Law at Sinai. Some who had heard it there, of the younger Israelites, were at the time too young to remember it, and many little ones had been born since and had never heard it at all.

I was looking for this question, for it is something that used to puzzle me very much when a child. I could not understand why God should repeat things over so many times. I thought it tiresome then, but I do not now. I have learned that lessons only "stick to the heart," by constant repetition.

Have you found anything new in Deuteronomy, children, that you did not find in Numbers?

"I have! I have! Auntie!"

One at a time little ones. What is it Ella?

"It is about a king! The children of Israel are by and by going to set a king over themselves."

Sure enough. You are right Ella, for here it is, Deut. xvii. 14–20. The King was to be one of their brethren and not a stranger. He was not to multiply houses to himself, nor wives, nor silver, nor gold, nor to cause the children of Israel to return unto Egypt, for the Lord had said unto them "Ye shall not henceforth return no more that way."

In the 20th chapter of Deuteronomy, the Israelites were exhorted not to be afraid when they went out to battle against their enemies. Even though they had chariots and were many more in number, for the Lord their God would be with them who brought them up out of the land of Egypt.

The priests were to speak to the people to encourage them, when they had come nigh to the battle, that they might not tremble nor be terrified. We may look at this chapter again in our next lesson.

AUNTIE WISE.

Repentance without amendment is like continual pumping in a ship without stopping the leaks

Dear Friends in Christ:

I read in each copy of THE RESTITUTION of friends isolated from a church of our faith and I feel somewhat in the same plight myself as we have no meeting place of our faith nearer than Argos. I enjoy reading these testimonials, as they keep me continually in touch with the blessed hope. To read testimonials from others seems to keep up our hope and interest. It keeps us ever in remembrance of our duty and tends to invigorate us and aid in pushing the blessed work ahead. The great drawback to many churches is the lack of interest. Members fail to make an effort to interest one another, professing Christ possibly for years and never testifying for the Savior. There are many things we can do to strengthen others. It is true Christians must work out their own salvation. We should not be selfish lest we lose interest ourselves. When converts make a start let us continually speak words of encouragement to them, as they are only beginners in the field of the Lord, and we cannot expect too much of them in the start. Oftimes when a sinner was brought to the light and took up the cross of Christ, I have heard individuals, yes, "professed Christians," exclaim, "Why, that is so and so! he won't stick, he'll backslide as soon as the interest subsides." Shame on such a person, such babblers are the very persons who taunt the poor seeker of salvation, and cause them to backslide. Let us rather help these persons to bear their burdens by praying with them and talking to them of Christ at every possible opportunity. Let us not listen to the babbling world, but rather to the Lord. Pilate listened to the babbling crowd when Christ was brought before him, and allowed the Savior to be crucified without any effort to defend him. In union there is strength and a word of encouragement now and then keeps up the spirit of the work. We can have a great prayer and testimonial meeting in every copy of our paper. Let us pray that the interest may grow great and strong in the work for the Master.

Your brother in the faith,

"Why will you keep caring for what the world says? Try, O try, to be no longer a slave to it! You can have but little idea of the comfort of freedom from it—it is bliss! All this caring for what people will say is from pride. Hoist your flag and abide by it. In an infinitely short space of time all secrets will be divulged. Therefore, if you are misjudged, why trouble to put yourself right? You have no idea what a great deal of trouble it will save you. Roll your burden on him, and he will make straight your mistakes. He will set you right with those with whom you have set yourself wrong. Here am I a lump of clay; thou art the potter. Mould me as thou in thy wisdom wilt. Never mind my cries. Cut my life off—so be it. Just as thou wilt, but I rely on thy unchanging guidance during the trial. O, the comfort that comes from this!"

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, the requisite of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as a preparation for final salvation.

Poetry.

Some Other Day.

There are wonderful things we are going to do
Some other day;
And harbors we hope to drift into,
Some other day.
With folded hands, and oars that trail,
We watch and wait for a favoring gale
To fill the folds of an idle sail,
Some other day.

We know we must toil if ever we win,
Some other day;
But we say to ourselves, there's time to begin,
Some other day.
And so, deferring, we loiter on,
Until at last we find withdrawn
The strength of hope we leaned upon,
Some other day.

And when we are old and our race is run,
Some other day;
We fret for the things that might have been done,
Some other day;
We trace the step that leads us where
The beckoning hand of grim despair
Lends us yonder out of the here,
Some other day.

Short Sermons. No. 15.

The little family—Martha, Mary and Lazarus, composed this little family, who lived up in Bethany—a little village at the foot of Mount Olivet, two miles east of Jerusalem. This was a quiet and lovely little family. And more, they loved Jesus and Jesus loved them, and was often a welcome guest at their home. Why did Jesus love them more than many others? It was not because they were rich in this world, neither was it because they were fashionable and up to date folks. Not a bit of it, for they were poor common plain folks, and that is one reason why he loved them, and because there was affinity between them, and their hearts beat in unison with his, and to love them was natural and could not be otherwise. And this principle will hold good all the time, and everywhere. And if men and women do not love the Lord, his Word and his people above all else, it is their fault and misfortune and not his. Martha was a good, quiet, sensible woman, and loved the Master because his words and ways were so kind and lovely. But she like many others seemed to think that her first duty was to provide for this life. While her sister Mary was somewhat different in her make-up and her mind and disposition was more in harmony with the Master and his teaching. She regarded the things of this life as secondary matters. And she would easily find time and disposition to stop, sit down, and talk and listen to the Master. It was a rare treat for her to have this opportunity, and she enjoyed it much. Mary stands for the few who regard wisdom as the principal thing. While her good sister was more inclined to wash, scrub and cook a good supper for the Master, and thought it not fair for her sister to sit and listen so long to the Master, and let her do the work, so she complained to the Master about it. But she was sadly disappointed, as the many will be in the coming day, as the Master kindly rebukes her by saying, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things; but one thing is needful and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." Thus the Master plainly approves of Mary's course, and is a lesson for us all. For with his approval we can well afford to bear the scowls and growls of the many who have no time to listen and learn of the better way. Although they were so happy, so kind, so good and true; their brother was afflicted and lingers on and dies. They hasten the sad message to Jesus, who was far away. He lingers two days, tells his disciples plainly Lazarus is dead. And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent that ye may believe, as it was a greater miracle to raise the dead to life, than to heal the sick. Jesus says, "Let us go unto him," and he hastened to their home and found that the dead brother had lain in the grave four days already. Then Martha went out and met him on the way, and told him of her brother who had died and passed away. "Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou will ask of God, God will give it thee." What strong faith and confidence this is! How natural, plain and simple. Notice Martha knew her brother was dead and Jesus to comfort her did not contradict himself and facts, as modern preachers do, "miserable comforters, these." But he proceeds to comfort her by telling her the truth, Thy brother shall rise again: or thy brother who is now dead shall live again. This anticipates Job's question. And Martha is not ashamed of her faith, but responds, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." This is the plain Bible line of truth, and all opposition and inferential side issues are misleading. And to say the believer does not die, no qualification, is to contradict Jesus and facts, and try to make Jesus contradict himself, and more, it is to contradict and oppose the resurrection of the dead. Martha calls her sister privately—saying the Master is come and calleth for thee. Mary arose quickly and came unto him, and fell down at his feet, saying unto him, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." When Jesus saw her and her friends weeping, he groaned in spirit and was agitated, and said, "Where have ye laid him." They say, "Lord, come and see." Jesus wept. Jesus said, "Take ye away the stone." They did it. Jesus thanks his Father for hearing him, and then cries aloud, "Lazarus come forth," and he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave clothes. Jesus said, "Loose him and let him go." Jesus comes again to Bethany, they make him a supper. Martha as usual serves as waiter, but Lazarus sat at the table with Jesus, while Mary anointed his feet with costly ointment. This was a real sample of the resurrection of the dead, and a demonstration of divine power. The blind rulers conspire to have him also put to death. And poor Lazarus drops out of sight until the great resurrection morning.

"No Private Interpretation." No. 2.

Having in a former article conclusively shown the absurdities growing out of private interpretation, by consideration of the apostolic commission given by our Lord, we now wish further to consider the matter of the Spirit connected therewith. We have already shown when and where this spirit was received, and that it was the one "promised of the Father." Acts i. 4; Luke xxiv. 49. Where do we find this promise? In John xiv. 16, 17, "I will pray the Father and he will give even the Spirit of truth that he may abide with you forever." "Another helper that he may be with you to the age."—Diaglott. What would this do for them? "Teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you." ver. 15. Again, "When the Spirit of truth is come he will guide you into all truth.....will show you things to come." What need of this? Because, "I have yet many things to tell you, but you cannot bear them now." Jno. xvi. 12, 13, Diaglott. Therefore when it did come according to the promise of the Father, it was Jesus speaking to them, or the Father through him, thus leading them into all truth, by means of Holy Spirit was it not? What truth had been previously given them was from the Father, by means of the Holy Spirit, Jesus being the medium. "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God, for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him." Jno. iii. 34. Were they previously and up to this time without the Spirit? If so, they were a dead body, without life, "For the body without the Spirit is dead." If they had the Spirit, how and by what means did they get it? Jesus had it without measure, and he said, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth, (giveth life).....the words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are life." Therefore they that received his words and followed him, had the Spirit, had the light of life, thus ministered unto them an all sufficient guide, director and comforter, for the work they then had to perform. Yet not all the truth. Not sufficient to guide and comfort them, when sent out to perform the new work, as announced in the commission. Teaching all nations, reconciling both Jews and Gentiles unto God in one body by the cross. Eph. ii. 16. Bringing in Gentiles, making them fellow-heirs and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Eph. iii. 6, that they must now preach. Thus making in himself of twain one new man or body. Hence the promise given, that they should have further and all needed knowledge and comfort therefrom, by Holy Spirit to build up, and minister the same to this one body in Christ, that must live by being permeated by this one Spirit. That those sent forth did, by the Holy Spirit, thus construct the one body in Christ, I suppose no one will deny. But that in doing so, that they did it by ministering this one Spirit, to every individual member composing the one body. Some might be ignorant of the fact and demand the proof. If so, we will present some of it only, yet all sufficient to establish the fact. Paul to the Corinthians says, I Cor. xii. 13, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." Did the Spirit come abstractly and peremptorily do the baptizing and make them drink into it? Without consulting them? or was it not done, as on the day of Pentecost, when they commenced the work, when Peter speaking as the Holy Spirit gave utterance, said to those enquiring ones as what to do? Now pricked in the heart by believing the gospel they had just heard, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in (into) the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Thus they heard the words of the Spirit and willingly obeyed. "Thus drinking into the one Spirit" which was thus ministered unto them by Peter. To the Corinthian brethren Paul writes (2 Cor. iii.) in contrasting the ministration of the old covenant written in tables of stone, with that of the new in Christ, saying, "For as much as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle (writing) of Christ, ministered by us (apostles, ministers of Christ) not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart." From which we learn, from (2nd to 9th ver. inclusive) 1st, that they were ministers of the Spirit. Minister, to give; to supply.—Webster. 2nd, That they gave to, or supplied the Corinthian brethren with the Spirit. 3rd, That the brethren received it in their hearts (affections). Thus the "love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us." Rom. v. 5. Through hope begotten through belief in the glad tidings preached, as given by the Spirit, and thus "the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing that ye may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Spirit." Rom. xv. 13.

We are builded together an holy temple in the Lord, on the foundation of the Apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. In whom ye are also builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit. Eph. ii. 20-22. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you." I Cor. iii. 16. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." Rom. viii. 9. Therefore whoever has not the Spirit is not on the foundation, is no part of the building, because the building is composed of those having the Spirit. Whoever heard of people in Apostolic times asking God to give them the Spirit, that they might believe the truth, and know they were a child of God. Then the reception of the Spirit of truth, by believing it, brought the same into their own hearts, and therefore being led by it (to do what it said) they thereby had the full assurance that they were "sons of God," and could cry "Abba Father." Rom. viii. 14, 15, 16. This reversal of cause and effect is purely a latter day invention.

The Spirit of promise was to remain. It has never departed. Then whoever believed and practiced what it taught certainly had it in possession. It is surely so yet, for the age and purpose of the age for which it was given is not yet passed. Received in this way you have not only love, joy and comfort of hope through the Spirit, but also the knowledge obtained in no other way that produces the hope, the joy and the love. "We love him because he first loved us," not because he in some abstract way gives us hope, love and joy. Of any one thinking they have obtained the Spirit in some other way let me ask, What knowledge "of all truth" did it gain you? You may answer that my sins were pardoned and I am a child of God. But how did it give you the knowledge? Do you say by the change in my feelings? This kind of evidence would not be listened to in an earthly court, much less in the court of heaven. "There is a way that seemeth right to a man but the end thereof are the ways of death." There are many and various kinds of feelings wrought up by various so called religious means, other than the gospel, that many rely upon, none of which are even a clever counterfeit. Each and all leaving out the knowledge of "the all truth" which the gospel alone can give. The Spirit of truth abides. Let us all abide in it as the only sure guide.

Genesis. Chap. 21.

1. And the Lord visited Sarra even as he had said; and the Lord did unto Sarra even as he had talked.

2. And she conceived and brought forth for Habraam, a son in her old age, in the stated period even as the Lord had talked to him.

3. And Habraam called the name of the son that had been born unto him, whom Sarra had brought forth for him Isaak.

4. And Habraam circumcised Isaak on the eighth day even as God had enjoined on him.

5. And Habraam was one hundred years old when Isaak his son was born unto him.

6. And Sarra said the Lord did cause laughter for me; for whoever shall hear it will rejoice along with me.

7. And she said, Who will tell Habraam that Sarra is nursing a little boy, that I have brought forth a son in my old age?

8. And the boy grew and was weaned, and Habraam made a great reception the day that Isaak, his son, was weaned.

9. And Sarra saw the son of Agar, the Algyptian woman, who had been born unto Habraam, playing with her son Isaak.

10. And she said unto Habraam, Cast out this housemaid and her son; for the son of this housemaid shall not inherit with my son Isaak.

11. And the oracular word seemed very harsh in the sight of Habraam concerning his son.

12. But God said unto Habraam, Let not that be harsh in thy sight concerning the boy and concerning the housemaid. In all that Sarra may have said unto thee, do thou hearken to her voice, because in Isaak will thy seed have been called.

13. And as to the son of this housemaid I shall make him into a great nation, because he is thy seed.

14. And Habraam arose at dawn and took loaves of bread and a skin of water and gave them unto Agar, and placed the boy upon her shoulder, and sent her away; and she went away and wandered lost through the wilderness down to the Well of the Oath.

15. And the water of the skin failed, and she cast the little boy down beneath a plane-tree.

16. And she went away from him, about a bow-shot and sat down; for said she, I cannot see the death of my child; and she sat apart from him; and the child called for help and lamented.

17. And God heard the voice of the child from out the place where he was, and an angel of God called Agar from out the heavens and said unto her, What is it Agar? Fear not; for God hath hearkened unto the voice of the boy from out the place where he is.

18. Arise and take the child, and lay hold of it with thy hand; for I am going to make it into a great nation.

19. And God opened her eyes and she saw a well of living water; and went her way and filled the skin with water and gave the child to drink.

20. And God was with the child, and he grew and took up his abode in the wilderness; and became a bowman.

21. And he took up his abode in the wilderness of Pharan; and his mother took a wife for him from out Aigyptos.

22. And it came to pass in that period that Abimelech and Hochozath his bride-leader and Phichol the chief-leader of his host spake unto Habraam saying: God is with thee in all that thou doest.

23. Now then swear unto me by God that thou wilt not wrong me nor my seed nor my name, but that according to the righteousness that I have done to thee thou wilt do to me and to the land in which thou hast sojourned.

24. And Habraam said, I swear.

25. And Habraam reproved Abimelech concerning the wells of water which the servants of Abimelech had deprived him.

26. And Abimelech said unto him; I am not aware who did this thing to thee; nor didst thou tell me nor had I heard of it till today.

27. And Habraam took sheep and yearling bullocks and gave them unto Abimelech: and they both made a covenant.

28. And Habraam stood seven ewe-lambs of the sheep by themselves.

29. And Abimelech said unto Habraam, What are the seven ewe-lambs of these which thou hast stood by themselves?

30. And Habraam said: Thou shalt take seven ewe-lambs from me, that they may be an instrumental testimony for me that I dug this well.

31. For this reason he named the name of that place Well of the Oath-taking, because there they had both attested with an oath.

32. And they made a covenant at the Well of the Oath-taking; and Abimelech and Hochozath his bride-leader and Phicol the chief-leader of his host arose and returned into the land of the Philistieim.

33. And Habraam planted some arable land by the Well of the Oath, and invoked the name of the Lord, as O thou everlasting God.

34. And Habraam sojourned in the land of the Philistieim many days.

COMMENT.

It is a singular fact that of all the patriarchal names Adam and Isaak are about the only ones that have not been obscured by orthographical changes, to such a degree too that they, the patriarchs, would not recognize nor answer to the names they are known by now if they were called up probably. The preservation of these two names becomes still more remarkable since we as a race have our origin in the first Adam and our regenerative origin in the "last Adam" and are called "in Isaak" (which means "on an equality" that is to an equality of brotherhood) so to Christians at least the events recounted in this and a preceding chapter relating to the begetting and birth of Isaak are of special moment and interest, and the text cannot be scanned too closely.

Observe in the 14th verse that "unto the Well of the Oath" is omitted in the R. V. and the wilderness she is wandering in is called "Beer-sheba." It seems from the narrative that she was close to the "Well of the Oath" and did not know it when she cast the child down to die in despair. Then "the plane-tree" at the foot of which she cast the child is not "one of the shrubs." Then it was the child who lamented and called for help and not "she" as in the R. V. Also in the 17th verse "from the place where he was" omitted in the R. V. Also "an angel" instead of "the angel" as in R. V.

In the 22nd verse R. V. omits the name and office of one of the three persons who interview Habraam, namely "Hochozath his bride-leader."

Neither is the text followed strictly in the 23 I verse.

In the 25th verse R. V. has "well" for "wells." Their dispute was about several wells.

Observe that the name of the place of the oath-taking and covenant sealed with the "seven ewe-lambs" and so named for that reason is not translated in the R. V., but is called in English "Beersheba" so the reader is left in the dark about the naming of this very important historical place where so many important events in biblical history occurred before and subsequent to the naming of it.

In the 33d verse the R. V. says that Habraam planted near this well "a tamarisk tree." The text says "some arable land" or "a measure of land," and we can infer from the next verse that he lived near the "Well of the Oath" (or "oath-taking") for some time.

The Diary of Life

Life is a journey. Every day is a page in its diary. It may be blank or it may record a backward march; but if we wish to make a noble record it must show an advance. Every year is a volume. At the close of life we have a complete set. Then we have the extent of the journey; not merely what we have seen, but what we have imbibed and made a part of self, that which has been molded into our very being. An abstract of this, the sum total of effort and accomplishment, the angel of life enters into God's Book, and according to this will be our inheritance when we receive the new life. Dear young friend, we shall expect you to make a noble record.

Married.

Alonzo S. Wilkins and Allie M. Marshall were united in marriage March 6, in the Superior court, by W. O. Chapman, Judge of the Superior court of the State of Washington. Soon after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins took the boat on their wedding tour for down Sound points. Mr. Wilkins is well known in Tacoma, having lived here for the last fourteen years, and has been following the real estate and loan business since coming to Tacoma, and his knowledge as to values and investments are considered of great value, and is highly noted for his conscientiousness and energy; and is a truly business man in every sense of the word; and has a considerable amount of property. Miss Marshall is very pretty and noted for her sincerity and womanly ways, which makes her highly esteemed by all who know her, and is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, who recently moved to Tacoma from the East. Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins will make Tacoma their home. Yours in the faith,

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 50 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

So surely as the shadow follows the light—so surely the act follows the will.

To have a portion in the world is a blessing,—but to have the world for a portion is quite another thing.

"THE rich man lives happily, so long as he uses his riches temperately; and the poor man, who patiently endures want is rich enough."

EVERY face that habitually turns towards us with affectionate, guileless smiles, becomes beautiful in our eyes. And habitual frowns distort the noblest features, and render them hideous.

THOSE who eat most are not always the fullest; so those who read most have not always the most knowledge; they sink under a multitude of ideas,—and resemble the ancient gauls, who being too heavily armed, became useless in battle.

A LETTER from Bro. J. S. Hatch tells us to change his address back to Scirceville, Ind. His trip to California did not materially benefit his health, and he came back home. His correspondents please make note of the change.

FARADAY says, "The price of the temptation which urges us to seek for such evidence as are in favor of our desires, and to disregard those which oppose them, is wonderfully great. In this respect we fear we are all, more or less, active promoters of error."

THE foundation of content must spring out of man's own mind; and he who has so little knowledge of human nature as to seek happiness by changing anything but his own disposition will waste his life in fruitless efforts, and multiply the griefs he purposes to remove.

YESTERDAY, last week, last year,—they are gone. Yesterday was such a day as never was before, and never can be again. Out of eternity and darkness it was born a new, fresh day; into darkness and eternity it sank again forever. What were we doing yesterday?

TODAY is ours. Work while it is called today. Work what? Do the duty which lieth next you. Work out your own salvation. Do with thy might whatsoever thy hand findeth to do. Work how? Earnestly, faithfully, courageously, humbly, lovingly, prayerfully.

WHEN St. Columban said to Lunanus concerning his ardent devotion to learning, "My child, many out of undue love of knowledge have shipwrecked their souls." "My father," replied the boy with deep humility, "If I learn to know God I shall never offend him, for they only offend him who know him not."

THERE are no defects in man that the gospel of the grace of God will not purify; no relation of one's life which it will not hallow. Christ did not cast six devils out of Mary Magdalene and leave one; he cast out all the seven. He did not partly cure the lame man at the pool of Bethsaida; he made him every whit whole.

READER, if your religion is only a formal compliance with those modes of worship which are in fashion where you live,—if it cost you no pain or trouble, if it lays you under no rules or restraints, if you have no careful thoughts and sober reflections about it,—is it not weakness to imagine that you have entered in at the strait gate?

"THE sheep, though the most simple creature, is superior to all animals in this, that he soon hears his shepherds voice, and will follow no other. Also he is sagacious to hang entirely on his shepherd, and to seek help from him alone. He cannot help himself, nor heal himself, nor guard against wolves, but depends entirely and solely on the help of another."

WE learn devotion by prayer; charity by giving alms; meekness by forgiving injuries; humility and patience, by suffering; temperance by fighting against our unlawful desires. As we know meat by the taste, so do we know the things of God by practice and experience; and this, we take it is what Paul calls knowledge according to godliness, Titus i. 1.

BRO. J. B. CRATON, of Kansas, visited with the Church here last week, and on Sunday delivered two lectures on the Great Pyramid. He has made a study of this subject, and is able to tell the results of his investigations in a pleasant and interesting manner. Bro. Craton is on his way to Jerusalem, expecting to remain in the Holy Land and study its present condition, and its future. We trust his mission will be successful.

"LORD, let it alone this year also." The dresser of the vineyard who pleads for the tree, and would if possible, avert its doom, is manifestly the Son of God,—the Intercessor for men who ought to yield fruit but do not. Not as though the Father and the Son differed concerning such: or as though the counsels of the Father were wrath, and of the Son mercy; because righteousness and love are not qualities in him who IS righteousness and who IS love. They cannot, therefore, be set one against the other; "they are his essential being," says French.

RUSKIN says:—"As surely as we live, to those who act on what they know, more shall be revealed; and thus, if any many man will do his will, he shall know the doctrine whether it be of God. Any man,—not the man who has the most means of knowing, who has the subtlest brains, or sits under the most orthodox preacher, or has his library fullest of most orthodox books,—but the man who strives to know,—who takes God at his Word, and sets himself to dig up the heavenly mystery, roots and all, before sunset, and the night comes on when no man can work. Beside such a man, God stands in more and more real presence as he toils, and teaches him that which no preacher can teach, and no earthly authority can gainsay. By such a man the preacher must himself be judged."

"LIFE," says the late John Foster, "is expenditure; we have the use of it, but are as continually losing it; we have the use of it, as continually wasting it. Suppose a man confined in some fortress, under doom to stay there till death; and supposes there is for his use a dark reservoir of water there, to which it is certain none can ever be added. He knows, suppose, that the quantity is not very great; he cannot penetrate to ascertain how much, but it may be very little. He has drawn from it by means of a fountain, a good while already, and still draws from it every day. But how would he feel each time of drawing, and each time of thinking of it? Not as if he had a perennial spring to go to. Not 'I have a reservoir, I may be at ease!' No! but 'I had water yesterday—I have water to-day: but having had it, and my having it today, is the very cause that I shall not have it on some day that is approaching. And at the same time, I am compelled to this fatal expenditure!' So of our mortal, transient life! And yet men are very indisposed to admit the plain truth, that life is a thing which they are in no other way possessing than is necessarily consuming: and that even in this imperfect sense of possession, it becomes every day a less possession."

"Nature and Character."

God created the one, and man forms the other. The one is unchangeable except as God may change it at the end of the age, when the dead are raised at the resurrection of the just, while the other is as liable to be changed as the moral or immoral acts vary. "As a man thinketh so is he," in character. If he thinks and talks about the feats of valor of the victorious warrior, and acts with a view of attaining a similar honor, he will be moulded into the character of a warrior. And thus it may be said relative to the formation of any of the many good or bad characters in the world. Hence, the importance of thinking, talking, and acting aright. If we would have the character which pleases God, we must think about him, talk about him, and do his will.

The grand design of the wise and eternal God, as revealed in his Word, relative to man, is to induce him, by the power of the great motive,—the escape of death, on the one hand, and the attainment of life on the other—to so form a godly character as to be accounted worthy to have his mortal nature changed to the undying nature of God, at the resurrection of the just. The whole revelation of the exceeding great and precious promises and fearful threatenings of the whole Bible, are given to increase the power of this motive. And, in view of which, well may it be asked, "Why will ye die?" Why will you form a sinful character, and reap the wages of sin,—namely death? O, think and do right, that you may live."

A Living Faith.

A living faith moves right on to good works as a matter of course, and in them is consummated. Just as light and warmth from the sun, just as fragrance from a blossom; just as vegetation springs from seed planted in fertile soil,—just as song from a bird's throat,—or rain from an overfull cloud, or beneficence and loving kindness and tender mercies from the great heart of God,—so, activities looking to one's own purity and growth in grace and knowledge, and services in behalf of every righteous cause, are not only normal, but the inevitable outcome of a living faith. A living faith is obliged to show itself in this way. A living faith is dynamic. It grows, and quit grows it overturns things. Faith is a lively busy thing, so that it is impossible for it not to be ceaselessly working good. It does'nt ask if good works are to be done, but just does them. It may be safely set down for a fact then, that it is impossible to separate works from faith,—as impossible as it is to separate burning and shining from fire.

Education. No. 4.

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gellatly, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—ED.]

CRYSTALIZATION.

Deep in unfathomable mines,
With never-failing skill,
He treasures up his bright designs,
And works his sovereign will. —Addison.

If it were true, as taught by the Nebular theory, that at one period of the history of our planet all the material of which it is now composed was in a state of fusion, in which state it was whirled and circled for millions or billions of years, then certain things would have happened the evidence of which would be plain to all. For instance, everything would have been pretty well mixed up in that time, and all the different materials that compose the globe would have been blended into one homogeneous mass. We have an illustration of this ready to hand in the water of the sea. This substance, "in addition to the chlorides and sulphates of the sodium, magnesium, potassium, and calcium, includes silica, boric acid, bromine, iodine, flourine as acid, and the oxides of nickel, cobalt, manganese, aluminum, zinc, silver, lead, copper, barium and strontium, arsenic, gold, lithium, rubinicum, and cesium." So says the Encyclopedia Britannica, and any gentle reader who inadvertantly swallowed a mouthful at Rehoboth Beach will be ready to testify that it seems all there. Well it is the same on the other side of the Atlantic. I've sampled many a gulp three thousand miles away, and it is precisely the same dose. Moreover, the same authority quoted above informs us that when the ship Challenger made her celebrated voyage round the world in the interests of science she brought home samples of sea-water from all seas and from all depths, and when submitted to chemical tests it was found that the quantity of the various substances was practically the same, with the exception that the lime increased slightly with the depth. In like manner our atmosphere, composed of the two main elements, oxygen and nitrogen, and some minor ones, is so well stirred with its blowing that if one bottle of it brought from Cape Colony, another from Patagonia, a third from Alaska, and a fourth from Maryland, no chemist on earth could distinguish between them. So also would it be with the globular ocean of molten minerals simply solidified with cooling. A chunk of it broken off from any particular place would be a fair sample of what it was all over and all through, making some allowance for the heavier material sinking.

Now the story of the geologist and the minerologist is a very different thing from this. To begin with, all the rock bottom of the land as far as man has yet reached, and as far as man has yet learned, has been laid in and under water, with the exception of volcanic, igneous or fire rock, which only occurs here and there on the face of the earth. The lowest formation, as we might say, is granite. This is a crystalline rock, and "microscopic examination by Sorby and other later observers has shown that the quartz," which it contains, "is full of cavities containing liquid."....."The liquid in these cavities appears usually to be water containing chlorides of soda and potash, with sulphates of potash, soda and lime," (En. Brit.) much the same dose as previously taken; in fact, seawater. Now, this lowest granite, with this testimony of water crystalized into its very structure, the geologists tell us, (and in mountainous regions, where there are cliffs and quarries and mines, we can see for ourselves), and coal beds formed of dead vegetable matter that has been submerged by water, if it has not actually grown in it as sea weed. Then there are other kinds of crystalline rocks and partly crystalline—limestones, ores of metals—and here and there in certain localities we have precious stones—the onyx, the diamond, the ruby—all evidently crystalized in the great deep. But, although we know what crystallization is in a general way as shown in the making of salt, sugar and so forth, there is no learned man yet, who has claimed to understand the complex environment that must have existed in order to produce the thousands of known mineral crystals, or how they grow. Fire doesn't begin to account for them, although various degrees of heat probably contributed to their development. Brewster says: "In whatever way we account for the various secondary forms of crystals we are then only on the threshold of the subject. The real constitution of crystals would be unknown; and though the examination of these bodies has been pretty diligently pursued, we can at this moment form no adequate idea of the complex and beautiful organization of these apparently simple bodies."

Perhaps a few extracts from John Ruskin's "Ethics of the Dust" will give some idea of the mystery that attaches to the subject. He says: "It is seldom that any mineral crystalizes alone. Usually two or three under quite different crystalline laws form together. They do this absolutely without flaw or fault; and observe what this signifies. It signifies that two or more minerals of different natures agree somehow between themselves how much space each will want.....This implies both concurrence and compromise, regulating all willfulness of design, and, more curious still, the crystals do not always give way to each other....Sometimes they yield the required place with perfect grace and courtesy, forming fantastic and exquisitely finished groups, and sometimes they will not yield at all, but fight furiously for their places, losing all shape and honor and even their own likeness in the contest.... Given the nature of the plant, it is easier to understand what a flower will do and why it does it, than, given anything we as yet know of stone nature, to understand what a crystal will do, and why it does it. You at once admit a kind of volition and choice in the flower, but we are not accustomed to attribute anything of the kind to the crystal...Here, for instance, is a good garnet living with a good mica; one is rich red and the other silver white. The mica leaves exactly room enough for the garnet to crystalize comfortably in.....But here are wicked garnets living with wicked mica. See what ruin they make of each other! You cannot tell which is which. Here is a rock crystal of the purest race and temper, who was born, unhappily for him, in a bad neighborhood, and he has had to fight with vile, calcareous mud. See how when but a child it came down on him and nearly buried him! A weaker crystal would have died of despair, but he only gathered himself together and threw a layer of crystal over the clay—conquered it, imprisoned it, and lived on. Then when he was a little older came more clay and poured itself upon him here at the side, and he has laid crystal over that and lived on in his purity. Then the clay came on at his angles and tried to cover them and round them away, but he threw out buttress crystals at his angles, all as true to his own central line as chapels round a cathedral apse, and clustered them round the clay and conquered it again. At last the clay came on at his summit, but he could not endure that for an instant, and left his flank all rough but pure and fought the clay at his crest, and built crest over crest and peak over peak till the clay surrendered [illegible] last, and here is his summit smooth and pure, terminating a pyramid of alternate clay and crystal half a foot high."

These few extracts are perhaps enough to show that the most intelligent research and the best minds are not satisfied with the scrapple theory that stirs everything up in one conglomerate mass and sets it aside to cool, but perceives, if only through a glass darkly, that the processes thro' which our planet has already passed, although entirely different from the state of things that obtain now, were directed by just as precise, irrevocable and intelligent laws, which were executed principally through the instrumentation of water, and which, by the way, is the chief source of our present existence and of the existence of all other living things, both plant and animal. The fire theory may be accounted for probably by the fact that for long centuries poor humanity has been so roasted and basted by an igneous theology that many of us are born with a predisposition to igneophobous, or blazes on the brain.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 31.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That they all may be one.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article but one (29) notice was taken of Ecclesial disturbances at Chicago, U. S. A., and at Halifax, England, both considerable centres. Discussions on the subject of the Nature and Pre-existence of Christ was the exciting cause. The mental confusion apt to be occasioned by controversies on such metaphysical questions was also illustrated. Heart-burnings and alienation cannot be described, but may be guessed at by the reader from recorded facts. Testimonies from three continents besides Australia, show the wide-spread character of the evils hence arising. It is surely needless to repeat that such things present serious Drawbacks and Hindrances to the gospel.

Thus in November, 1874 a correspondent of the Christadelphian Lamp, Peter Graham, writes from Sydney, Ashfield,—"From the first time that this matter appeared my mind has been that all that was written on both sides should have appeared in the Christadelphian .....We often get truth through error.....I cannot think that the Christadelphian or the Christadelphian Lamp is the sole property of the editors.....and should be open at all times to the reasonable expression of the minds ("of men and women holding the one faith").....so far as I know there are five and myself gladly receive the uncondemned Christ...You can make me your agent in Sydney for publications."....

Writing to the Christadelphian, Feb. 1898, a correspondent at Durban Natal, Africa, says, on different subjects, however, of which perhaps more anon, "We are still holding on to the one faith as taught by our beloved brother Dr. Thomas. We are firm in our belief of a wholly inspired Bible, and we decline to fellowship with any who believe to the contrary. With respect to the responsibility question we believe that every one having a knowledge of the truth as taught by Dr. Thomas will be held responsible for judgment."

"The truth as taught by Dr. Thomas" is a rather elastic phrase, and might mean two very different things.

In article 30, the sayings and doings of representatives of Ecclesias at Adeline, Illinois, U. S. A., came under notice. A project of Dr. Thomas to pay a third visit to Britain with the expectation to get control of the Christadelphian was criticised. The "gladiatorism" of such an anticipation, as well as that exhibited at Adeline—not fighting the good fight of "the faith," but contending for a matter not only of secondary importance even by the Doctor's own showing, but not expressed in the law and the testimony in the form to suit the theories of men.

Following up the subject a little further, reference may be here made to a number of the Marturion, Listowell, Canada West. This number has already been noticed in connection with the Editor, W. H. Hacking's change of opinion on the question dealt with here. The principal part of this number (Feb. 1897) is occupied with a document extending to 15 columns. It is entitled "The Constitution and Order of the London Ecclesia of Immersed believers of the things of the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus the Christ, according to the Scriptures, organized on its subscription for True Fellowship in the gospel of the grace of God, by David Brown." The author possessed abilities of a scholarly and literary character. He issued several booklets on gospel subjects of an elementary order. I may mention that he was one of two brothers who, in the summer of 1862, were baptized by Dr. Thomas while on his second visit to Britain. He joined a small meeting in London, and afterwards the Christadelphians from which body he seceded to those holding the uncondemned Christ.

One or two extracts will show his view on the points here dealt with:—

"The Father is the one Supreme, Invisible, and self-existed God.....of Spirit Nature and Substance."..... whose revealed names are—Al Shadai, the strength of mighty ones, C. V. God Almighty Jeun Aleim, he shall be thy mighty ones, C. V. Lord God, our Father in heaven, merciful and gracious.....

At the asterisk there is a foot-note in M.S. as follows: "But whose similitude are the angels of his power, excelling in strength, spirits and flames of fire, in organization of the substance, and after the fashion of the divine nature.

"The Son is a creation of the Father by operation of the Holy Spirit on the substance of Virgin Mary, of the house and lineage of David; and therefore made out of a woman, and made under the law, etc.

It will be observed that the author here uses the term "creation." but has so far the authority of Paul in Gal. iv. "made." A little further on he says, "he was sent into the world in the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth," ..The Son of God and son of David."

"The great mystery of godliness, God manifest in the flesh, justified of Spirit," &c., seen of messengers, believed on in the world, taken up into glory, will in the day of the Christ receive its full development," etc.

He also gives, in imitation of the Christadelphian, what he calls "the contrary dogmas of orthodox theology, in 15 numbered paragraphs. The first and second of these are the following:

"That there is a Triune God of distinct personalities equal in essence, eternity, majesty, and glory, called the Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

"That the Christ is God, and had an existence independent of the Father before he was born of the Virgin Mary," etc.

In a supplement to this number nearly 10 columns are occupied by D. Brown with a reply to a correspondent, on salvation-conditional or unconditional. A remarkable statement he makes is this: "Saving faith is parallel with revealed truth."

It may be mentioned here as showing the high approval of the lengthy article referred by the Editors of the Marturion that the following intimation precedes it.

"We have published in full this very important and valuable contribution from Bro. Brown of Loudon, England, and in consequence of the large space occupied thereby we have been obliged to defer the publication of other articles intended for this month. However, lengthy as the article is, it will abundantly repay the time spent in its perusal. We would also add that the Editors of this paper heartily respond to the sentiments contained therein, and have reason to believe the Ecclesias throughout the province will do the same....."

"The Constitution and Order of the Ecclesia in London published in this number of the Marturion is issued in pamphlet form and can be obtained from the publishers at the rate," etc. .....If this, our first attempt to publish small works in pamphlet form is encouraged by the brethren, we may issue other valuable works."

A curious editorial reply to a correspondent appears on the cover of Christadelphian for Jan. 1, 1898. It is as follows:—"An M. S. criticism by brother E. W. Karr on an article quoted by the Sword from Investigation (Investigator?), on Christ as the Son of God and the seed of the women. Said article is unworthy of the prominence which the criticism would give it. Incompetent, foggy-maunderings, which degrade the subject of Christ are best left alone. The subject shines with electric brilliance in the writings of Dr. Thomas. The efforts of hostile, laborious, metaphysical critics remind us of the buzzing of moths and flying beetles against the lamp which scorches their wings and sends them bump on the table."

The Editor in this reply ignores the fact that Dr. Thomas nearly twenty years previously wrote as follows regarding the "metaphysics" of the subject of the above reply showing truly who were the moths and beetles scorching their wings:—

"I would suggest that discussion of the very knotty and intricate subject of the quo modo of the manifestation of Deity in flesh be suspended among you till, etc,.....In the meantime it may not be amiss for our metaphysical friends (his own brethren) to see if they can agree among themselves with regard to the more simple, proximate and primary question—What is flesh? .....You will excuse me perhaps just reminding you here that metaphysics are of a very unsubstantial and shadowy nature," etc.....

The Recording Angel.

No transaction 'scapes his eye;
Not one sigh, or groan, or tear,
Not one idle word passed by,—
All must be recorded there.
No one kneels before the throne,
If his heart is far away—
Thus the record is set down,
Thus 'twill read at that great day.

Swearer, pause! that awful name,
Just about to leave the tongue,
Will appear in words of flame,
When thy soul with fear is wrung.
Ye who to the poor deny
Of the plenty to you given,
Tremble; for that ungrudged cry
Is recorded high in heaven.

Though great power may here be gained
To defraud, and cheat, and wrong,
Trample on their fellow's claims,
Still that pen is moving on;
Though the actions may in part
Screen the thoughts that move the actors,
Every motive of the heart
In that record will appear.

Sinner, pause! oh! pause with dread!
Let this question claim your care;
When the judgment books are read,
Will your name be mentioned there?
Solemn warning! solemn thought!
Sinks the heart in deepest gloom,
Mercy there can not be bought,
Fixed for aye the sinner's doom.

Dear Restitution:

Truly we are living in perilous times. The actions of the nations prove that we are in the very last days of this age. How vividly the prophecies portray the very things that are now transpiring. Luke says, "There shall be * * * upon the earth distress of nations, men's hearts failing them from fear * * * for the powers of the heavens (nations or governments of the world) shall be shaken." Was there ever a time in the history of the world when the nations were so shaken and distressed as at the present? The Czar of all the Russias living in a country palace in a room with seven apartments all lined with steel to make them bullet proof to save himself from assassination by his own subjects, not because he is personally unpopular, but simply because he is the king and ruler of his nation. His subjects who would murder him, have nothing against him personally, on the contrary he is personally very popular with his people, but he is the Czar and at the head of the government and those who seek his life are opposed to all government. They are anarchists and socialists and want to throw off all restraint. We can judge what would happen if they could have their way, by what took place during the French revolution. The Russian people are not alone in this feeling of anarchy and unrest. Only last Friday, March 29th, the foreign dispatches inform us that the Emperor of Germany told his bodyguard regiment it must be ready to quell with bayonets any insubordination of the populace. In the same dispatches W. T. Stead re-iterates Bismarck's prediction, that South Africa will be the grave of the British Empire. The same paper contains the information that the Emperor of China under the advice of Japan, England and the United States had refused to ratify the agreement with Russia whereby China was to convey to that country the province of Manchuria. All the dispatches agree that war is inevitable between Russia and Japan growing out of this trouble relating to China, and the attempt on the part of Russia to grab Chinese territory. If Japan is to be forced into a war with Russia, because she interfered and advised China not to sign the treaty with Russia, and thus turn over to that government the absolute ownership and control of the very large province of Manchuria how can the English nation and our own nation escape a war with Russia, when both nations are guilty of doing precisely what Japan did. The three nations of Japan, England and the United States having, by their joint act, aroused the Northern Bear, will this nation and England slink out of the trouble and leave the brave, courageous little nation of Japan to fight our battles? No, never. Neither nation is made of that kind of stuff. England is, and will continue to be, the leader in all aggressive movements against Russia. Her young lions will assist her. This nation is one of them, England is our mother country.

But I am asked, why will the United States government go to war with Russia about her obtaining Manchuria from China? How is this nation interested in that question to such an extent that we should rush into a war with a powerful nation like Russia, who has always been our friend? I will answer by asking another question. Why did this nation interfere and advise the Emperor of China not to ratify the treaty with Russia, saying at the same time that Japan would certainly get into war with Russia by doing the very thing that this nation did? There is no question that the authorities at Washington believe that the action of Japan in advising the Chinese government not to sign the treaty will bring on a war between Russia and Japan. How this nation having done the precise thing that Japan did, expects to create a war with Russia, is unexplainable. The war may not and probably will not be brought on immediately between Russia and England and this nation. The two latter nations will most likely put Japan to the front to fight Russia, perhaps not right away, but in time, and the war when it comes, as come it will, may drag along for a long time before either England or our own government will become involved. But the time will come when the nations of the world will line up on one side or the other and England and the United States will then be found assisting little Japan.

I fully believe that the world is about to enter upon the last great war which will result in universal peace which will continue time without end. From the time of Cain to the present, neighbor has been arrayed against neighbor and nation against nation, but thanks to the Father of the universe, that time is almost ended, and we are fast approaching the time, in the world's history, when the Peacemaker shall come and set up his kingdom and reign for the ages of the ages. But before a reign of peace can be established the war spirit, now extant in the world, must be broken. The people and nations of the world must be made tired of war. Then, and not till then, will they welcome the great Peacemaker.

Zechariah tells us that our heavenly Father "will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle." The question is asked how can this be brought about. I am told that our own nation cannot possibly have any interest in the country of Palestine, and why should we with our army and navy assemble at "Jerusalem to battle?"

The question is a fair one and worthy of an answer. We know absolutely that it is to be so, because the prophet says so, further than that we cannot answer with mathematical certainty. I may however suggest. The great ambition in this country at the present time is money making. Everything must bend to that as the supreme object. The cry is, give us markets, good markets for the produce of the farm and factory. With the formation of trusts and combinations we are able to manufacture cheaper than our neighbors. We have everything within our own government with which to make money except good markets. It is true we have good markets for a large per cent of what we produce, but we must have a foreign market to get rich as rapidly as our people desire. If the integrity of the Chinese Empire and the principle of the open door policy can be maintained our people can and will build up a trade with that immense empire that will absorb such a large per cent of our surplus that we shall have no trouble in finding good markets for the balance. Our people understand this and the government at Washington understands it and are ready to fight Russia, or any body else, to maintain what they conceive to be their rights. The two greatest questions before Congress at the last session was the Ship-subsidy Bill and the building of the Nicaragua ship canal and these questions will come up at the next session. Our people want all the profit both in producing the article and in transporting it to market. We are now paying England hundreds of millions of dollars for carrying our commerce on the high seas. Therefore the efforts that are being made to build up a large merchant marine. Our material interests compel us to contend earnestly for the trade and commerce which we have already built up in China with the hope of materially increasing it. This nation will not therefore suffer Russia to dismember the Chinese Empire without a hard struggle to prevent it. In this manner the war will be commenced, and after it is once begun it will never end until the power to continue the strife is taken away from one of the contending parties. The fight will begin in or near Corea, the contending parties having clinched will continue the struggle until the fortunes of war shall bring them on to the "mountains of Israel" where the contest will be finally ended at the city of Jerusalem, by the Russian Army being miraculously destroyed.

My dear brethren, did the nations of Russia, China, Japan, England and the United States take action last week which will result in bringing on the great war spoken of in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. which will result in the great battle of Armageddon? Is war inevitable as all the dispatches claim? If it is, then we have come almost to the end of this dispensation. In a few short years at most, Jesus will come. He may come in a few short months for his saints. Are we expecting his coming? If we are we will get ready to go to meet him. The ten virgins represent the church, only half of them were ready. When Jesus comes the prophecy contained in this parable will be fulfilled. How sad it will be for the foolish virgins. Remember they were not disobedient sinful virgins, they were simply foolish. All that they had done was approved by the Master. They did nothing wrong, all that they did was right, but there was one little thing, how very small and simple it was, which they had failed to do. After having spent a lifetime with the other virgins, in worshiping God and doing good to others, and in singing and praying and talking about the second coming of the Savior, and what a glorious thing it would be to be awakened out of their sleep to go out to meet him, and then when the time comes to be left out because of having failed to attend to so small a matter. What did they lack any way? They had served the Lord so faithfully and well and have formed such good characters that Jesus calls them by the same endearing title that he applies to those who passed into the bride-chamber and became members of his bride. It is safe to conclude that what they lacked was knowledge on some important question relating to the work to be performed by the saints during the millennial age. One thing is certain, Jesus will not have time to hold, as it were, a normal school among the members of his bride after he comes, to teach them in what the work of restitution consists. We must take heed to the "sure Word of prophecy" and learn now what our duties will be. I sometimes fear we spend too much time in criticising the views of others. As a rule criticism does very little good. Let us spend our very best energies for the short time that is left in which to work, in getting the oil which the foolish virgins lacked and in supplying it to others. The physician who spends his energies in condemning the medicine which his patient has been taking does nothing to heal the disease which is praying on the vitals of the sick one. Let us stick to the affirmative side of the proposition and hold up the light of the gospel, that it may blaze out in all its brilliancy and effulgence and light the earnest seeker, not only to the bride-chamber, but into that room reserved for the bride. We are almost home. Mother earth will not have to groan under the load of sin much longer. Let us be faithful and patiently wait.

Report of Labor.

On Monday Feb. 25, after serving my regular appointment at Remington, I went to West Lebanon in Warren County, to conduct a series of meetings at that place. I remained there in all eleven days, giving 12 discourses, beginning with God's purpose concerning man, as stated in the Word, and indicated in the creation of the earth, tracing his dealings with men from Adam to the present time, and leading up to and culminating in "the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Much interest was manifested by the people at West Lebanon in the discussion of these subjects, and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather on several occasions, good congregations were present to listen to the Word. This being a comparatively new place, i. e. there having been very little preaching there by our brethren, there was a general feeling of inquiry as to what "that doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is." The meeting closed with good interest, and the desire was expressed that there might be another series of meetings of this character held there. There are several of our brethren living at West Lebanon, and it was through their solicitation that this meeting was held. They contributed to make this meeting a success, engaging and paying for the use of the house in which the meetings were held, and also paying in part for the services of the evangelist. It seems to the writer that for the sake of our brethren who reside there, as well as to bring the truth to others, we should make further efforts at West Lebanon. The writer would herewith acknowledge his appreciation of the personal acts of kindness on the part of the brethren, as well as their hearty co-operation.

Feb. 10, I was with our people at South Bend, and am happy to say that our efforts at that place in January have not been in vain. The brethren and sisters are working hard to keep the work moving. They meet every first day of the week for Bible study, and once a month I visit them to encourage them in the work. I should have said in my other report that we baptized a young sister, who professed faith in "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." There are others who are interested in the truth, and we hope that ere long they may from the heart obey "that form of doctrine taught in the Word of truth. I expect to remain some time in connection with my next visit to South Bend, and hold a short series of meetings. I am pleased that Brother and Sister R. C. Railsback expect to make their home at South Bend. South Bend is a growing city of about 40,000 inhabitants, and we ought to have a good flourishing church at that place. Many who have come under the influence of the truth move to this place in quest of work, and we as a church should offer them a home in which their needs are met. But let me plainly say, that to make the work a success, it will require patient and unremitting work on our part.

At Remington the writer has supplied them with preaching once a month since last summer, and judging by the attendance and interest we may hope to do good there. The brethren at Green Grove are faithful in their work. We expect to hold a series of meetings either at Green Grove or in the town of Remington some time in the near future. But I must close this letter or it may become too lengthy.

A. H. Zilmer.

Our work at Wenatchee and Waterville is ended, the record has gone to the judgment, and we hope and trust it will read, They did what they could with the help of God. The churches at both places were ready to go right to work, and not having to take time to convert them. While they were being encouraged and strengthened, the glad story of redeeming love was told to others who had never before been interested in it. Circumstances outside of the church at Wenatchee were very much against us as there was hardly a family but were suffering with either measles, scarlatina or la grippe, and still the congregations were good and interest splendid, 16 made the good confession. We left here for Waterville, Feb. 23, a ride on steam boat down the Columbia river of about 15 miles, then 10 miles up Corbaley Canyon, in and out among those great rocks, up and up, for 2700 feet, and we reach the top and look down again upon a beautiful farming country, and in the valley a little town of from 500 to 700 inhabitants, this is Waterville. Here we find as at Wenatchee an earnest, prayerful church. Some have left their ranches and rented rooms in the town just to attend the meetings, some one of the family going out on a saddle horse every morning to do the chores and return. They think nothing here of going 10 miles to attend meeting. They are in earnest and practice what they preach. We stayed with the brethren over three Sundays, 19 days and baptized 17 persons, Bro. Allis Corbaley performing the ceremony. Here we met the venerable and much loved Bro. and Sister Richard Corbaley; we were very sorry to find him sick with the la grippe, and greatly rejoiced when he recovered sufficiently to attend a few meetings. We spent one night at their home, and made other short visits, talking of the things pertaining to everlasting life. Very precious were these hours to us, and as he gave some experiences of his life we could only regret that he was not young again and able to wield the sword of truth for many years to come. He has passed the 80th mile stone, but his mind is as clear, his heart as warm as ever; long has he with his noble helpmeet battled for God and truth, planting the seed and organizing the church at Waterville, and none rejoiced more than they to see the cause built up and additions made to the body there. Surely a crown of righteousness is awaiting these faithful soldiers of the cross. We will probably never meet them again this side of the grave, but beyond the cares and sorrows we hope to greet them when the mortal has been swallowed up with immortality. While here we made our home with our old time friends, Bro. and Sister Hugh Barnhill. We had thought when we read of their removal to Washington that we never should see them again this side of the kingdom, but here we are listening to the same voices in earnest prayer, partaking of their hospitalities, in short being at home with them. We thanked God many times for the privilege. Cleo as faithful as when a boy of 12 he put on Christ in baptism at our meetings in Plymouth, Ind., and little Earl, now as tall as mother, the first to come to Christ in our meetings here, as anxious to obey as when we last saw him a boy of 8 years. His name is now enrolled with the other members of his family in the "Lamb's book of life," may he be true to the sacred vow he has taken. We think this morning of each dear one who made the good confession there, dear little Sister Rena Yager and Bro. Eddie Foland, with all the rest, and pray God, do not let them fall, but striving together with God reach the sweet time when there will be no more parting. The last good by has been given and we start over the mountains 25 miles, with double conveyance for Wenatchee, staying here over another Sunday, giving them six sermons, five more coming forward for baptism, making 24 additions for the Wenatchee church, 38 were added to the body of Christ in both places. The brethren here are preparing to build a church, which they very much need. O may these dear ones be kept as faithful and earnest as they are now. "Truly they are workers together with God." We will never forget the delightful home we had here with Bro. and Sister Harry Patterson, the inspiring Bible talks, the sweet communion at the nightly prayer circle, where every consecrated heart drew fresh strength for the coming days. O that we could see more homes like this, where true consecration bound the hearts to the blessed truths of God's Word. May the Father help us all to feel the need of home Christianity, a home dedicated by prayer, where each member takes a part in the service, is seldom anything but a Christian home, and as the children go out in the world, the influences of those prayers never leaves them, but helps them to meet the hard places in life as true overcomers. Just before leaving Wenatchee Bro. Herbert Barnhill reached there from Indiana, and Bro. Hugh and family moved out from Waterville to their own cozy home here, and now we must leave all the dear faithful workers, may the blessings of the most high rest upon them all, and may we meet again where tears and partings will never come. We are now at Scholls, Oregon, about 300 miles west and south of Wenatchee. We expect to reach our home by Apr. 15th, going home by way of Union Pacific. Yours in the Christ,

B. W. & M. A. Woodward.

Among the papers of the late Grant Allen was found an article on "The British Aristocracy." It is probable that he did not care to place himself before the English reading public in the position of entire frankness which he had assumed while writing this article, and that consequently it was held until after his death for publication. It was secured through his son for The Cosmopolitan and appears in the April number. Certainly no Englishman has ever so handled the subject without gloves as Grant Allen, and no one was better equipped to do the subject justice.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—May 25.

Settlers rates via the Nickel Plate Road. Beginning with Tuesday, Feb. 12th. Low rate Settlers' tickets will be on sale every Tuesday to and including April 30th, to Oregon, Montana, Washington and all points in the Northwest. Write, wire, 'phone or call on nearest Agent, C. Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Claims of the Popes.

Do we know what the Pontiffs of the Roman church claim to be able to do in their role as the vicars of Christ? Have we forgotten what far-reaching and absolute jurisdiction they hold to be theirs, not only over the minds and consciences, but also over the laws and liberties of men? That like Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, they have commanded, and "caused Israel to sin?" That they have "prohibited the very things enjoined of God,"—the marriage of the clergy and the searching of the Scriptures? That they have "forbidden the use of the Scriptures in their own tongue to the people," "enforcing disobedience to the divine will in bull after bull, that said 'Let it be lawful for no man to infringe this declaration of our will and command?'" That they have affirmed it "a detestable kind of wickedness" to translate the Bible? That they have called Bible societies "a crafty device by which the very foundations of religion are undermined?" That they claim the right to burn the Bibles that God's kind Providence puts into the perishing sinners' hands?

It is necessary that we know these things, that we keep them ever before us, for only so can we duly pity and reach out with hearts of love for those who "sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

God has put the papacy on the pages of Revelation. He has delineated its beginning, its character, its duration, its end; that his church might be kept from its snares and might know "the times and the seasons of their visitation." He has appointed the Papacy as a man, because the Apostacy begins, centers, continues and is upheld by a man. Without a head, where were the body? There is no break in the Roman church, though its members die; it is one church from its beginning until now. And just so has God spoken of and looked upon its head, its Pontiff Priest. As to the office the same Pontiff Priest rules the Roman church now, that ruled it in its beginning. The priesthood in its official character is looked upon as not dying. The office is there and the office is filled by the man—"the man of sin,"—"the lawless one," "the Antichrist." And now that we may better apprehend why God has given him these titles, we will quote some of his own utterances, that there may be no mistake about it. We have already seen in part, why he is called "the man of sin," we shall see better as we go on. And no one who has read Bower's "Variations of Popery," and has had thus a glimpse of the lives of the popes, will ever deny again, that when the Pontiff of Rome sat for his photograph, "the man of sin" was taken. For not only has he commanded and caused others to sin, but he has also committed in his own life all manner of crimes in utter defiance to civil law and the law of God. They have connived at, suggested and encouraged sin, have filled their coffers with the gold that was the price of indulgences to commit crime.

The claims of the Popes as to law, "the lawless one." "I am subject to no creature, no not to myself; so that my papal majesty ever remaineth undiminished, superior to all men, whom all persons ought to obey and follow, whom no man must judge or accuse of any crime, no man depose but myself, * * * no canon bindeth me, * * * Thus then it appeareth that the greatness of the priesthood began in Melchisedec, (the pope is spoken of by God as a continuing Man, because he claims to have the deathless priesthood of Melchisedec) was solemnized in Aaron, continued in the children of Aaron, perfectionated in Christ, represented in Peter, exalted in the universal jurisdiction and manifested in the pope," * * * I owe to the emperors no obedience that they can claim, but they owe to me, as to their superior, * * * And as I am superior to them, so am I superior to all laws, and free from all constitutions; who am able of myself, and by my interpretation, to prefer equity, not being written, before the law written, (setting at naught the commandments of God for the traditions of men) having all laws in the chest of my breast, as is afore said." Claiming to sit in the temple of God as God; the pope, showeth himself to be God. "All the earth is my diocese, and I the ordinary (or commander) of all men, having the authority of the King of all kings upon subjects, I am all in all and above all, so that God himself and I, the vicar of God, have both one consistory, and I am able to do almost all that God can do. In all things that I list, my will is to stand for reason, for I am able by the law to dispense above the law and of wrong, to make justice in correcting laws and changing them * * * wherefore if those things that I do be said not to be done of man, but of God; what can you make of me but God?

Again, if prelates of the church be called and counted of Constantine for gods, I then, being above all prelates, seem by this reason to be above all gods." Antichrist—popes claim the right to abrogate the precepts of Christ and to dispense with the canons of the Apostles. "Wherefore, no marvel if it be in my power to change time and times, to alter and abrogate laws, to dispense with all things, yea, even with the precepts of Christ; for where Christ biddeth, Peter put up his sword, and admonishes his disciples not to use any outward force in revenging themselves, do not I, Pope Nicholas, writing to the bishops of France, exhort them to draw out their material sword? And whereas Christ was present himself at the marriage in Cana of Galilee, do not I, Pope Martin, in my distinction inhibit the spiritual clergy to be present at marriage feasts, and also to marry? Moreover, where Christ biddeth us lend, without hope of gain, do not I, Pope Martin, give dispensation for the same? What should I speak of murder, making it no murder or homicide to slay them that be excommunicated? Likewise against the law of nature, item against the Apostles, against the canons, I can and do dispense; for where they, in their canon, command a priest for fornication to be deposed, I, through the authority of Silvester, do alter the vigor of that constitution. * * *

"I claim to be the Supreme Judge and director of the consciences of men, of the peasant that tills the field and of the prince that sits upon the throne; of the household that lives in privacy, and the legislature that makes laws for kingdoms. I am the sole, last Supreme Judge of what is right and wrong." "When speaking excathedra, I am infallible." "The Sicilian ambassadors prostrated themselves before Pope Martin with the thrice repeated cry, 'Lamb of God that takest away the sin of the world!'"

The Pontiffs of Rome suffer themselves to be addressed as "Another God upon earth," and as "our Lord God, the Pope." Upon his election to the pontificate, and after his investiture with scarlet robes, vest of pearls, and gems-tudded mitre, the Pope is led to the altar, where "he prostrates himself in prayer as before the seat of God." Then he is placed by the cardinals "upon the altar to sit there,"—placed upon the very altar to sit, which he, by kneeling before, has acknowledged to be God's altar! And seated there, he is addressed as "Most holy and blessed father, head of the church, and ruler of the world, to whom the keys of the kingdom of heaven are committed, whom the angels in heaven revere, and the gates of hell fear, and all the world adores, we specially venerate, worship and adore thee."

Is not this enough? Do we need to go any farther to prove that this is "the man of sin," "the son of perdition," that "lawless one," "who has exalted himself above all that is called God, (his prelates) or that is worshiped (a sort of adoration and worship is paid to both priest and bishop) so that he as God, sitteth in the temple (or place of adoration) showing himself that he is God, (by receiving adoration that should be offered only to God), who was not revealed or shown in his true character, as "the mystery of iniquity," until Western Rome fell, 22nd of August 476 A. D., and the withholding or hindering Roman emperors were "taken out of the way."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Which Road?

"If you could go back to the forks of the road—
Back the long miles you have carried the load,
Back to the place where you had to decide
By this way or that through your life to abide;
Back of the sorrow and back of the care,
Back to the place where the future was fair—
If you were there now, a decision to make,
O pilgrim of sorrow, which road would you take?

"Then after you'd trodden the other long track,
Suppose that again to the forks you went back,
After you found that its promises fair
Were but a delusion that led to a snare—
That the road you first traveled with sigh and unrest,
Though dreary and rough, was most graciously blest
With balm for each bruise, and a charm for each ache,
O pilgrim of sorrow, which road would you take?"

Christ our Life.

Christ is the great representative that we must follow if we are to attain unto eternal life. His character stands out clear cut, every line and every shade, is as distinct so to speak, as the lightning's flash, with this difference, it is permanent, and grows on one the more it is looked at. The system called "orthodoxy" has marred, scarred and clouded to the human eye this beautiful life. He was tempted on all points like as we are, yet without sin. Rom. ii. 18; iv. 15. God says, He tempteth no man, neither can he be tempted. James i. 13. Christ was the Son of God, being begotten by the power of the Holy Spirit. Luke i. 35. Being thus born he was so constituted that he could both be tempted, suffer and die; none of which things could happen to God himself. Christ was made perfect through suffering. Heb. ii. 9, 10. God is always perfect. We have like Christ to be made perfect through suffering. Christ felt keenly for the weakness and sufferings of others, and forgot his own sufferings when at the worst, in his sympathy for others. When on the way to be crucified, after he had sunk from exhaustion, bearing the cross, when the brutal soldiers found he was incapable of carrying it farther, they compelled another to do so for him. He turned to the women who were following him weeping and said, "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children," etc. Luke xxiii. 28. The misery that he foresaw that was to come upon the city and people, oppressed him more than the terrible suffering he had undergone, and was still to endure. When he was nailed to the cross and raised to hang in agony, both mental and physical, he was still mindful of even the temporal welfare of others. His mother, who was probably a widow, stood looking on at that dreadful scene. "When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! then he said to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her into his own home." John xix. 26, 27.

Christ was made a curse for us, for it was written in the law "cursed is every one who hangeth on a tree." Gal. iii. 13; Deut. xxi. 23. God's Spirit since his baptism in the Jordan had dwelt in him enabling him to do the marvelous works and speak the wondrous words which he did, but when he was nailed to the accursed tree for us, this Spirit was withdrawn from him, for God's Spirit cannot dwell on any one who is under a curse, and he exclaimed in agony, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me." This was not the God-part of his nature, leaving the man-part, as men filled with heathen philosophy have tried to make out. He had seen this terrible calamity before and prayed in the garden of Gethsemane, "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me, nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done.....and being in an agony he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was, as it were, great drops of blood, falling down to the ground." Luke xxii. 42, 44. When he was forsaken by God on the cross, it was more than flesh could endure, the frightful strain on the brain and nervous system caused the heart to rupture and he died suddenly, much to the astonishment of the authorities, for the death on the cross was nearly always a long lingering one. The Christ of orthodoxy could neither die nor suffer, for they say he existed from all eternity and is co-equal and co-eternal with God, they say that it was only his body that could suffer. He who suffered and died according to the Scriptures was the man Christ Jesus, not a part only of him. In Rev. i. 18, he sends us this message, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for ever more." He is alive to help us, to watch over us, to sympathize with us in all our trials. If orthodox theology had not been manufactured by the "fathers," his wonderful character and his nearness to us would have been better understood even by those who do not follow him, and would thus have had a greater effect in lifting the masses than it has done, but even as it is, looking upon him as a god before he was born, his life has had a wonderful effect in course of time, in removing some of that hard brutal character that was almost universal before and after his time. The Romans and other nations delighted in torturing, tormenting and killing their fellowmen, and many professed followers of Christ in the past have done the same, but while they professed to be Christ's followers, they were entirely ignorant of the first principles of Christianity, whether they were called Catholics or Protestants. He says, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." The refining influence of Christ's life has been lifting those who even in a small measure have come in contact with his teachings. The close study of that life will lift any one nearer to God. Human nature is selfish and proud. Christ was born to be the King of the world, yet he took the most humble position in it; he washed his disciples' feet, the work of the humblest menial, he hungered and was fatigued, but he cured the sick in great numbers and sorrowed with the sorrowing ones. He was tender, loving, gentle and sympathetic, but he was severe and terrible to the hypocrites; greed and rascality he denounced in the most scathing manner, and they whom he thus denounced were the ones in high places, the wealthy and fashionable leaders of society in his day, and they repaid him with the deepest hatred; laid plans to encompass his death, and when they got him in their power, stirred up the multitude to cry, "away with him, crucify him, crucify him." Thus he died for us, literally died, ceased to know anything, he was laid in Joseph's tomb, but he was raised again by the power of God's Holy Spirit. This fact cannot be too strongly insisted upon, because it is by his death, his literal death and resurrection, that we have salvation. Paul says to the Corinthians who were beginning to bring in heathen philosophy into the church, and teaching just as orthodoxy does, that people are alive after they are dead, "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you there is no resurrection of the dead; but if there is no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not raised, and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then they also who are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. xv. 3, 4, 12-18. If there can be no life for any unless Christ was raised, neither can there be life for any, unless he died. Not the kind of death which heathen philosophers taught, and which the socalled fathers, borrowed from them which says, "There is no death, what is called death is but seeming, it is but the entrance to the portals of Elysium." When Christ died he certainly did not enter the portals of Elysium. He died on the cross, from which he was taken down by loving hands and was laid in Joseph's new tomb; he remained there till the morning of the first day of the week, the "Lord's day" as it was afterwards called by his disciples. He was raised by the Spirit of God from the death state, a state described by the Psalmist, "For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in sheol who shall give thee thanks?" Psa. vi. 5. And again, "For thou wilt not leave my soul (a Hebrewism for me) in sheol, neither wilt thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption." Psa. xv. 10. If Christ had not died as the Scriptures universally teach, it would have been absurd to have given this promise that he would be preserved from corruption. It is no use for orthodox theologians to reply to this and say that it was his body that was here meant, it was God's holy one who was to die and be buried, but was not allowed to see corruption. Christ went nowhere else at that time, but to sheol or hades in Greek or the grave. He told Mary after he had risen that he had not yet ascended to heaven. All the types and shadows of the law pointed forward to his death, every sacrifice that was offered taught that a redeemer was to die for his people, and that Redeemer's blood was poured forth on Calvary for all who believe on him and obey him. When he comes again he will raise them like as he was raised to an endless life; where there will be no sorrow, no suffering, no tears, no parting, and they will be one with Jesus, even as he is one with the Father.

The Saints and the Nations. No. 1.

In the 25th chapter of Matthew, beginning with the 31st verse, we read: —"When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels; for I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."

We have here given this whole body of Scripture verbatim, just as it reads in our common Bible, so that all may see and know just how it reads before we commence our comment, and besides it makes quite a large text of Scripture for so important a subject, and yet so few thoroughly understand it aright. We will try by the help of the Lord, in his name, to give what light we can upon the subject, and that from the positions taken from time to time it does seem to us that it is not thoroughly understood and that we do desire in all kindness to show up its truths as the Bible reads to us in harmony with its own teaching, and yet at the same time we know full well to make it harmonize together and to fit in all its parts requires more than a little study, and with not any one text, or body of Scripture which we have studied more than another it is this very one. To start with, we affirm on the outset that the sheep and goats here spoken of is a parable that applies to the nations as they shall be gathered before Jesus and all his true saints after sitting upon his glorious throne, at the commencement of the times of restitution, Acts iii. 21, and we find by going back to the first part of this 25th chapter of Matthew another parable called the parable of

THE TEN VIRGINS

and that this parable represents the living saints when Jesus comes as a thief in the night, and that another thing we want to remember and keep fresh in our minds is that this parable unites Jesus with all his true saints, and will never be separated any more, and that this includes the first 13 verses of the chapter, and that from the 14th verse to the 31st verse is another parable called

THE PARABLE OF THE TALENTS, and this parable represents their judgment or reward, and that they are yet with Jesus, and that none are separated except those not worthy to rule with him over "many things," and to make them so was the joy of the Lord. He then announced the next thing that will take place, and says, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." The Son of man here spoken of is Jesus himself, and that all will submit to this without the least note of discord, but how about the next statement, "and all his holy angels with him," is this all right? besides we ask right here, who are they? be they the angels in heaven? does the Bible say so? does angels always mean angels in heaven? where does the Bible say so? who are they then? They are nobody else but his true saints that come with him here. Now for the proof. If we will only stop to think, or consider just a little and look in the right direction we can't help but see that the parable of the unites Jesus with all his true saints and that the very next parable which is the parable of still holds them, and that they are not separated any more after this time. Now, when we come to understand all this we will well know that they will still be together at this coming spoken of in the 31st verse. Hence they come with him there without any question of doubt. How can Jesus come with all his true saints except he first comes as a thief in the night to take them away before it can ever be said that he will come with all his true saints in great power and glory? It cannot be done. Hence, there are two stages to our Lord's second coming.

TEN VIRGINS

THE TALENTS

1st, coming as a thief in the night to take away his true saints.

2nd, with all his true saints in great power and glory, and that the saints are to watch for and be prepared for the first stage which will be his thief-like coming in order to be ready and worthy to go with him. Luke xxi. 35; 1 Thess. v. 2, 4, 5; 2 Peter iii. 10. He will come as a thief in the night to the world but not to his true saints. That Matthew xxv. 31 represents his coming with all his true saints in great power and glory. This will be his public, and universal world-wide coming, when every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him. Matt. xxiv. 30; Mark xiii. 26; 1 Thess. iii. 13; Rev. i. 7.

The clouds spoken of in Matthew, Mark and Revelation is the great company of all his true saints coming in power and great glory.

Again, the three Greek words in the Diaglott and also Hudsons, aggelon, aggelous and aggeloi is translated messenger, and is so stated in the word for word translation, and the meaning of a messenger is any body sent, and that it does apply to man in the following places. Mark i. 2. John the Baptist is called a messenger, "Behold, I send my messenger before thy face which shall prepare thy way before thee. The word messenger is here translated from the Greek word aggelon also in Luke vii. 24, John's messengers having departed, here the word messenger is translated from the same Greek word aggelon, also in Luke ix. 52, Jesus sent his messengers before him. Here the word messenger is translated from the Greek word aggelous. Also in James ii. 25, when Rahab the harlot had received the messengers sent them out another way. Here again the word messenger is translated from the Greek word aggelous. Now we have here given four different statements from the Word of God where it is applied to man from the three Greek words aggelon, aggeloi, aggelous, and seeing that does apply to man in all of the above places from the same Greek words we do not hesitate to say that it does apply to the saints in Matt. xxv. 31.

Again, when we come to understand that the parable of the ten virgins, 1 Thess. iv. 13-17, represents our Savior's thief-like coming for all his true saints, and that then and there they rise to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall they ever be with the Lord, and that from that time on it is plain to be seen that they will ever be with the Lord, and never to be separated from him any more, and that when he makes his public, universal world-wide coming, they will still be coming with all his true saints in great power and glory, and when he will thus come as is spoken of in 1 Thess. iii. 13, then he will sit upon his glorious throne which will be the throne of David restored, or rebuilt of which throne Jesus is heir to. Please see Matt. xix. 28; Luke i. 32, 33; xxii. 29, 30; Acts xv. 13-18.

Engineering work Fulfils Bible Prophecy.

When Sir John Aird, the contractor of the great dam across the Nile at Assuan, walked across the dry bed of the river, in front of the dam, the prophecy of Isaiah was fulfilled. The "tongue of the Egyptian sea" has of a verity been destroyed. No more can it lick up the lives and harvests of Egypt at its pleasure, or by twisting to one side or the other or by curling back refuse to give Egypt moisture when the parched fields are crying for water.

The tongue of the Egyptian sea has been destroyed. Men now walk back and forth in the dry bed of the great Nile. The prophecy is fulfilled.

The "tongue of the Egyptian sea," as Isaiah so picturesquely terms the Nile, has been destroyed by one of the greatest feats of engineering ever undertaken in modern times. A great dam has been built in the Nile bed, on the southern side of the first cataract, near Assuan. The immense wall of solid granite which forms the dam extends from the right bank of the Nile to the left a distance of a mile and a quarter, and, when completed, will rise ninety feet above the level of the river at low water. The top of it will be as wide as State street and will accommodate as much traffic.

And when this top of the great dam is paved and graded into a thoroughfare, and cars and teams and people are passing at will, back and forth upon it, then will come true the last part of the prophecy of Isaiah:

"And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel in the day when he came up out of the land of Egypt."

The object of the great dam at Assuan is to transform thousands of miles of dreary desert in Egypt into smiling pastures. It is to prevent the waters of the Nile, on which all the hopes of Egypt depend, from sweeping down in ruinous floods and wasting itself in the sea. The harvests in Egypt depend entirely on the Nile. The only cultivated land is that which lies along the bank of the mighty river. These are overflowed four times a year by the rising of the Nile. The receding water leaves the land covered with a rich, black sediment that gives the land a wonderful fertility. But sometimes the Nile does not overflow at its accustomed time, and again the water, instead of rising gradually and flowing gently over its banks, comes down in a rushing torrent and instead of gently dropping its treasure of rich sediment carries it straight to the Mediterranean, where it is either hurried out into the sea or dropped into the delta.

Every year enough Nile water and soil to create several Egypts and make each one of them a smiling land of plenty is lost in the sea. It is to impound this water and regulate its flow and provide a mammoth reservoir from which thousands of miles of desert area as well as farm land may be watered at pleasure that the big dam at Assuan has been built.

The great granite wall of the dam will bottle up 1,000,000,000 tons of water. It will make a lake over 144 miles long. The flow of the water through the dam will be controlled by machinery which is enormously powerful but which by the pressure of a child's hand could let loose millions of gallons of water. The wall of the dam is pierced by 180 sluices provided with steel doors worked by the machinery. At some periods of the year 900,000 tons of water will rush through these sluices every year.

The entire cost of the Assuan dam will be over $25,000,000. The entire expense is being borne by Great Britain although ultimately it will be paid by the Egyptian government.

In addition to the great wall of granite across the Nile at Assuan, a subsidiary dam is being built at Assiut. On the dam at Assiut over 12,000 men are now being employed, the vast majority of them being natives. They receive about $1.25 a week, which is twice as much as they usually earn. On pay day the money is brought in bullion on camels across the desert from the dam at Assuan and distributed among the thousands of chattering workmen.

The great importance of the new dam at Assuan can only be appreciated when it is remembered that Egypt is the gift of the Nile.—Selected by W. H. Wilson from the Chicago Tribune.

Thou must content thyself to see the world as it is. Thou wilt never have any quiet if thou vexest thyself because thou canst not bring mankind to that exact notion of things, and rule of life, which thou hast formed in thy own mind.—Fuller.

The point of aim for our vigilance to hold in view, is to dwell upon the brightest parts in every prospect, to call off the thoughts when running upon disagreeable objects, and strive to be pleased with the present circumstances surrounding us.—Tucker.

"Love for love is but justice and gratitude; love for love is favor and kindness, but love for hatred and enmity is a most divine trait."

"A just man should account nothing more precious than his word; nothing more reservable than his faith, and nothing more sacred than his word."

All errors have only a time; after a hundred millions of objections, subtilties, sophisms and lies the smallest truth remains precisely what it was before.

"A good conscience is better than two witnesses. It softens sorrow as sun does the ice. It is a well if we are thirsty,—a shelter if the sun scorches us, and a soft pillow for us at the hour of death."

One watch set right will do to try many by; but on the other hand one that goes wrong may be the means of misleading a whole neighborhood; and the same may be said of the example we individually set to those around us.

Two Natures.

The Spirit reveals two, and only two natures impressed with the image of God:—

One Adamic, the other Elohic.
One human, the other divine.
One Earthy, the other Heavenly.
One Terrestial, the other Celestial.
One Soulical, the other Spiritual.
One Corruptible, the other Incorruptible.
One Mortal, the other Immortal.

The representatives of these two natures are identified in striking contrast by Paul in the following extract from his letter to the Romans. "Professing themselves wise they become fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God, into an image made like to corruptible man."

Sources of Birth.

The Scriptures teach that the nature of a body is agreeable to its origin:—

The first man is of the earth, earthy. 1 Cor. xv. 47.

That which is born of the flesh is flesh. 1 Cor. xv. 47.

That which is born of the spirit is is spirit. John iii. 6.

Every good and perfect gift is from above. James i. 7.

Ye must be born from above. John iii. 7.

Except a man be born from above he cannot see the kingdom of God.

The second man is the Lord from heaven. 1 Cor. xv. 47.

Our house is from heaven. 2 Cor. v. 2.

In the light of the above testimonies it is clear that man was not constituted immortal when he was created, seeing he was an earthy body formed out of the "dust of the ground."

Neither does man become immortal when he is converted, seeing that he is physically a flesh body, "born of the flesh." He must be born from above.

"Where Shall We Spend Eternity?"

What hope did the patriarchs and prophets of old have? Did they think of going to mansions in the skies? We never read of them expressing a longing desire to go to heaven, or singing this song:—

"There's a beautiful land on high,
To its glories I fain would fly.
When by sorrow pressed down
I long for the crown.
In that beautiful land on high."

They earnestly longed, and prayed, and struggled for a heavenly (heaven-like) country, (Heb. ii. 16;) but when we enquire what land they hoped to inherit, we find it was this earth made beautiful, sinless, pure, heavenly. Abraham was called to go, to a place which he should receive for an inheritance. He went to the Land of Promise (Canaan,) as a stranger. He was told to lift up his eyes and "look from the place where thou art, north, south, east and west."

"Look again,
Abram, for the land which thou seest to thee will I give it, and to thy Seed (Christ, Gal. iii. 16,) forever. Arise, walk through the land, in the length and breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." Could Abraham see heaven when he looked to the four points of the compass? Did he walk through the length and breadth of heaven above the stars? Did he, or Isaac, or Jacob, heirs with him of the same promise, have it? "No," says Stephen, (Acts vii. 3-5.) "He (God) gave him none inheritance in it." "No, not so much as to set his foot on." "No," says the apostle, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. iii. 13 and 40. "Yes but," says some one, "his seed (the Jewish nation) settled in the Land of Promise, and this was a fulfillment of it." Stop a moment, friend, you will find this was not so. They settled there UNDER THE LAW, which provided that IF they were obedient they should remain there until the Seed (Christ) should come, "but if disobedient they should be scattered in every country under heaven." Deut. xxviii. History tells its own tale; just look around and see where God's once favored nation is!

"Outcasts from thee and scattered wide
Through every nation under heaven."

And Paul tells us very plainly that the covenant (made with Abram) that was confirmed before of God in Christ (the Seed) cannot be disannulled by the law, which was 430 years after, "that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance

PROMISED TO ABRAHAM

be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise." Gal. iii. 17, 18. No, Abraham was yet to rise from the dead when he, with all the faithful of all ages who have had the Abrahamic faith, will receive the long-promised inheritance which he "saw afar off." And when not only the Jewish race, but all nations shall be blessed in him. Let us each ask ourselves the question again, Where shall we

SPEND ETERNITY?

The Scriptural answer is,—either with Christ, Abraham, the prophets, and those who come from the north, south, east and west, and sit down with them in the kingdom of God, or, in an eternal grave. There is no reason why it should be the latter; a glorious destiny is held out for the future if we will but grasp it. "And God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." How foolish it will be if we let pleasure, or business, or anything stand in the way of gaining the prize held out to us. It is a prize that seems too good to be true at first sight—until we read it in that wonderful Book,—the Bible. You will doubtless all remember that Peter, on one occasion, speaking for the twelve, asked the Master what reward they were to get when

THE KINGDOM COMES.

Matt. xix. 28. Did he say, "My dear brother, I am going to heaven, and when you die you shall be with me there to all eternity." Listen to his words, "Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." How impossible this, in heaven! How beautiful when we know by Ezek. xxxvii. 21, that the Seed (Jesus Christ,) will sit upon the throne of his father David, in Jerusalem, (Luke i. 30-33;) that the disciples of Jesus are to rule over the regathered nation in Palestine, and all the accepted saints will have rulership over the nations, some having authority over ten cities, some over five, and some over two, according to work done!

If these lines come under the eyes of any who get weary with these painful, sinful bodies, and see their friends cut down with the reaper whose name is death; we trust they will believe these glorious truths,—turn away from sin, be baptized into Christ for remission of past sin, then walk in newness of life, and then they will be sure to realize the truth of Jesus' words, "The meek shall inherit the earth."

Genesis. Chap. 22.

1. And it came to pass after these events recounted, that God tried Habraam and said unto him, Habraam, Habraam. And he said, Lo, It is I.

2. And he said, Take thy son, the beloved whom thou hast loved, Isaak namely, and go thy way into the high land, and offer him there in the way of a whole-burnt-offering service upon one of the mountains which I shall have told thee of.

3. And Habraam arose at dawn and saddled his ass; and he took along with him two of his own housemen and Isaak his son, and having split wood for the whole-burnt-offering service he arose and went his way. And on the third day he came to the place of which God had told him.

4. And lifting up his eyes he saw the place afar off.

5. And Habraam said to his housemen, Do ye stay here with the ass, and I and the lad will go on here, and when we have performed our act of worship we will return unto you.

6. And Habraam took the wood for the whole-burnt-offering-service and placed it upon Isaak his son; and he took in his hands also the fire and the sacrificial knife (a short weapon worn like a dagger) and they two went their way together.

7. And Isaak said unto Habraam, his father, Father; and he said, What is it, child? And he said, Lo, the fire and the wood; where is the sheep for the whole-burnt-offering service?

8. And Habraam said, God will see for himself the sheep for a whole-burnt-offering-service, child; and they both went their way together,

9. And came unto the place of which God had told him. And Habraam built an altar there and placed upon it the wood; and binding Isaak his son's feet together, he placed him upon the altar upon the wood.

10. And Habraam was stretching out his hand to take the knife to slay his son.

11. And an angel of the Lord called him from out the heavens and said, Habraam, Habraam, and he said, Lo, it is I.

12. And he said, Do not lay thy hand upon the lad, nor do ought to him, For now I know that thou dost fear God, and hast not spared thy beloved son for my sake.

13. And Habraam looked with his eyes and saw, and lo, a ram caught by his horns in a thicket of Sabek. And Habraam went his way and took the ram and offered him in the way of a whole-burnt-offering service instead of Isaak his son.

14. And Habraam called the name of that place, The Lord saw, that they might say today on the mountain the Lord appeared.

15. And an angel of the Lord called Habraam a second time from out the heavens saying.

16. By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for whose sake thou didst do this thing recounted, and didst not spare thy beloved son for my sake.

17. Surely blessing I will bless thee and multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens and as the sand that is beside the lip of the sea; and thy seed will inherit the cities of thy adversaries.

18. And they will have been blessed in thy seed, all the nations of the earth will, because thou didst hearken to my voice.

19. And Habraam returned unto his men-servants and they arose and went their way together unto the Well of the Oath, and Habraam had taken up his abode at the Well of the Oath.

20. And it came to pass after these events recounted that it was also told Habraam, saying, Lo, Melcha, she also hath brought forth sons for thy brother Nachoor.

21. Namely Uz first-born and Baux, his brother, and Kamouel, father of the Suroi (Syrians).

22. And Chazad and Azau and Phaldes and Yeldar and Bathouel.

23. And Bathouel begot Hrebekka (Rebeka). These were eight sons that Melcha brought forth for Nachoor the brother of Habraam.

24. And his concubine, Hreuma by name, brought forth also, namely Tabek, and Taam and Zochos and Mocha.

Comment.

Observe "the beloved" made familiar in the New Covenant as applied to the Christ, here obscured by a round-about expression in the R. V. "whom thou lovest."

Also "whole-burnt-offering" instead of "burnt-offering" R. V. not unimportant in its typical significance.

Also in 3rd verse "clave" R. V. instead of "split." Why preserve these archaisms?

In the 7th verse "Here am I" R. V. instead of "What is it?" in the text.

In the 8th verse "God will provide" R. V. instead of "will see" text. Also "lamb" R. V. instead of "sheep" text. Also "bound Isaac his son" R. V. instead of bound "his feet" text.

11th verse R. V. "The angel" should be "angel."

12th verse R. V. says "only son" text says "beloved son."

18th verse R. V. inserts "behind him" and omits "of Sabek" "a thicket of Sabek" the text says.

In the 14th verse R. V. reads that Habraam called that place "Jehovah Jireh." The text says "The Lord saw" conforming his previous inspired answer to Isaak that the Lord would see for himself—not "provide." Also in this verse "That they might say today on the mountain the Lord appeared" instead of as in R. V. "As it is said to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be provided," which is a theological interpretation instead of a translation. "Only son" again in R. V. instead of "beloved son."

17th verse R. V. says "possess" text says "inherit" a very important legal difference. Also "gate" instead of "cities." This prophecy and promise relates to us nations and we ought to know exactly what was promised I think. The reader will also do well to note here the 19th verse R. V. "Beersheba" is in the text "The Well of the Oath."

20th verse R. V. has "Milcah" instead of "Melcha" and "Nahor" instead of "Nachoor."

21st verse R. V. has "Uz" instead of "Uuz." And "Buz" instead of "Baux" and "Kemuel" instead of "Kamouel" and "the father of Arain" instead of "the father of the Suroi" (or the Syrians) in the text.

22nd verse R. V. has "Chesed" and "Hazo" and "Pildash" and "Jidalph" and "Bethel" instead of "Chazad," "Azau" and "Phaldes" and "Yeldar" and "Bathouel."

The reader will do well to carefully note these differences of names if he is a student at all of Hebrew genealogy. Such questions for instance have arisen as "Where is the land of Uz" mentioned in the book of Job and how did it come to be so called? Now the fact is that no land was ever called "the land of Uz;" but was called "Ausitis" or "the Ausitis" or "the land of Uuz" or "Aus" this change being easily accounted for as a dialectic change. "The Ausitis" was a country well known to the ancients" on the borders of Idoumaia (Edom R. V.) and Arabia, and was Job's native land.

Observe the Hrebekka (Rebekah R. V.) genealogy given in the 23d verse.

In the 24th verse R. V. of the offspring enumerated "Gaham" should be "Taam." This may be of interest to the Scotch as "Taam" is still a good old Scotch name. Where did the Scotch get this old name? It is not in any of the old English versions of the Bible.

The Second Death.

In Restitution of Oct. 24, 1900, Bro. Daniel Howard states what he believes to be the meaning of the term second death, found in Revelations. I had entertained a different opinion, which I beg leave to submit. I give it as an opinion merely, and am not disposed to be dogmatic; and would be glad if other brethren would write on the same theme, to the end that we may get clearer views of the purport of the Scriptures in which these words occur. It often happens that a right interpretations of one Scripture aids us in getting a clear understanding of others.

The term second implies a first of the same kind or character. What then was the kind or character of the death to which the death spoken of in the Revelations stand second.

At the time of the flood there was a general and almost universal death on this planet; at least on the inhabited part of it; and the flood stands as the dividing line, between the heavens and earth that were of old,—the first—and the heavens and the earth that now are—the second—"reserved unto fire" (see 2 Peter iii. 5-13) when this destruction occurs there will be another general death, and the death by fire will stand as the dividing line between the heavens and the earth that now are and the new heavens and the new earth (the third) wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Read 3rd chapter of 2 Peter, and there are other passages of Scripture, that indicate that this planet is yet to undergo a renovation by fire. See Mal. iv., "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stumble and the day that cometh shall burn them up." The second death will have power over such. See Isaiah xxviii. 15.

The manner in which the second death is predicted of those who are to suffer by it is significant. Death and hell, and those whose names are not found written in the book of life, are cast into a lake of fire; and this is the second death. Some of those who suffer death at this time may not have died before.

Note also the language used in the case of those who escape it. They shall not be hurt of the second death. The second death hath no power over such. Now if this death stood as second to the death men die individually in this age, would it not be more in harmony with such a view, to say, he that overcometh shall not die the second death. The language used would indicate that the second death was something that was to occur, but that he that overcometh will not be hurt by it.

Obituary.

On Sunday afternoon, March 24th, the 80th anniversary of his birth, our father, Wm. H. Knapp, died at his home on Battle Creek St., at Galesburg, Mich. Of so long a life much might be said or written, and a life like his would be one long record of usefulness. Born in Orange Co., N. Y., March 24, 1821; married to Eliza Rogers, March 19, 1842; moved to Mich. Aug., 1845. For awhile he found employment at his trade in one of the pioneer blacksmith shops of this village. On his birthday the 24th of March, 1846. He removed with his small family to a home in the woods of Charleston township. There for many years he was the only blacksmith for miles around, and shoeing horses and oxen (for which he made his own nails) sharpening plowpoints, repairing tools, and other work incidental to the general utility man of pioneer days, were done by him in exchange for work in getting his own land cleared of its heavy timber and "broke up." Very little money was in circulation in those days. For about thirty years he lived on this farm and during the time two or three of the Annual Conferences of the Church of God were held there in the Knapp school house, and as many as sixty visitors were entertained in his home at one time. In April, 1873, he removed to this village where the closing years of his long life were passed. Where ever his home, each recurring year added to his circle of friends, and increased the respect in which he was held. He was the village authority for dates, having kept a personal diary for over 50 years. On the 12th of June 1900, our dear mother died, and since that time father has been greatly broken in his health, and seemed to lose his delight in living. His faith in the Scripture, and his faith in the things concerning the kingdom, and the resurrection of the just to eternal life was always strong. He was unconscious nearly all the time during the two weeks of his last illness. The pastor of the Congregational Church who was a warm personal friend of father and who also preached our mother's funeral sermon, spoke words appropriate to the occasion, to a large circle of friends and neighbors, March 26th, and after life's fitful fever, he sleeps well. One son, Edgar W., of Viola, Idaho, and three daughters, Mrs. W. Ford, and Miss Emma of Galesburg, and Mrs. Frank Hawkes of Chicago, survive.

Mary M. Ford.

Henry C. Welton was born in the State of New York, Dec. 14, 1823, and died at his home, at Freedom Neb., Feb. 27, 1901; aged 77 years, 2 mo., and 13 days. In 1828 his father moved to Medicine Co., Ohio. He was then married to Caroline Spencer. He moved to Soak Co., Wis., in 1856. There were born to them 4 children, 2 girls and 2 boys. His wife died in the year 1859. In 1884 he came to Frontier Co., Neb., and was living with his son, our esteemed Brother Jason, at his death. Grandpa, as we all called him, embraced the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and was baptized Sept. 29, 1890, by Elder A. Adams. He was loved by all who knew him. Grandpa was always ready to give a helping hand, and was always to church when possible. How we will miss him in our meetings and Sunday school. We remember a statement of his once when talking with him. Others will not prevent me from doing my duty, I want to be there. We can truly say he was ready for the kingdom. When we think of the times and compare them with Scripture, he will not sleep long. Grandpa's chair will be empty, but we sorrow not as those that have no hope. It can be said of grandpa, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." With a long procession we followed Bro. Welton to his last resting place Mount Zion, where Elder J. T Prime preached a few words of comfort from 1 Cor. xv. How strange the sermon seemed to some outside the truth, but it was so plain, they could not but understand it. O brother and sister, may we live faithful unto the end and gain eternal life.

We do not wish dear grandpa back,
To roam this world of care;
There is no sickness where thou art,
No pain, no sorrow there.

But in the grand eternal age
He will for ever be
Amidst the everlasting flowers,
We will grandpa Welton see.

Brother Underwood:

I will notify you with this, that our oldest daughter, Susan Siesle, died last Thursday, at noon, March 28, after a long and painful sickness of over two years. She came with us to the State of Nebraska 17 years ago. We used to live at Canton, Ohio, but sold out there in 1883, and moved to this State, on a farm about two and one-half miles northwest of the city of Columbus, where we still reside. Susan got married March 1, 1887, to Henry Lamberton, and four years later she lost her eye sight, and was blind now ten years. To this union were born five children, two sons and three daughters, the second son died when two weeks old, four are alive, from 6 to 12 years old. She was baptized in the fall of 1890, by Bro. A. Adams. During this ten years of living in darkness, she attended to her family duties, and was so gifted that she kept her children clean, but two years ago, or over she became dropsical and has been sick ever since, so she desired to go home and be with her father and mother on October 1, 1900. Since that time she has had her mother's care. But with all the medical aid we could not restore her health any more. She suffered greatly but took it all patiently, and for the last three weeks she expressed herself, and longed to be at rest until Jesus would come and bring his reward with him, to give every one as his works will be. She was 35 years, 6 months and 8 days old. She leaves a husband, 4 children, parents, 1 brother and 2 sisters. We laid her to rest last Saturday afternoon, March 30. Bro. A. Adams could not come on account of sickness. We had Mr. Monroe, pastor of the Congregational church. His text was Romans viii. 28. This is the third one of our children we have buried since we came to this State, all side by side, and if Jesus delays his coming for a while, we must expect soon to follow our children, having passed the three score and ten years, what more can we expect here in this world? We read in Romans viii. 18, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Yours truly,

John W. & Susan Siesle.

Editor Restitution:

I have just received a letter from my brother in Aultsville, Ont., Canada, stating the death of an older brother, in North Williamsburg, who also lived in Canada. He died about a year ago, aged (I think) about 81 years. He was a constant reader of The Restitution, having taken it from the time it was first published (I think) by Elder Marsh. He was a decided believer of God's Bible, and was not moved by the Apostacy. He was also isolated like myself; his theme was the Word of God continually, it was his study daily. I made him a visit about four years ago, and found him firm in the truth, which gave me a good deal of comfort. But he is now waiting in the grave for the coming of our King, who will say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

C. P. Aldine.

Aaron Thomas was born Aug. 29, 1832, and died near Walkerton, Ind., April 8, 1901, aged 69 years, 2 mo., and 10 days. He was married to Rebecca Frederick in 1855. To this union there were born 18 children. The mother and 6 children preceded him in death. He leaves a wife and nine children, three sisters and a host of relatives and friends. The funeral was held at the United Brethren church north of Plymouth, and the undersigned spoke words of comfort from Rev. i. 18. The deceased was a member of the Church of God,

Poetry.

Not Lost.

The look of sympathy, the gentle word,
Spoken so low that only angels heard;
The secret act of pure self sacrifice
Unseen by men, but marked by angels' eyes,
These are not lost!

The sacred music of a tender strain
Wrung from a poet's heart by grief and pain,
And chanted timidly with doubt and fear,
To hurrying crowds who scarcely pause to hear,
It is not lost!

The silent tear that falls at dead of night,
Over soiled robes which once were pure and white,
The prayers that rise like incense from the soul,
Longing for Christ to make it clean and whole,
These are not lost!

The happy dreams that gladdened all our youth,
When dreams had less of self and more of truth;
The child-like faith, so tranquil and so sweet,
Which sat like Mary at the Master's feet,
These are not lost!

The kindly plans devised for others' good,
So seldom guessed, so little understood;
The quiet, steadfast love, which strove to win
Some wanderer from the woeful ways of sin,
These are not lost!

Not lost, O Lord! for in that city bright
Our eyes shall see the past by clearer light,
And things long-hidden from our gaze below
Thou wilt reveal, and we shall clearly know
These were not lost!

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gellelly, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—Ed.]

HEAT.

"The glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another; one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, and star differeth from star in glory.—Paul.

No one can read the ancient Hebrew Scriptures without noting the one leading thought, namely: the grand conception of a Creative Power so stupendous that even the material manifestations in the things seen about us and above us are only incidental expressions, and that behind all there is a Living Intelligence and Vital Energy that handles, controls and manipulates "according to the councils of his own will." This august thought is the foundation also of Christian revelation, which is after all only an extension of what was before, and where we find this thought the central intelligent idea of the individual there we will also find some sense of moral perspective, some appreciation of the Majesty on High, on the one hand, and of the littleness and inconstancy of human power and existence, on the other. But, unfortunately, this is the very thought that in modern times has been relegated over to teachers of theology, and has been eliminated from the realm of scientific theory, yet it is so infinitely true that it belongs to and dominates all knowledge. To the unprejudiced mind all nature is a complex adjustment of means to ends, whether studied in the petals of a flower or the wing of a bee or the orbit of a planet, and the discovery of the why and wherefore of the thus and so is really the highest knowledge that human beings can attain. It is human mind tracing after the divine conception, and infinitely delicate tracery it is. The microscope cannot reach the limit of its fineness and no art may copy its beauty.

One great objection to the nebular theory is its coarseness and crude clumsiness. Fire, fire; nothing but fire. "The glory of the celestial" is the glory of the foundry, the furnace and the melting pot—all the elements molten, all heaven a region of blazes where no living thing can exist. Even the dark-complexioned party who attends to the culinary department of antique theology would find, like Noah's dove, no rest for the sole of his hoof, and his asbestos plumage would avail him nothing if he couldn't swim. It is all too hot and too crude. A century ago, before we understood about electricity, magnetism, etc., such ideas were pardonable. Then a big log fire on the hearth was the centre of life and light for the household. Hence, the conception of a flaming sun burning itself out like a big pine log and shedding the heat of its destruction all around. Then, as it was calculated that even if made of the best quality of coal the sun would burn itself out in a few hundred years, they invented a rain of comets that kept up a fresh supply of fuel. But as the comets invariably went off the way they came, without dumping even their tail loads, that idea had to be dropped, and with it the pine stump theory goes out too.

There is really no evidence that the sun is a hot body. It does seem so, just as it seems to rise and set, but a little unprejudiced thought will prove the contrary, for the sun shines in cold weather just as it does in hot, and we can freeze in the sunshine or swelter in the darkness, according to the state of the weather. As a matter of fact our earth is millions of miles nearer the sun during our northern winter than during our summer, and if the heat simply radiated from it as from a big fire we would be much warmer when closer. The truth seems to be that the sun's rays, although themselves cold, have the power of developing heat under certain conditions, and under certain other conditions they will not, just as the electric power through a cold copper will, with certain mechanical combinations, cook beefsteak or melt a diamond, and with other mechanical combinations it will run an ice plant, and the natural conditions that obtain on our planet for the regulations of the heat, moisture, etc., are infinite and much more complex and delicate than any human invention. Prof. Ball, an English astronomer of note, in a recent article in a monthly periodical, as an illustration to prove that heat radiates from the sun, calls attention to the glass frames used by gardens to raise early plants, etc. Unfortunately for him, his illustration is the most complete refutation of his theory, for although glass permits light to radiate through it freely it obstructs radiated heat. This is easily proved by holding the hand near enough the hot stove to feel the heat very sensibly, then interposing a cold window glass. I have seen men employed in casting white hot metal use a sheet of ordinary glass to shield the face while examining the pot in the furnace, and so likewise if one desired to shut out heat radiated from the sun a sheet of glass would be the proper thing to use, but the gardner has no radiated heat to deal with; the sun's rays, he knows, will develop heat with the conditions he applies, and he makes, as it were, a little climate by itself in his hot-bed. This question of climate and warmth is evident at all times and everywhere. In certain valleys in California and Italy, where the orange trees bloom and frost never comes, can be seen in the distance mountain peaks perpetually crowned with snow. Yet the sun radiates equally on both, and the mountains at midday are closer to it than the valleys are. All well-informed people know now that light, heat, and electricity are different forms of power, and that they can be changed one into the other. We also know now that light can be produced without heat, and several of the skilled electricians of today are working on the problem of producing it commercially. And doubtless the sun emits his glorious rays by a process which we at present cannot fully understand, and we have in our own planet a somewhat similar mystery in the Aurora Borealis, or Northern Lights, which is said to resemble somewhat the sun's corona as seen during a total eclipse. Now, this light is seen at its best under conditions of severe cold, yet it would be absurd to conclude that these cold conditions must always obtain when such light is produced, just as it is absurd to say that light can only be produced by burning or by the incandescence of heat.

At present we are surrounded by mysteries caused by the limitations of our knowledge, but it is safe to conclude from well-known premises that we are engulfed not in the blind swirl of molten debris that has slung itself off in chunks and swiped itself into something like shape by the mere weight of its own helplessness, but in an intelligent, controlling Power that is working carefully and patiently to a definite purpose—to a purpose that to intelligent beings, such as we are, is capable of being known and at least partially understood.

Dear Brother Underwood:

In my letter to Bro. Robison, in speaking of children, the types make me say, "There is a theory that children who die before the age of accountability, are in the same way saved by the power of the blood of Jesus without any volition on their part." What I intended to say is "are in some way saved by the power of the blood of Jesus."

Fifteen Hundred Years Before Christ.

Tablets have been discovered and translated which date back to fifteen centuries before Christ was born. The story engraved upon the tablets accords in a large degree with the account of the temptation, fall, and the loss of immortality in the Garden of Eden.

I will make a few brief extracts from an article which appeared in the Chicago Tribune.

"Translations from cuneiform tablets in the Berlin Museum have awakened a theological controversy in Germany that seems likely to spread as the facts are known. These records tell of the temptation of the first man and the first woman in the Garden of Eden. "Higher critics" of the Bible say it means that the writers of the book got the story of Eve's temptation from the Babylonian traditions, while the defenders of the Bible assert that the Babylonian version offers another proof of the truth of the story, which was well done in early times. Both factions, however, admit the importance of the discovery.

The discovery was made by Professor Zimmern of the University of Breslau, who has just been through the tablets now in the Berlin Museum, and from them extracted the story of paradise that is regarded as in close conformity with the Bible account.

These tablets now in the museum date back to the fifteenth century before Christ. Their authenticity is unquestioned."

The first paragraph of the legend reads as follows:

"Adapa, son of the sea god Ea, is the first man. He has great wisdom, but is denied immortality. He lives in the sanctuary of Ea, in Eridu, at the mouth of the Euphrates and Tigris. He acts as a priest of Ea, and incidentally catches fish from the sea to supply the sanctuary."

Writing of these tablets and of the coincidences that are found in the Scripture story, Professor Zimmern says:

"These statements are understood by many scholars as reflecting really the oldest sentiments prevalent in the beginning among the Hebrews concerning paradise.

"In many of the details the two stories agree to a remarkable degree. When Ea declares that the food and drink of death will be offered to Adapa, he reminds one of the statement made in Genesis that on the day that Adam and Eve eat of the tree of life they shall die.

"Fundamentally, both stories have the same underlying thought: That man still falls short of perfect equality with God in that he lacks immortality. As in Genesis, it is declared that man is to be driven from paradise lest he eat of the tree of life and live forever, so in the Babylonian narrative Anu remarks that Ea has revealed to Adapa the secrets of heaven and of earth—has given him the highest wisdom—and asks, What can be added to this that is even more valuable than Ea's gift? The answer is, the food of life; but, as Adapa refuses to take this, he thereby loses immortality both for himself and his descendants."

In addition to these records in the museum of Berlin there is a Babylonian seal cylinder in the British Museum, in the middle of which is the holy tree of life. To the right and the left of it is a male and a female figure, eating of the fruit of the tree, while behind the figure of the woman a huge serpent is unwinding its coils.

These myths will hardly be questioned by any one as not having a bearing upon the Scripture story of Adam and Eve in the garden. Only it is possible that the orthodox and the higher critics in America, like those in Germany, may not agree as to whether the Bible story influenced the pagans or whether the pagans influenced the Scripture writers. Bible students have known for long that the Babylonian story of the creation and of the deluge has kept reasonably close to the main features of the Bible story of the same phenomena, but this is not regarded as important as that the stories of the fall of man should be so similar.

The cuneiform inscriptions through which so much of Babylonian life, literature, and tradition has come were upon clay, impressed into it by the wedge of the writer. Fine clay was selected and carefully kneaded and molded. One side of the tablet was left flat and the other rounded. The wedge-writing was impressed into both sides of the clay, holes were made in the ex hotness, and the tablet baked.

The holes found in the tablets were for liberating the steam which generated in the baking. The substance when baked became of the texture of the best pottery and is indestructible from the action of the elements.

Professor Zimmern's discoveries on the cuneiform tablets will have a direct bearing upon the two figures seated by the tree of life, as shown on the seal cylinder in the British Museum. This inscription has long been looked upon as a possible picture of the temptation of Eve, but until Professor Zimmern's researches nothing from Babylonian writings could be found to add weight to the belief."

The above calls to my mind a passage in Luke xix. 37-40, which reads as follows:

"And when he was come nigh, even at now the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen; Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest. And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out."

These early disciples were more demonstrative than the disciples of modern times. "They began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen. Do we "cry out with a loud voice" as we so often see the truth of Holy Scripture confirmed by the voice of the stones. Or is it a rebuke to us that we hold our peace too much upon the light we possess on the question of life and immortality, that the stones now cry out?

Report of Labor.

At Wheatland I received a hearty welcome in the homes of Bros. Stagoner and Tindell, and March 3rd baptized Bro. Tindell into the all saving name. The brother was baptized years ago and was a worker in the Baptist church, but in later years came to a knowledge of the truth and having received it with gladness embraced this first opportunity to be obedient. The Christian church was open to us, and we began meetings under what seemed favorable circumstances, but word was received of the death of an old resident, and ex-pastor of this church, who was brought home for burial, and this broke into our plan; so reluctantly, we left these brethren hoping to return at some future date. Workers are sadly needed in California. Bro. and Sister Woodward are with us at Scholls, Oregon, at present. Words are inadequate to express some things, and when we say we are indeed having a feast of good things, we poorly express the blessing of these meetings to this congregation and this community. We sadly need all the help we can get, and their coming is timely. May the Lord grant them health and strength to go on in the good work. May we dig deeper for divine truth, dear brethren, and with supplication and prayer draw nearer to God. Yours for truth,

Edwin E. Groat.

Dear Restitution:

I left my home in Wenatchee, Wash., February 20th to go to Ellensburg to assist Brother Skeels and the little band of brothers and sisters in that place to hold a series of meetings, going by the way of Seattle to reach Ellensburg, making a distance of about three hundred miles when really it is only fifty to go over the range of mountains, which are between here and there. But the snow is too deep in the winter to cross with teams. So taking the train here at Wenatchee on the Great Northern railroad, I went to Seattle, then going on the Northern Pacific from there to Ellensburg. Bro. Skeels and I arrived there on the same train and dear faithful Brother and Sister Cox were at the train to meet us. They gave us a cordial welcome and took us to their own home. The members of the Christian church gave Bro. Skeels a cordial invitation to use their church building for which we were very thankful. We began the meetings Friday, March 1, continuing until March 17. Bro. Skeels preaching 18 discourses in all. The first evening he preached a grand sermon, using the Lord's prayer for his text. Then evening after evening he presented God's blessed truth to a fair audience. He presented it very forcibly, yet kindly, as Bro. Skeels knows how to do. The congregations were not what we wished they could have been, but on account of so much sickness of contagious diseases it was hard to get people out. But not withstanding all that there was a good interest aroused and three more were added to the little flock and others have announced their intention of coming in soon. Bro. Skeels' kindly sermons and expressions in the closing of these meetings won the respect and esteem of every one that heard him. The last sermon was full of love and admonition. We closed the meetings by singing that grand old hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," after which the good bys were said, and Bro. Skeels was ready to depart on the morning train for his home in Scholls, Oregon, with the blessed assurance that God's Word will not return unto him void. The seed has been sown in Ellensburg that will spring up and bare fruit for the Master's use. Your Sister in Christ,

Mary Patterson.

Dear Restitution:

Some more work has been done for the precious Master who said, "Occupy till I come." Some more seed has been sown in his name. Dear Bro. and Sister Woodward have been with us and have gone again. Feeble words cannot express the good which their coming did for us and what a time of refreshing we had. They arrived here from the east Sunday, Jan. 27, 1901. Blank and desolate enough did our little town seem to them, but a company of the brother and sisters were at the train to welcome them; and they were soon assured that even in the little town of Wenatchee, "in the far, far west" there are those who have the same blessed faith. Meetings commenced Monday, Jan. 28th. Brothers and sisters came from Waterville to aid in the meetings and night after night we met to hear God's blessed Word proclaimed. Each evening's service was preceded by a prayer and praise meeting. Owing to much sickness in the community the congregations were not what had been anticipated, but regardless of these difficulties the hall was pretty well filled each night. A deep interest was manifested throughout the meetings. Aroused by the truth which was put so impressively before them, many like the Bereans of old, "searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so." They held twenty-nine meetings, extending from January 28 to February 22. On February 23rd they departed for Waterville, where they held a series of meetings. After their return from there they held five more meetings. Twenty-two in all came forward and declared their intention of walking in that new life. Thirteen of this number were obedient to baptism. There are many still of those who attended the meetings who strongly believe in the one faith, yet did not respond to the call. We trust the seed may not be lost, but may even at some future time spring up and bear fruit. Our last meeting was held Wednesday evening March 20. We would fain have had these dear ones stay with us longer but the Father's loving business called them elsewhere. They departed March 21 for Scholls, Oregon, where they expected to hold meetings. It was with sad hearts that we said good by to dear Bro. and Sister Woodward, and yet our hearts were thankful that God had answered our prayers and sent these two faithful workers to labor for a short time here in the west. As we said our farewells, our minds went back to the time when the dear brothers and sisters parted with their beloved Paul as he left them to go to Jerusalem. We said good by, but not just as those early Christians did however, for we hope we may see Brother and Sister Woodward's faces again. We have learned to love them dearly during their work among us, and pray if it is his divine will we may have them with us again.

Your Sister in the blessed hope,

Myrtle Patterson.

Brother Underwood:

Reading The Restitution of Mar. 27, I saw a piece headed "Divine Healing," and I read it, and can say amen and amen to it, and it looks to me that every one that has the knowledge of the true God could say the same. I say with Bro. Hogan that it is the devil's last scheme to deceive. Oh, let them that have taken the name of Christ (the true healer) upon themselves steer clear of such work; let no man take our crown. We are told of the things that are coming on the people and Christ says, "Watch, keep yourselves unspotted from the world." There is everything coming up to deceive. Brothers and sisters, if any man come to you and claim to be a healer, ask him to heal you in the name of Christ, and if he cannot, shun him as a viper. I think we are living in trying times. The tares are being bound for the burning. There are all kind of lodges coming up to bind the people together. Will Christ go to the lodge room to find his servants? I think not? If we see a brother in danger let us warn him. None of us are perfect, for we but see and know in part, if we are faithful when that which is perfect is come, then we will see the true light. We are poor, erring mortals, apt to be led astray by the cunning craftiness of men, so let us try every spirit and see if they are of God. In my weakness I expect to stand firm till death. Submitted in love of the truth. Yours in Christ,

Jesse Harrold.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and past-milleunialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

"What the superior man seeks is in himself; what the small man seeks is in others."—Confucius.

Communicated.

To Our Ministers.

It is to encourage you in your work that this article is penned. You are sometimes cast down in spirit because our advance is slow. You labor hard, preach earnestly, study God's Word faithfully, and yet there is not so much growth as you expected.

I am not wavering in any of the grand doctrines of the Bible. Of course I know that we haven't all the truth there is, and I am reaching out constantly for more. So are we all doing. I have studied the Bible to more profit this winter than ever before during the same length of time, and yet there are many problems there still unsolved.

One of the chief difficulties in the way of advance is our proneness to follow a leader—to copy his sayings and doctrines and make them our own. Many of these leaders were wrong, and the effect has been to lead us into ideas which must be unlearned before real advance in the things of God can be made.

There are some questions also which after careful study do not seem to open to us, or in other words are too deep to fathom or too intricate for our mental grasp. After a careful study of them, if that is the result it is perhaps best to lay them aside until we are farther advanced in divine things; then I have no doubt we shall be able to comprehend them.

Again, our expectations are sometimes raised too high, and because we cannot at once realize our ideal we become discouraged. This is true in relation to the reception of the Holy Spirit and gifts to follow, as well as answers to our prayers.

That we as a people are lacking in many things along the fruit-bearing line, is evident. Yet these things require time. Fruit is not matured in a moment. There is the sowing, the careful cultivation of the plants, then the blossom and the slow development of the fruit itself to perfection.

If we have not seen as much fruit as we ought to see—if the church is still standing in the blade state and the ripe, full corn in the ear, has not yet been reached, there is a cause for it. It may be the soil is at fault. It may be that the seed-sower has neglected to cultivate the young plants. The cause must be sought out and the defect remedied instead of being discouraged. Does not a part of the fault lie with the teachers?

I look over my own work through 40 years as I ask the above question. I have sown the seed of truth broadcast, 'tis true; but have I not often failed to make a personal application of that truth to the individual life of the hearer? Knowledge, zeal and love all have clustered constantly about the glorious gospel of the blessed God, and yet at times we may have forgotten that those who listened needed a word of personal reference to them, and a manifest interest in their obedience. And after they obeyed, to watch over them, and cultivate the seed which had fallen into a good and honest heart, that fruit might be the result. That they abide in Christ. That they may bear much fruit. And you, my brother, are like myself. You are rich in doctrine. The kingdom and its beauties are the stock of your trade. You can hardly preach a sermon on the application of principles which ought to govern the lives of men. Our converts have had more doctrine than practice. More seed has been sown than cultivated. Do you expect the pupil to outrun his teacher? Or do you expect a harvest without cultivating what you have sown? Let us work more in the future for fruit; we have sown in many parts of the field—let us stop there for a time and cultivate and God's Word for it, "In due time we shall reap if we faint not."

Do you say we have not received the Spirit? We may not have complied with the terms required. There may be something wrong in our lives or in our faith, or we may be opposing in ignorance, some of God's requirements. It is possible to have the truth and yet to nullify that truth by holding a pagan doctrine which shapes our conduct. Our ignorance is no excuse. God works in nature and in grace by fixed laws, and when we are opposed to them, whether intentionally or ignorantly, he suspends his blessings until we comply with the terms. If seed is sown upon a barren rock, God will never honor that sowing with an abundant harvest, whether sown in ignorance or with a full knowledge of the facts. It is as true today as in the times of Jesus—that no man can gather figs from thistles. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

It is well, then for us, as ministers of the gospel, not to be discouraged in the Lord's work; but to sow joyfully the good seed, water and tend it with care. Purge ourselves from every form of paganism displeasing to God, lovingly and tenderly leading in the footsteps of Christ those who are called; and in humility learning the great lessons placed before us as disciples in the school of Christ.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Poetry.

The Morning Cometh.

Lo! from his Eastern cloudy cradle-chamber
I hear the herald's [illegible] warning
Day's glory she [illegible] up-climb
The rosy splendors [illegible] coming.
See you triumphant standard [illegible]
Chase the retreating hosts of night.
The valleys sing, the hills rejoice,
And sounds afloat one cheering voice,
"'Tis coming. Yes, 'tis coming."

'Tis coming. Yes, our night of tears
Shall fade before Immanuel's glory,
Which now, to gild our earth, appears.
Foretold in ancient song and story,
Foretold in that seraphic strain
With notes which haunt our world again;
For traveling through the shadowy years,
The Just, the Merciful appears.
Behold! the Lord is coming.

Jesus, the Logos of Yahweh.

"In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and God was the Logos." John i. 1.

THE GREEK "LOGOS."

"That the Greek intellect, escaping from Pantheism, grasped the superiority of the Christian over the Pagan creed is shown in a monument of philology to live as long as history. The Greek version of the gospel according to St. John reads: 'In the beginning was the Logos.' 'Logos' comprehends, in Greek, thought, wisdom, power, knowledge and love. The Logos was from the beginning with God and God was Logos. In the English version, 'In the beginning was the word,' the sublime ideality of the Greek term is lost. At the starting point of English speech, however, its infinite spirit was preserved in 'logic,' the science of reason. The architects of all modern Aryan speech projected it into philology as foundation-stone and arch of theology, theos-logos, science of God; biology, science of life; geology, science of earth; genealogy, science of descent; anthropology, science of the human [illegible]; archeology, a science of ancient things. Thus it will continue to command vision intellectual and moral activity as long as man's capacity to discover new truth, physical or abstract, shall endure.

"In this hour persistence of classic spirit in homage to Christianity is keen in the general consciousness. Every century has had its high tide of skepticism, its ebb of belief. Every century of the eighteen has returned at its close to the Logos; for me" holds fast through all the vicissitudes of progress to the conviction that in the beginning was knowledge, wisdom, power, the Logos of the Greek, and sweetly bourgeons the evangel that the Logos was and is and will ever be God."

The above translation from the Greek version, together with the above brief extract from a scholarly article in the Tribune, throws a flood of light upon the first few verses of John's gospel.

The majestic and sublime truth couched in the language of the above text, is too deep and rich to be comprehended by the fleshly mind, unless it be first illuminated by divine wisdom. It contains the center truth around which all kindred truth must cluster. That sublime truth is expressed in the following language: "Christ, the one Logos, the Eternal Utterance of Divine Omnipotence."

The key to unlock the mystery, which the apostacy has thrown about the above text, is found in the definition given in the above extract: "Logos comprehends in Greek,

THOUGHT, WISDOM, POWER, KNOWLEDGE, LOVE."

1. "In the beginning was the Logos." That means, that "in the beginning was," "thought, wisdom, power, knowledge, love." The existence of such attributes at that time, in one personality, can never be doubted.

2. "And the Logos was with God." Can any one prove that "thought, wisdom, power, knowledge and love," was not "WITH God," "in the beginning?"

3. "And God WAS the Logos." Or, in other words, God himself was essentially in his attributes, "thought, wisdom, power, knowledge and love."

Hence, the Greek comprehension of Logos, clears away the mist. See Jno. iv. 7, 8: "Love is of God," (shows its origin). "God is love," the ruling attribute of his person. See also 1 John i. 5, 7: "As he (God) is IN the light," "God is light."

A writer speaking of the war of independence, uses almost parallel language to the above text in John i. 1: he says, "In the beginning of the war of independence, there was a hope in America, and that hope was WITH Washington, and that hope WAS Washington."

LOGOS MADE FLESH.

"The Logos was made flesh, and dwelt among us."

1. How? Ans. "Made of a woman."

2. When? "Under the law." Gal. iv. 4.

Now, I submit, that it is not proper to count on anything existing before it is made. At that very time, "thought, wisdom, power, knowlege and love, the pure Greek of logos, became embodied in human flesh. Or in other words, "thought, wisdom, power, knowledge and love, dwelt in Jesus in complete fullness. This was literally the make up of his personality. He was so "thoughtful" for others good. His "wisdom" even as a boy confounded the learned doctors of the law. His "power" could speak the dead into life, and calm the troubled sea. His "knowledge" was marvelous.

THE LOGOS AS AN APPELLATIVE.

The word logos, as applied to the person of Jesus, Dr. A. Clark says: "Logos should be transferred, for the same reason that Jesus Christ is left untranslated, as every appellative of the Savior was descriptive of some excellence in his person, nature, and work, so the epithet Logos, which signifies a word spoken, speech, eloquence, doctrine, reason, or the faculty of reasoning, is very properly applied to him."

LOGOS AS AN OFFICIAL.

Bruce, in his travels, says: "In Abyssinia, there is an officer named Kal Hatze, the Word or Voice of the King, who stands always upon the steps of the throne, at the side of a lattice window, where there is a hole, covered in the inside with a curtain of green taffeta. Behind this curtain the king sits, and speaks through the apperture to the Kal Hatze, who communicates his commands to the officers, judges and attendants."

THE LOGOS OF GOD CREATIVE.

"And the Word was made flesh." John i. 14. How? See John i. 3: "Without it (the spoken word) was not anything made that was made." "Not anything." That includes also the Word being "made flesh."

See Psa. lxiii. 6, 7: "By the Word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them, by the breath (spoken Word) of his mouth." "He spake the Word and it was done, he commanded and it stood fast."

The Word went forth from Yahweh, and the angel Gabriel was commissioned as his Kal Hatze, to communicate the same to Mary, it being the Word or voice of the King Eternal. The message was: "The power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore (for that reason) also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

Now, when this spoken Word became flesh, then was fulfilled John i. 14: "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory as of the only begotten of the Father.)"

Now he has become

THE KAL HATZE OF THE KING ETERNAL.

He became essentially his Word or voice, as we are instructed in the following Scriptures:

See John xii. 48-50: "The Father which sent me, gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak. * * * Whatsoever I speak, therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak."

See John xiv. 10: "Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me, the words that I speak unto you, I speak not of myself, but the Father dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."

Some peculiarities of the phraseology of John, both in the gospel, and also the Epistle is due to his opposition to the teaching of

THE GNOSTICS.

They believed all matter to be essentially evil. Therefore the Father could have nothing to do with either the composition or the arrangement of matter.

On this account the creative work was left to an inferior deity, called the Word. This Word was a spiritual Enon, called Christ, the Son of God. They did not believe that Jesus was the Christ, or that the Christ had "come in the flesh." They said that Jesus was a mask, or habitation, in which the spiritual Enon called Christ dwelt until his passion. This accounts for John's strong denunciation of those who denied that "Jesus was the Christ," or that he had not "come in the flesh." He called them "antichrists."

Irenæus was a near cotemporary of John, who said: "John, the disciple of the Lord, desiring by the publication of his gospel, to root out the error which had been sown among men by Cerinthus, (a gnostic leader) and some time before by those who are called Nicolaitans, (Rev. ii. 5) who were a branch of that science, which is falsely socalled, that he might confute them, and satisfy all that there is one God, who made all things by his Word, and not as they say, one who is the Creator of the universe, and another the Father of the Lord, etc.; the disciple therefore of the Lord, wishing to cut off these errors, and to appoint a rule of truth in the Church, that there is One God Almighty, who by his Word made all things, visible and invisible; declaring also that by the Word by which God finished the creation, by the same Word he bestowed salvation upon those who were in the creation, begins his doctrine which is according to the gospel, "In the beginning was the Word," etc.

The following paragraph I quote from Forrest: "It is Tertullian who first states that John opposed two classes of what he esteemed to be heresy, the gnostic, and that of Ebion. He says that when John alluded to those who denied that Christ had come in the flesh, he meant the gnostics; but that he meant the doctrine of Ebion, when speaking of those who thought Jesus was not the Son of God." "Others said that Jesus of Nazareth, the mask under which the Christ dwelt, was a phantom, or human being in appearance; these were the Docetes. But both (the Docetes and Gnostics) denied that the Christ, or Divine Enon, had 'come in the flesh.' Both maintained that the Christ was an invisible, spiritual being, while that which was visible, whether a man or a phantom, was only Jesus of Nazareth. Against both parties, most probably John wrote, declaring that Christ had actually come in the flesh, was actually a man, and not a spiritual Enon, which merely dwelt for a short time whether in connection with a man or a phantom." With regard to the above doctrines, we have another remarkable passage from Irenæus, which says: "It (the gospel) knows nothing of the Christ flying from Jesus previous to his passion. It knows only him who was BORN, viz: Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God, who, still the same person, suffered and rose again from the dead, as John, the disciple of the Lord, confirms, saying, 'But these are written that ye might believe, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through his name.' * * * "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?" * * * That homicidal opinion of theirs, which diminishes and divides into pieces the Son of God, was what the Lord forewarned us to beware of, and what his Apostle John in his Epistle enjoins us to shun, saying, 'For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist. * * * Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God,' well knowing that Jesus the Christ is ONE and the SAME, (not two persons) to whom the gates of heaven were opened,' who shall also in the very same flesh in which he suffered, come again, revealing the glory of his Father."

The above quotation from Irenæus, is important, when we consider that he lived at that very time. With the above quotations in mind, we can better understand some of the sayings of John, and also the fact, that in order to be saved it is and not some spiritual Enon, or never-dying spirit. John said: "And many other signs did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written (for what purpose?) that ye might believe that JESUS (Logos made flesh) is the CHRIST, (not some spiritual Enon, or even an immortal soul) and that believing ye might have life through his name." A failure to believe that the Jesus which was born of Mary is the Christ, is a denial that Jesus is the Christ, and consequently such an one is an antichrist." "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?"

It is also necessary to believe that Jesus, the Christ, is "the Son of God," "born of a woman, made under the law," and not a socalled Son, who is said to be co-existent and co-eternal with the Father. John i. 14, says he was "the ONLY BEGOTTEN SON of the Father." He was begotten by the power of the Holy Spirit, and not by man, as taught by the Ebionites. The voice from the excellent glory, said: "This is MY beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Who daredeny the Word of the Eternal Yahweh? Listen again: "No man hath seen God at any time, the ONLY BEGOTTEN SON, which in the bosom of the Father hath declared him," he being his Kal Hatze, Word, Logos, or Voice.

THE NEUTER GENDER.

In the first few verses of John i., the Greek authorizes the use of the neuter gender "it," in place of the personal pronouns. The Diaglott so has it. "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and God was the Logos." Greek Version. This language comprehends but one person, while the Gnostics affirm that "God" is one person, and the "Word" another. Trinitarians also have "God the Son," "God the Father," and "God the Holy Ghost," three distinct Gods, all three of which gods are co-existent, and co-eternal, and yet the three gods they say, are only one god. Confusion confounded!! The reader will now readily see that John believed in only one God in the beginning (while Trinitarians have three) and that the testimony of the early fathers given above, confirms such teaching of John.

"IN THE BEGINNING."

Many have fallen into error by not discerning that the Bible speaks of two beginnings, and two creations. The Adamic and the New. See Rev. iii. 14: "These things saith the Amen, the beginning of the creation of God." Trinitarians may place this at the head of the Adamic creation, and yet deny that God's Son was an uncreated deity; how then, could he be "the beginning of the creation of God?"

See Col. i. 15: "Who is the image of the invisible God, the FIRST BORN of every creature." Now we find that he was not only the beginning of the creation, but also the "first born." Cain was the first born of the Adamic creation. See Col. i. 18: "Who is the beginning, the firstborn from THE DEAD." This places Jesus as the beginning of the NEW CREATION, as its starting point, and he has been made perfect by becoming "the first born from the dead." The beginning of the eternal salvation, or creation, of which he has been constituted the Author, or Creator.

See Heb. v. 9: "Being made perfect, he became the AUTHOR (Father) of eternal salvation unto all that them obey him." Those "that obey him," will constitute "the General Assembly and church (ecclesia—congregation) of the first born, which are written in heaven." Heb. xii. 23.

He is also called in Isaiah, the "Everlasting Father," see margin R. V., "the Father of Eternity," or "the author of eternal salvation," the Father of the Eternal Ages.

The phrase "In the beginning" is of frequent occurrence in the Epistles of John, but space forbids the consideration of them, at present,

TO SUM UP

we have found that

1. "In the beginning" of the Adamic creation was the logos. Or, in other words, it was that which logos comprehends in Greek: "Thought, wisdom, power, knowledge and love."

2. And the logos was WITH God," that is, "thought, wisdom," etc., was "with God" in essential fullness.

3. "And God WAS the logos," and none other. "God is love," as well as "thought, wisdom," etc.

4. "The logos was made flesh." "Thought, wisdom, love," etc., was the essential make up of the personality of Jesus, and of none other of the human family.

5. Jesus is called "the word of God," in other words the Logos of Yahweh, —the Voice, or Word of the Eternal Father. He says: "The Father which sent me, gave me commandment what I should say, and what I should speak." He was the Echo of the Father.

6. With an intent of making his brethren like himself Jesus commanded a special kind of seed to be sown, and if such seed should find a lodgment in good honest hearts, it would culminate in producing a likeness to himself. That seed he said, was THE LOGOS OF THE KINGDOM," (see Matt. xiii. 19,) such a people when perfected will be gathered unto him, and constitute his armies clothed in white, which will follow him upon white horses.

7. With regard to Jesus we read: He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called THE WORD OF GOD;" or the Logos of Yahweh. "And he hath on his vesture, and on his thigh, a name written, King of kings, and Lord of lords." "And he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God." This will be a fulfillment of Isa. lxiii. 1-4: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat? I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment. For the day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come."

The Logos of Yahweh, is in deed and in truth, a most wonderful personage. As to what he really is, is suggestively expressed in Rev. xxii. 13: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." He is in truth the Christ, the One Logos, the exact expression, and the Eternal Utterance of the Great Omnipotent Yahweh.

W. H. WILSON.

"At his End Shall be a Fool."

"As a partridge sitteth upon eggs and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." Jer. xvii. 11.

There is no ultimate success to wrong doing. The boy may begin gathering to himself riches, by overreaching his fellows in their little dealings; and this course may be continued when he becomes a man. The scraggy looking but valuable colt may be bought for little or nothing because the owner does not know its worth, and the fine looking, but worthless cow, sold for a large price. Valuable land or lots may be purchased for a song from the man who is ignorant that they are soon to make an onward [illegible] and [illegible]. Other property may be passed off on some poor fellow, who does not know that it will soon depreciate in value. There may be no open violation of law, but constant and ever-growing deceit, little peculations, breaches of trust, refusals to pay for goods known to have been purchased, but omitted from the bill by mistake of the salesman, and all the while the wrong-doer may think he is prospering, as he looks complacently upon his wealth. But the sleepless eye of God has been upon him and marked all his goings—the frauds practiced, the wages withheld from the poor, the oppression of the fatherless and the widow. He has seen that those riches have been gotten "not by right," and said that such a man shall be "as a partridge that sitteth upon eggs and hatcheth them not." The birds of hope shall never be his. All his cherished schemes shall end in bitter disappointment. As the frightened partridge leaves her eggs in the midst of her setting, so shall the man leave his riches in the midst of his days. Why? Because in selling his character, his manliness for gold, he has sold himself in a thousand other ways—in drink, in pleasure, in riotous and intemperate living, in worry, in indulgence of wrath; and has thus ruined his health and dug an early and ignominious grave for himself. The props for a beautiful, useful and long continued life, have been knocked out by his own hands. "The little foxes that spoil the vines" may be looked upon as of no moment, when we see them disporting themselves upon the hillsides far away. But once let them find their way into the flourishing vineyard and what havoc they make. And just so it is with little sins. Open the gate of the heart to one such little fox, and he will gnaw away at one of the foundations for a strong and virtuous character, until that is weakened, and then will invite in his fellows to destroy the rest. And all the while that the work of destruction is going on, he will try to persuade the troubled yet half-unconscious victim, that no harm is being done! The truth of it is, every wrong-doer cheats himself. He may succeed in getting riches, but it is at a cost that no sane man would pay. The apples, the berries, the nuts, the raisins, slipped slyly one by one from the merchant, by boys and men, are taken at fearful cost to themselves. It is none the less robbery, because it is a little thing. The melon is the property of the man that raises it, the barnyard fowls belong to the toiling woman who raises them, and the boy or the man who takes either, though he may call it fun, is starting out to die at last "like a fool," bereft of all that makes life worth the living. The boy who begins taking the apple, will by and by take the hen, then the costly bottle of perfumery, and later still, the flock of sheep, the horse and gold of his neighbor, if not his neighbor's life.

How many such, at their end have said "I have been a fool!" How many rich men, whose riches have been gotten wrongfully, have on their death beds, looked back over life and said the same thing. Nothing that they had was really theirs, and all the real treasures had been passed by! They were dying poor. "There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing; there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches." "The hope of the righteous shall be gladness, but the expectation of the wicked shall perish." Better to have hope of a life beyond death than all the riches of the world.

Died on April 5, 1901, at the home of her son Zimri Stephens, in the 94th year of her life, Susan Baldwin Stephens. Born in Kentucky, married at the age of 20, came to Iowa with her husband, Robert Stephens, in 1804, and died in Story County. Of her 8 children, only two survive her, and were both present at her burial. She had made her home with her son since the death of her husband 18 years ago, and was faithfully and tenderly cared for by her daughter-in-law. She was a faithful member of the Body of Christ and rests in hope. Discourse by the writer.

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 24, 1901. NUMBER 16.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life an essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 24, 1901.

WE call special attention to the advertisement of a new edition of "Scriptures Opened" in another part of this paper.

"VICES are seldom single; but virtues go ever in troops; they go so thick that sometimes some are hid in the crowd; which yet are, but appear not."

NIEBUHR says:—"While I am ready to adopt any well-grounded opinion, my inmost soul revolts against receiving the judgment of others respecting persons; and when I have done so I have bitterly repented of it."

C. E. COPP in Rod and Staff discusses the matter of praying for patience:—

"Lord, give me more patience," is often the cry of the impatient, though well-meaning soul. We should pray more to the point. The Lord does have patience to sell or give away. The nurseryman does not come around and take orders for fruit, but for fruit trees. Patience is a fruit—a fruit of the spirit, the same as love, joy, peace, etc.

ATTENTION is called to the article on our first page this week by Bro. Wilson. This text has bothered and puzzled many, and we are glad that Bro. Wilson has given us this article, and we bespeak for it a careful reading. He has taken much time and study in its preparation, and has endeavored to make it very plain and simple, so that any one can grasp his thought. Study it over—don't just skim through it—but labor to understand the question, and be ready to explain this text to others who are worried by it.

Leaving a Church.

A correspondent in the West seems disturbed about leaving a church. It appears that those with whom she formerly affiliated give her no rest,—being so concerned for her everlasting welfare that they are even willing to overlook the fact that she believes the record that God has given of his Son, viz., that "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life;" 1 John v. 12, and the fact that "God only hath immortality;" 1 Tim. vi. 16, and the fact that only those who by patient continuance in well doing SEEK for glory, honor and immortality, that obtain eternal life, Rom. ii. 7. They wink at all this and will receive her with open arms if she will only return to their fold, and WASH FEET, the most important command of Christ.

We cannot do justice to this subject,—so supremely ridiculous is it. The lesson of humility taught by the Lord in John viii. 5 and context, was given to disciples who had embraced the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus preached, and had themselves preached the same. The parties so insistent in their attempts to seduce our correspondent are not disciples of Christ,—have no part or lot with him, because the gospel of the kingdom and of life from the dead, is in no sense gospel to them,—even though they admit it to be true. They would tolerate it to secure a sectarian victory, that is all,—thinking that with their sympathetic arms about her she would soon be weaned off from what she has embraced as the One Faith and Hope of the gospel.

We would kindly enquire of our correspondent what she left feet-washers for? Did she discover that there was but ONE Faith, and ONE Hope,—and that that one Hope was that Blessed Hope, even the appearing of the glory of our Great God and Savior, Jesus Christ, who gave himself on our behalf, that he might redeem us from all lawlessness, and cleanse for himself a peculiar people, devoted to good works? Titus ii. 13, 14. Diaglott Trans. If so, and there has been no change in the Divine Programme since,—We want to know if on leaving A Church, she united with THE Church, after repentance toward God, and baptism into the name of Jesus the One Anointed to be King of the kingdom she believes in? If she did not take these steps of course she is not an heir of that kingdom yet—and has no hope of it as yet; because she has not complied with the conditions exacted. Baptism to be valid must be in obedience to the faith of the gospel of the kingdom,—baptism in obedience to another gospel does not induct one into Christ. We know nothing respecting our correspondent except what we gather from her questions.

We know how to sympathise with a lone believer of the gospel, and the power of human sympathy, and the influence of one's environment. And we know, too, that there is keeping and sustaining power in the gospel of Christ for those who have intelligently and from the heart complied with the adopting ordinance. The hope set before us is surely an anchor to the soul. But if we have not laid hold of that hope in the appointed way, it cannot sustain us.

If confused and staggered by pious platitudes, bear in mind those parties are aliens from the commonwealth of Israel,—strangers from the covenants of promise, which are the kernel of the gospel of the grace of God, and consequently are without God, and Christ and hope. See Eph. ii. 12, and be no further disturbed by them. Their honesty or zeal or sincerity cannot take the place of the truth as it is in Jesus.

As for feet-washing, it will be time enough to discuss that matter with them after they have accepted the gospel at your hands.

The idea that a church that did not exist till it was founded by Alexander Mack in the year 1708, not 200 years ago, should claim that feet-washing is a condition of salvation when none of the apostles taught it is too preposterous for anything. Read Mark xvi. 16, and see if our Lord named it as a condition of salvation. Read Acts ii. 38, 39 and see if Peter taught it as a condition of salvation. Read Acts viii. 12, 13 and see if Philip taught it to the Samaritans as a condition of salvation. Read Acts x. and see if feet washing was exacted of Cornelius as a condition of salvation. Read the Epistle to the Romans, the two to the Corinthians, one to Galatians, and that to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Thessalonians, Timothy, Titus, Philemon all of which was certainly written by Paul, and he declares that he kept back nothing that was profitable, but where does he teach feetwashing as a condition of salvation? He kept that back.

By reference to Gen. xviii. 4, and xix. 2 it will be seen that feet washing was practiced as far back as Abraham. But Abraham did not always wash the feet of angels even,—he furnished them water to do it themselves. Paul in 1 Tim. v. 10 commends it as one of many things which commend the character of those who have named the name of Christ. It doubtless had its origin in the circumstances and customs of the East. It was considered a mark of respect to a guest, as well as a humble, kind, hospitable act. But we understand that humility, not cleanliness was the special lesson intended by Christ.

We were almost missing the question as to the possibility of baptizing 3000 souls on the day of Pentecost. It says they were baptized; that should satisfy those who claim to be believers of the Bible. We see nothing difficult to perform under the circumstances. There were one hundred and twenty disciples in the upper room, waiting for the promised power from on high. Half of these being women would leave sixty men to baptize. But the Lord was seen of more than five hundred at one time,—when or where we do not know; if any of these assisted, the work would have been lighter still. But it is a waste of time to argue with quibblers of the stamp you speak of.

We kindly exhort our correspondent to obey the divine injunction given to Peter to always be ready to give a reason of her hope if she has one, and demand the same of those who trouble her.

Love.

"If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema, Maranatha." 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

How can a man love the Lord Jesus Christ? How can he remove his affections from off the world and place them upon God and his Anointed? How can he love that which he does not love? These questions have arisen in the minds of us all, and have given us no little trouble to answer them satisfactorily to ourselves. There are those we love, and there are those we do not hate, and yet we do not love them. There is nothing seemingly in their characters or selves that draws our affections. If we were commanded to love such with tender emotional love, we would find it impossible. If we were commanded to hate those we love, we would find this as impossible as the other. Paul realized the necessity of loving Christ in its most absolute sense. His ardent affection for his Savior sprang not from the commandment "Thou shalt." It was the outgrowth of the Savior's yearning love for him that quickened his heart's emotion in a manner altogether miraculous at first. "Why persecutest thou me?" is the dart that pierced his heart and made it accessible to reflection. "Who art thou Lord?" "I am Jesus of Nazareth." The answer of his Savior breaks up the fountain of his old nature and irresistably draws him to Christ. He gladly yields with his might, mind, soul and strength. Henceforth his love is an emotion pure, deep, fervent and ever-increasing. He is not now under law, but he is constrained by love. Henceforth he does not have to try to love his Lord. It is involuntary, and spontaneous. His vessel is running over. Thus it is with every one who is truly related to the Lord. In his heart's deepest recesses the beauty, the sympathy, the excellency of the Savior's character has taken full possession. When truly converted to God love is perfect, and able to hold the fort against all enemies from without, and to bind and disarm all foes within. This power is of God's grace to you and is supernatural. If it is nurtured it will grow and absorb your entire nature. It will fail not to bring to birth a new creature entire in Christ. It is the germ of immortality. The bond of perfectness. Without the love of God we are helpless to overcome any evil habit. If there be any who have once been enlightened by the Word of truth, and have tasted the sweet influence of the Savior's love, and have been drawn into that sacred embrace of the gospel of Christ, who are conscious of a loss of zeal, a lack of fervor, a distaste for prayer. If there is no desire to stand in defense of the truth; let me warn you that the ground of your hope has been abandoned. The anchor of your soul has left its hold, and you are drifting toward the rocks, soon to become a wreck. "Strengthen the things that are ready to perish." Lay hold on eternal life. It is God's love to you first that quickens and warms you into life and makes it possible for you to reciprocate. While we were yet sinners without one spark of affection for him, Christ died for us. This was love divine, and we are called upon to emulate it. But we could never do this without divine aid. To love your enemies, and to render good for evil is not natural, but spiritual. The power to do this is the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. It is not the product of law, but of grace. This is why it is written "God is love." "No man cometh unto me except the Father draweth him," says Jesus. We will always come unto him unless we resist the draw. The draw is God's love, God's yearning for us expressed in the gospel, the message of salvation. "No man cometh unto the Father but by me," voices the way, the truth and the life. God's love for the world precedes his message of grace. Conditions of acceptance were an after thought. Love knew no beginning, and will know no end. "If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him." "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." How is this that we are required to love our enemies, and pray for them who use us ill and persecute us? We can only do this by the grace of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Human nature refuses to love an enemy, though it may be constrained by custom to minister to his wants, and bind up his wounds. Charity demands more than this if we would be the children of our Father who is in heaven. To my mind the greatest mystery is that God loved us when we despised him. This is love sublime. Who can know it? When we are able to love those who despise us, then indeed we have the evidence that we have passed from death unto life. This is god-like. I fear we are disposed to look at the religion of Jesus Christ too much from the natural standpoint. We walk too much by sight, having left the spiritual plane of faith and stepped down from our first vantage-ground. Our love is diminished, and we are not so closely in touch with God and our dear Savior as we were when we first started. We may have increased in the knowledge, but decreased in grace. Hence we are more concerned with the theory of Christianity than we are with the practice of godliness. God help us to examine ourselves lest we fail to sanctify our hearts through the truth.

Genesis. Chap. 23.

1. And the life of Sarra became one hundred and twenty-seven years.

2. And Sara died (under sentence) in a city Arbok which is in the valley; this is Chebroon (Hebron C. V.) in the land of Canaan; and Habraam went to make a public mourning for Sarra and to sorrow.

3. And Habraam arose from his dead; and Habraam spake unto the sons of Chet saying,

4. I am a sojourner and away from home in your midst; give me then an acquisition of a burial-place in your midst and I will bury my dead away from me.

5. And the sons of Chet made answer unto Habraam saying;

6. Nay, lord, but do thou hear us. A king from God art thou among us, in the choice memorial-tombs do thou bury thy dead one.

7. And Habraam arose and did homage to the laity of the land, the sons of Chet.

8. And Habraam talked saying unto them: If ye have it in your soul to bury my dead one from my face, may ye have heard me and may ye have talked to Ephroon, the son of Saar.

9. And let the double-cave which is his be given me, the one in a portion of his field; let it be given me for a possession acquired for a memorial-tomb for a money (silver here) price with you.

10. Now Ephroon was seated in the midst of the sons of Chet; and Ephroon the Chetaite made answer and said unto Habraam in the hearing of the sons of Chet and of all those who were going their way into the city, saying:

11. Approach my lord and hear me; the field and the double-cave therein I am giving thee; in the sight of all my citizens I have given it to thee; bury thy dead one.

12. And Habraam did homage in the sight of all the laity of the land.

13. And said unto Ephroon in his ears in the presence of the laity of the land; since thou art on my side hear me; take the money for the field from me and I will bury my dead one there.

14. And Ephroon answered Habraam saying,

15. No, no, my lord, for I have heard, land worth four hundred didrachmai of silver is it; but what should that be between me and thee? And do thou bury thy dead one.

16. And Habraam heard Ephroon; and Habraam made over the money to Ephroon of which he had spoken in the ears of the sons of Chet, namely four hundred didrachmai of silver of the merchant's approved value.

17. And the field of Ephroon stood (in the balance or was given as the equivalent) the field which was with the double cave, which was opposite Mambree, the field and the cave which was in it, and every tree that was in the field, and everything that is in the boundaries thereof roundabout.

18. Unto Habraam for an acquired possession in the sight of the sons of Chet and of all those going their way into the city.

19. After that Habraam buried Sarra, his wife, in the double cave of the field, the cave that is over opposite Mambree; this is Chebroon (Hebron C. V.) in the land of Chanaan.

20. And the field and the cave that was in it was assured (deeded, we should say now) to Habraam for an acquired possession for a burial-place from the sons of Chet.

COMMENT.

In the 2nd verse R. V. we have "in Kiriath-Arba" instead of "in a city Arbok in the valley" and "Hebron" instead of "Chebroon" in the text, and "mourn" and "weep" instead of "to make a public mourning and to sorrow."

In the 3rd verse R. V. we have "sons of Chet." Who was "Heth?" And were "the Hittites" elsewhere given in C. V. his descendants?

In the 9th verse R. V. we have "a mighty prince" instead of "a king from God" in the text. Also the whole of the last clause not in the text at all.

In the 8th verse R. V. "The son of Zohar" should be "the son of Saar" and "the cave of Machpelah" same verse R. V. should be "the double-cave" and "in a portion of his field" instead of "in the end of his field" and "for a money-price" instead of "for the full price" R. V.

10th verse tells specifically who Ephroon was, and who his subjects were, that they were "Chetaites" and not "Hittites." The 11th verse R. V. omits the important fact that the "cave" was a "double-cave," and as this account that follows is the oldest historical account that has yet come down to us of a legal transfer of real estate, it is important and desirable that we should know all the facts and just what the record says of the transaction, so that we can compare the form then in vogue with those in vogue now.

In the 16th verse R. V. we have the value of the land stated to be "four hundred shekels of silver." In the text it is given as "didrachmai" or double-drachmas. So we can safely infer that the Hebrew shekel of Habraam's day had the value of a Greek double-drachma of the time of Philopater, and that silver was the current medium of exchange at that time.

There is no evidence here of a written instrument or deed of transfer, nor of any public record of such transactions; but it would not be safe to conclude that there were therefore none. However this may be the essential features of bargain and transfer the reader will perceive were the same as now, and we know that the validity of the title was asserted ages afterward by the heir of Habraam after the Exodus from Egypt.

Alarmed for World's Peace.

Dear Restitution:

W. T. Stead, whose interview I enclose, is one of the coolest headed thinkers, and one of the best informed statesmen in all England. He is the editor and proprietor of the Review of Reviews. When such a man looking on from the standpoint of a statesman says the peace of the world is threatened, what should those who know that just such a war, as is now threatened, is plainly foretold in the prophecies. Truly the nations of the world stand upon the verge of a great precipice, and ere long, will plunge in, to be extricated only by the hand of God. My beloved reader, "Ye are not in darkness that that day overtake you as a thief."

R. S. DWIGGINS.

London, April 4.—W. T. Stead, who is now devoting part of his extraordinary energy to starting a British movement designed to further the aims of The Hague conference, said this afternoon that he regarded the far eastern situation as fraught with extreme peril. He points to the indignant outspokenness of Japan's leading newspapers and public men as augering ill for the peace of the world, unless the czar speedily lays a restraining hand on his political and military representatives in connection with Manchuria.

"The London Times seems utterly blind to England's weakness. It tries day after day to launch us into complications, from which we could not emerge otherwise than seriously damaged and discredited. I am very much afraid that a collision between the British and Russian fleets in Chinese waters might result in a catastrophe to England.

"We hear sometimes that Russian official corruption has operated to make the Russian navy a rope of sand. Nothing could be more misleading. The czar has many excellent ships, well equipped for battle. A large fleet of these vessels has been specially placed with a view to looking after what the Muscovite Empire regards as its rightful interests in China.

Dear brothers and sisters of the household of faith:

Being members of the body of Christ by adoption into the family of God, through a belief of, faith in, and obedience of his Word, I feel that we are not strangers one to the other. But should feel that nearness one with the other as adoption implies. We have our natural fathers in this life to protect us, and we also have an heavenly Father to protect and love us. He has even adopted us; that means a safeguard and an assurance for all our needs, and life everlasting in the end. What greater love can one show than did Jesus, who laid down his life a willing sacrifice, that we through the process of adoption might gain eternal life, i. e., if we by patient continuance in well doing may attain unto at the appearing and kingdom of our Lord and Savior. Oh my brother and sister, are we going to forfeit this adoption? Are we going to let slip the great prize awaiting us? so unquestionably and so graciously promised in the Word of life? God forbid; yet, will he, can he forbid unless we do something meritorious? I have had it brought home to me very forcibly for the past few months how necessary it is for those of the "called out ones," to walk more circumspectly in the foot steps of Jesus, i. e., not to let our good be evil spoken of; to avoid the appearance of evil; and to love each other with a pure heart. Proving by our daily walk and conversation that we are daily and hourly crucifying the flesh. I, myself, need thee, heavenly Father, every hour, to help me to overcome thoughts pertaining to the cares of this life. I need thy sustaining grace to help me to soar above all care, and revel in the choice sayings and promises found in thy Word. I have tried this soothing process, and have found by this concentration of thought on divine sayings, one of the best panacens during wakeful hours at night time, when the mind is overcharged with perplexities hard to get away from. To you who are isolated of the household, I would say, be of good cheer, the Lord will find you; you are adopted children and are not left out in his will, but are heirs to a great inheritance and Jesus will present your names to his Father, (Rev. iii. 5) for they are all written in the Lamb's book of life. Rev. xxi. 27. And Jesus says, "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name." Rev. iii. 12. What a gracious promise. And so if there are only one or two, brother husband and sister wife sojourning together, ye are of God's family. If a brother have the gift of language preach aloud your thoughts, if only to one person, and empty chairs, that one person will be edified, and you yourself strengthened. God will hear; Jesus will keep the record. He is with you in the observance of the memorial, and in doing this you remember him until he comes, and if alone, escape grievous trials that sometimes overtake, creep in and destroy the harmony in ecclesias. To the sick ones of the household (and they are many), take comfort; God will hear the earnest, fervent prayer of the righteous, and if his will, will grant new lease of life in answer. But if you must needs sleep, Jesus will awaken you. John xi. 11. Death cannot hold you, for our Lord is surely coming; will come with a shout, with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ will arise first. Then we who are alive and remain, shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and God's adopted family united, all one in Christ Jesus. O let us rejoice that the night is far spent, the day near at hand, "redemption even at the door." Even so, come Lord Jesus, come quickly.

Your Sister in the one blessed hope.

When is a Nation Safe?

This question was asked me, and I thought it a hard question to answer. We may have a theory in our mind and think that a nation was safe if it did according to our theory. But when we look at the nations, we see none living up to our standard. So declare there is no nation safe, and so we believe, and prophecy sustains us in our belief, for we read that all the nations of the earth are to be overthrown, and the God of heaven is to set up a kingdom on this earth for the purpose of ruling the nations in righteousness, and removing all wickedness, and those that are obedient to Christ, and have their names written in the book of life have the promise of being raised out of their graves, to live and reign with Christ a thousand years. Rev. xx. 4. And then all nations shall serve and obey God, and become one grand nation. Then and not till then, will any nation be safe. When God dealt direct with mankind, those that obeyed him were favored above those that would not obey, and we think the nation that does the most to encourage worship of our Creator is favored above all nations, but as for being safe, there is no nation safe, neither will be until Christ comes to earth to reign, and the signs of the times point to his soon coming, so the real question that should interest us the most is, Are we safe? And are we living and obeying Christ in such a way and manner that we may expect to be one of the redeemed ones, when he comes to call out a people for his name?.

Yours in hope,

The Crossing Paths.

Our far diverging lines of life
Have for the moment crossed,
To touch, and wind away, and be
In the dim distance lost;
No chance in all our wanderings
Has brought us heretofore
So face to face, to pause and speak,
And part, and meet no more.

As passing ships, whose wide-flung sails
Are for an instant furled,
We hail, and barter words of cheer,
Brought from the under-world;
With eager question, quick reply,
Across the deck we lean;
Then part, and put the silences
Of ocean wastes between.

We turn and watch the fading sail
Until our eyes grow dim,
And the blue billows melt away
On the horizon's rim.
How sad it seems a few brief words,
A kiss, a hand-clasp given;
Then—paths that cross on land or sea,
No more this side of heaven!

Will all these cross, as cross they may,
And [illegible]

We know there is one central spot
No traveling feet have passed,
Where earth's divergent, crossing paths
Shall meet and end at last!

CREATION ACCORDING TO THE BIBLE.

When he gave to the sea his decree that the water should not pass his commandment, when he appointed the foundations of the earth.—Solomon.

Now that we have considered a few of the blunders that some theorists have made in attempting to account for all the mysteries of the creation by the rule of chance, main force and dumb luck, let us consider the Bible narrative out of which these same theorists have ignorantly taken a good deal of fun.

But before starting it ought to be understood that all opinions attaching to the simple Bible narrative must be at once set aside, and, by the way, all claims to inspiration might as well for the present be also set aside, so that it may "speak from the floor" in its own defence. The question, any way, is not one of inspiration, but of truth, and a little child can tell the truth in its own simple language just as well as an archangel direct from the great white throne. The trouble with the Bible is that too much artificial sacredness has been attached to it, and it is supposed to require a sacred person or a whole church of them to explain and expound it, while ordinary people reverently sit and listen and let it go at that. If the same ordinary common-sense which is displayed by the community in other things had been used in simply reading the Bible none of the sectarian squabbles of the past or divisions of the present could have occurred. Some suppose that difference of translation has caused the difference, but this supposition is far from true. Any translation is good enough to get the gist out of, and none are perfect for the simple reason that no one language will perfectly transcribe in all details into any other. The real trouble is lack of attention to the ordinary rules of grammar, which lack permits of liberties being taken with the text and all kinds of extraneous matter to be introduced, so that in many instances the original idea is either buried or flooded out.

Take as an example the simple death of Absolom: The text says his head caught in an oak (2 Sam. xviii. 9), but the idea has gone abroad that his hair caught; the absurdity of man's hair—particularly an armed man who had fighting and cutting tools with him—is never thought of. When a little fellow I won a bet of a shilling that the word "hair" could not be found in the text, and although it is many a year ago, yet, year by year as the patient years roll by, the assiduous artists who teach the moral and adorn the tales for the youth of the Sunday schools invariably draw the unfortunate reprobate suspended by the hair—sometimes in Chinese pig-tail fashion, flicked around the oak limb in a sort of loose knot; sometimes in a Paderewski berry-bush that has glued itself into the oak bark like the roots of a mistletoe. During the late Presidential campaign one of the leading Baltimore dailies had a political cartoon of the defeated candidate in which he was represented as Absolom, strung up in this fashion, and, although underneath was the legend printed in plain language with chapter and verse, "And his head caught hold of the oak," neither editor, proof-reader, or the general public seems to have noticed any discrepancy. But think what a lot we would have to say about a barber that didn't distinguish between the head and the hair when we went for a trim! Now there are many blunders such as this that occur simply from oversight at first, or perhaps, in some instances, prejudice, and as time goes on and the preachers writers and painters get to work the error gets, after a while, to be a holy thing, and he that doubteth about the hair part is damned particularly.

So [illegible]

Genesis, it is what has been added to it that has rendered it absurd. I once heard a worthy gentleman who is reputed as one of the best biblical scholars in Baltimore remark in public, speaking of the "waters which were above the firmament," that that probably referred to the Milky Way! And what can we say of the innumerable tomes that have been written on that one poor little chapter! There on one hand was the geologist, Hugh Miller, who endeavored to show that the seven days of creation spread all over the geological eras during the laying of Earth's strata, and there is the shorter catechism of the Presbyterians, on the other hand, that abruptly informs us that "God made the world in seven days out of nothing." Now, which are we to believe? As a matter of fact, there is no account in the Bible of the creation of our planet—not the body of the globe, not even what is known as "the crust of the earth, that is, the strata of rocks on which the water and the top soil rest; there is not even any account of the creation of the top soil or the water. The story begins with these words: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." No mention is made of how long it took. It might have been millions, billions, or quadrillions of years. Geologists say that it was; they are probably right, "and," the story continues, "the earth was without form, and void and darkness was on the face of the deep." Now, here again, the geologists step in and tell us a strange story of how, that after all the strata was laid, an unaccountable change came over the planet and for probably thousands of years nearly all the northern hemisphere was deeply embedded in ice and submerged in water. "So thick must have been this ice," says Prof. Geikie, in the Arctic Geology in the Encyclopædia Britannica, "as it moved off the Scottish highlands that it went across the broad plains of Perthshire, filling them to a depth of at least two thousand feet. * * The basin of the North Sea must have been choked up with ice in its northern part, if not entirely. .....The ice is computed to have been at least six thousand and seven thousand feet thick in Norway, measured from the present sea level.....On the Harz (Germany) it is believed to have been at least 1,470 feet.....In the Bernese of Oberland (Switzerland) the valleys were filled up to the brim with ice, which, moving northward, crossed the Great Plain and actually overrode a part of the Jura mountains." Concerning America he says: "In recent years extensive ice-worn rock surfaces have been observed among the Rock mountains by Hayden Klug and others, proving that these elevations formerly possessed their moving glaciers if they were not buried under the great ice sheet. The drift bears witness to a general transport of material, and, in conjunction with the striated rocks, shows that the great ice sheet moved from north to south, at least as far as about the latitude of Washington."

These sand and clay banks of Caroline county are all the swash of that period. Deeply buried beneath them in many places are beds of oyster shells that must have grown long years previously; if, indeed, we may count by years, and boulders, well ground are scattered here and there, where the floating ice dropped them on the then bottom of the sea, where we now live.

So far, so good, then. The revelation of true science, as opposed to theory is, that immediately previous to what is known geologically as the "Recent, or Human Period," there was a long period of submergence of all the present land area beneath ice and water. Now, this not only exactly coincides with the biblical narrative on the one hand, but is a complete confutation, on the other hand, to the aristocracy who proudly trace their ancestry to the "protoplasmic mud" of the palæozoic and carboniferous eras; for where was the ark then? [illegible] Styx at such a late date? for bear in mind that the glacial period is the last thing that happened in geological history, after that the geologist resigns to the archæologist.

Returning to the Bible story, we read that the work of the first day of creation was light. We have seen in a former paper that light is not inherent in the sun alone, but the earth itself is even now partially luminous at the poles; before the glacial period it probably was all self-luminous and self-warmed. At any rate, there seems to have been no poles, for coal fields and remains of tropical animals are found in Siberia and Alaska, as any [illegible] the "waters above" and the "waters beneath," the clouds and the sea: in modern language, the present atmosphere. The third day was plant-life and the formation of the present geographical outline, making a permanent distinction between land and water, something that does not seem to have occurred before, in geological times all land having been formed under water, coming up sometimes and being submerged again. The fourth day was the adjustment of the planet in its present orbit so that the present relations obtain in respect to our neighboring heavenly bodies. The fifth and sixth was the creation of the present race of animals and man. Thus it will be observed that all the work of all the days is entirely superficial—not the building of the house—only the furnishing.

Abiding in Christ.

"Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." 2 John ix. How do we get into Christ to abide there? For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ; by baptism then. What is the object of being baptized into Christ? That we may be Abraham's seed by adoption, and heirs according to the promise. What was the promise? God guided Abraham to the land of Canaan, and then said to him, "Unto thy seed will I give this land." Gen. xii. 7. And in Gen. xv. 18, he describes the bound more fully, unto thy seed I have given this land, from the river of Egypt, unto the great river, the river Euphrates. This land is on this earth yet; and farther, the promise was, that all nations of the earth shall be blessed in him. Gen. xviii. 18; xxii. 18. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. Read Gen. xxiv. 7; xxviii. 4, 13, 14. And many other passages teach the same. And in Heb. xi. 13, we read: "These all died in faith (including Abraham) not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them." So those that become heirs to these promises must be baptized into Christ, and ever after abide in him, or they will lose eternal life, which is the gift of God, and only obtained through Christ. So to become an heir to God's promises we must be baptized into Christ and continue to abide with him all the days of this present life.

Yours trying to abide in Christ,
E. W. Knapp.

What is the Heart?

"My heart was in my mouth." Well, I said it could not be in a better place. It is a mistake to confine the heart to one compartment. When the doctor asked my friend from Ireland to locate his pain, he answered, "Why man alive, I am aching from head to feet." Peter said, "Wash me, but not my feet alone, my hands, my head, my heart." Our heart like the Irishman's pain should be all over us. Yes, yes, the heartless tongue can make sore wounds, can offset much if not all, the ministry of the hands and feet. A lady friend in Norfolk, Va., while the Civil War was on, thought it would be nice to carry a lunch to some sick and badly wounded Union prisoners, confined in one of the improvised dens there. When she spread the contents of her well packed basket before the poor half-famished fellows, dying far away from those who loved them, tears filled their eyes, and one of them said, "God bless you kind lady, you [illegible] and home to us by [illegible] day." But the [illegible] spoiled her generous [illegible], the Scripture, "If [illegible] hunger feed him, and if he [illegible] drink," etc. Why certain [illegible] tongues can quote [illegible] as well as other people. Referred them over that long, cold [illegible] as to that, can quote [illegible] fairly well. A Turk or a pig-[illegible] may be taught the letter if [illegible] very last thing that happened in geo- [illegible] the spirit of the Book.

[illegible] used heart on our tongue, [illegible] and all over us, if we hope to make friends. I knew a preacher once, who always put out his hand when he met a friend, but he had no heart in it. If there was any shaking done, the other fellow had to do it. He rarely gave more than two fingers, which signified that the other fellow must do the shaking. Not long ago I made a short visit to a friend's house. I thought he was quite a clever carver, and seemed anxious to keep my plate well supplied, but he seemed to think a preference for skin or bone. [illegible] something I could eat. His hands were nimble enough, had the right motion, but they were heartless. The cuts he gave me were the same I gave my cat. He had heart enough in his mouth, but very little in his hand. I have often wondered if these heartless people imagine they are playing April fool with any one. A heartless person does not have to be labelled. It don't require an old sailor to tell when an iceberg is near. It advertizes itself, just like the heartless brother or sister.

The Sin of the World.

"Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." John i. 29.

In quoting this expression of John it is often made to read "sins of the world," as when Christ forgives the sins of the penitent sinner. But we notice that this expression of John is in the singular number. We enquire, what sin had the Baptist in view in this expression? Evidently, Christ was appointed, and came into the world to take away the sin that Adam entailed upon his posterity by partaking of the forbidden fruit. "Dying thou shalt die." When that edict shall have run its course; none will die in consequence of Adam's sin. But every man shall die for his own iniquity. Then it will no more be said, "The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge. The soul that sinneth it shall die." But if he be righteous he will not die at all. Earth and man upon the earth will occupy the position that God designed in creation. This is restitution. The command as given to Adam before he sinned, was—Be fruitful, multiply and replenish the earth and subdue it; and have dominion over it. To Adam was given the earth as its first king. To Adam also was given a law, the breaking of which would result in his death. But the serpent said unto the woman, "Ye shall not surely die." Here the first sermon on the immortality of the soul was taught to our mother Eve. This doctrine is taught and believed by a large part of mankind. This lie of the serpent is the foundation of all the errors that have ever cursed mankind; all have their foundation in the serpent's lie. The serpent was far-seeing enough to realize that if he could poison the race of men at the fountain, he had gained to his side, the whole race of mankind. Then as John the Baptist said, "The Lamb of God taketh away the sin, and consequently the death that Adam entailed upon all his posterity. Then Isa lx. 7 will be fulfilled.

Daniel Howard.

Dear Restitution:

It has been some time since I took part in the love feast, so contribute a few lines to let you know that the church is in a more prosperous condition than when we moved here, (Ripley, Ill.) some over four years ago. We meet every first day at 11:00 A. M. for Bible study. Bro. J. B. Craton of Wilsey, Kan., is making a tour east and is calling on all the brethren he can conveniently. Arrived at our village on the 15th inst, and left the 19th, was sorry he could not stay longer. He is well versed in the Scriptures and a more zealous, sincere and humble brother we have never met. His undertaking for the benefit of the household of faith is a good one, and hope all the brethren will help him. Let us help each other every opportunity and strive to be an overcomer.

Your Sister in Christ,
Jennie Cox.

"Thou Shalt not Suffer Sin upon thy Neighbor."

"Thou shalt go to him and tell him of his fault." "Thou shalt in any wise rebuke him." There would not be so much sin in the world if these commands of our God were obeyed, but we have come to live in a cowardly age. We are afraid to rebuke sin, we shrink from saying to a dear brother or sister, "Are you doing right in the eyes of the dear heavenly Father?" Let us read the sermon on the mount and pray over the matter, and then look at it again." How many things that we grieve over would right themselves if we did this.

But the secret sins? The sins known perhaps only in the family circle? Sins of impatience, of profanity, of neglect of family worship? We can only reprove these in a general way. If there is impatience, no good influence can be thrown over childhood, everything will be in constant uproar; pulses of the little ones kept at fever heat. Oh how we sin when we forget to be kind to these! [illegible] ther call me a reproachful name, and though I knew I deserved it, and it created no hardness in my heart, I remember it still. Don't use hateful epithets; it is not courteous; it is not the right kind of training. Turn the tables and see how you would like to be called by the names you call the children; see how you would like to be treated as you treat them, "They are so hateful." It is but a reflection of your own character. In their actions you can see yourselves as in a looking glass. They are just what you are making them. If they are disobedient, it is you have taught them not to obey. If they are not truthful it is because you have not regarded the promises you have made them. If they do not love you, it is because you are not lovable. If they do not give you their confidence, it is because you are not worthy of it. If they are profane, it is because you in moments of excitement use profane words. "Swear not at all." "The Lord will not hold him guiltless who taketh his name in vain."

It is dreadful to teach a little child to sin. Dreadful to teach it to be disobedient, irreverent, untruthful, unloving, profane. And God will hold them accountable for these very sins, for both themselves and their children who do it. God must be acknowledged in the home if we would have the children reverence him. His Word must be treated and read as if it were the most priceless book in the world, if we would have them hold it so.

How can we hope to get into the kingdom of God if we are not Christ-like in the little kingdom of home? If the gospel does not change us, there is nothing that can. And how can we have "the cheek" to ask others to take the medicine, that we have made of no account to ourselves? How can we make them believe in its healing virtues when they can see with their own eyes, that we have not been healed? Suffer reproof, dear ones, from one who in reproving others is making humble confession to you and to God of her own short comings. The world is gazing upon us. It is measuring us by the rod given to it in the Bible. It finds that we do not accord with the pattern. Let us be more careful, more prayerful, more watchful. We can put away sin and we must. If we live in the practice of sin, it is proof that we love it more than we love God.

S. Roxana Wince.

As in the Days of Noah.

So Christ himself has declared the time of his coming to be. Where he has spoken let every human voice be hushed. The days of Noah reflect the following likenesses of the days of Christ's return:—

1. The people were forewarned of their impending doom.
2. They derided it and made no preparation.
3. They substituted pleasure for piety, as now, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.
4. Only a few were prepared for the flood.
5. All were warned and might have escaped.
6. To the multitude the flood was sudden and unlooked for.
7. Their skepticism gave way to awful consternation and doom.—Way of Faith.

Thrust Out Labors.

If the world seems hard to you,
Kindle first a spark in it;
Let their comfort hide from view
Winters that deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan,
"Ah! the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a wilderness,
Go build houses in it!
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to din it?
Raise a hut however slight;
Weeds and brambles smoother;
And to roof and mend invite
Some forlorner brother.

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till rainbows span it!
Breathe the love that life endears,
Clear from clouds to fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver;
Show them how dark Sorrow's stream
Blends with Hope's bright river!

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just now ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Tracts.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

For any of the above address Gospel Tract Committee, Argos, Ind.

Those wanting One Body and One Spirit, send in order at once that we may know how large an edition to print.

Short Sermons. No. 16.

Hast thou faith? This is a very important question. And to be able to answer it correctly one must of necessity go to the Bible and learn its meaning, and what it relates to. See Rom. x. 16, 17; Heb. xi. 1, 6. But Paul continues his question—our caption, by saying, have it to thy self before God, which requirement seems rather enigmatical, and to the casual reader, hard to understand. Hence the many view it in this light, and make no effort to understand it. They call it a mystery, and then let it alone. Such scholars in a school would surely be a detriment and a dark spot. Not so of you Bro. Prime, as I well remember when you and I met on the train a few years ago in southern Kansas, this was one of our questions for investigation. Now, what does Paul mean by such a question? Does he mean to say to the brethren at Rome and elsewhere that if they have faith in God and his Word, they must hold it as private property and say nothing about it to any one? If we were permitted to judge some by their actions—which are said to speak louder than words" we surely would think that this was their idea about it, as they seldom, if ever, ask any Bible questions, or say anything about the Bible and the faith of the gospel, that can be heard. Their little candle seems to be hid away under a bushel or a bed, and don't seem to shine out and give any light to them or any body else. They seem to walk in darkness, and take delight, and know not or care not where they are going. And to halt them and ask them a few plain Bible questions is much like "pouring water on a duck's back." "Out of the abundance of the heart or mind the mouth speaks." And if Paul means to say that we can talk as much as we please about anything but our faith, as it is too sacred to talk about, I must confess that I never so understood him, and have not done my duty in this respect, or is it for lack of interest with those who will not talk about it? Now we think we have found out what Paul does not mean by this peculiar expression, let us try again, and see if we can find out what he does mean. From the connections that surround this text, I come to this conclusion: The church had fallen into trouble over their whims about eating and drinking, or as to what was lawful—and the extent of their liberty in these private matters. One that was properly taught, and was strong in the faith, could with a clear conscience eat any meats they wished to eat, even if it had been offered in sacrifice to idols. While others who were weak in faith were offended at his liberty, and regarded this as dangerous ground. The ceremonial distinctions in meats and in days that were all right in their time had been annulled and broken down. Some could see this and some could not, and so it is to this day, and so the trouble remains, as the result of this weakness and blindness on the part of those who can not see clearly. Paul tries to show the weak brethren there is no difference now in these things. And admonishes the stronger ones to bear with the infirmities of the weak ones, and not to please themselves. And to abstain from eating these meats or doing any thing else that would make weak brethren offend or stumble. Hast thou faith? or thou hast faith, with respect to thyself, hold it fast in the presence of God. Happy is he who does not condemn himself in what he approves, or what he allows. Be consistent, hold fast to the faith of the gospel, make no compromise on that, but for the sake of peace, waive your liberties on non-essentials, and follow after things which make for peace. And he was so careful that he declared that if meat made his brother offend, he would eat no flesh while the world stood. Oh, how careful and good he was, and what a good lesson for us.

The Indian and the Northwest.

A handsomely illustrated book just issued, bound in cloth and containing 115 pages of interesting historical data relating to the settlement of the great Northwest, with fine half-tone engravings of Black Hawk, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud and other noted chiefs; Custer's battleground and ten colored map plates showing location of the various tribes dating back to 1600. A careful review of the book impresses one that it is a valued contribution to the history of these early pioneers, and a copy should be in every library. Price, 50 cents per copy. Mailed postage prepaid upon receipt of this amount by W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.—May 25.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Slumber Song.

Evening is falling to sleep in the west,
Lulling the golden brown meadows to rest;
Twinkle like diamonds the stars in the skies,
Greeting the two little slumbering eyes.
Sweetly sleep; Jesus doth keep;
And Jesus will give his beloved ones sleep.

Now all the flowers have gone to repose,
Closed are the sweet cups of lily and rose;
Blossoms rocked lightly on evening's mild breeze,
Drowsily, dreamily, swinging the trees.
Sweetly sleep; Jesus doth keep;
And Jesus will give his beloved ones sleep.

Sleep till the flowers shall open once more;
Sleep till the lark in the morning shall soar;
Sleep till the morning sun, lighting the skies,
Bids thee from sweet repose joyfully rise.
Sweetly sleep; Jesus doth keep;
And Jesus will give his beloved ones sleep.

Selections.

The Allegory of Hagar and Ishmael.

Abraham had two sons; Ishmael the son of Hagar, an Egyptian handmaid; and Isaac, the son of Sarah. Ishmael was fourteen years old when Isaac was born. He was born in the ordinary course of things, and therefore said to be "born after the flesh;" while Isaac was born out of the usual course, Sarah being ninety and Abraham a hundred, she being also strengthened of God, according to the promise, and consequently said to be "born after the Spirit." Hagar was a bond-woman; but Sarah was free; yet, had it been left to Abraham, he would have made Ishmael his heir as well as Isaac, for he loved them both. But Ishmael manifested an evil spirit towards Sarah and Isaac, which he had imbibed from his mother. Moses says he mocked Isaac, or spoke contemptuously of him; which the Apostle terms persecuting him, and characterist[ic] those of Ishmael's class. Sarah's indignation was fired at this; "Wherefore she said unto Abraham, Cast out this bond-woman and her son; for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac." Although Abraham was exceedingly grieved at this, God approved of Sarah's decision; and informed him that Christ should descend from Isaac, and not from Ishmael, saying, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Nevertheless, because Ishmael was his son, he would make a nation of him also with twelve princes for its fathers.

This fragment of Abraham's history has a signification beyond what appears on the face of it. The Apostle informs us that the incidents are allegorical. That is, that the two women and their characteristics, represent two covenants; and the two sons of Abraham by them, two seeds, or classes of persons. The covenants are, "the one from Mount Sinai in Arabia," and the other, the confirmed of God 430 years before that of Sinai was promulgated; and which being a matter of promise, the subject of which is Christ as the inheritor of Canaan, and its future King in Jerusalem now at the right hand of God, is said to be "Jerusalem which is above." The apostle says, that Jerusalem is the subject of both these covenants, but in different periods of her history. During her existence as the metropolis of the Hebrew commonwealth under its Sinaitic constitution, she was represented by Hegar, the bondwoman; because the covenant from Sinai "gendered to bondage:" and in consequence the citizens of the commonwealth were in bondage with the mother city. They were "entangled with the yoke of bondage," "under the rudiments of the world." They were bound to keep the whole law, by which they sought to be justified; and as they could not do it owing to the weakness of the flesh, they came under the curse. But this state of things was only provisional. God did not intend the Hebrew commonwealth to exist perpetually under the Sinaitic constitution. Israel was not always to bein bondage to the law of Moses. A great revolution was predetermined by God, which should result in the abolition of the Sinaitic covenant, and the dispersion of Israel among the nations. This is allegorically styled, "casting out the bondwoman and her son;" which was necessary for the good and all-sufficient reason, that the Sinaitic constitution of the commonwealth of Israel, was not adapted for the people and state when Christ should sit upon the throne of his father David, and the saints should possess the kingdom. The law of Moses enjoined ordinances concerning the flesh, such as, "the water of separation," Num. xix.; Heb. ix. 13, which would be incompatible with the realities of the age to come. Under the law there was "a remembrance again of sins every year;" Heb. x. 3; but under the New Constitution from heaven, "thesins and iniquities of the people will be remembered no more." Jer. xxxi. 31-34. The Sinaitic constitution was faulty; it was therefore necessary that it should give place to a better, which shall be established on better promises. Heb. viii. 6, 7. Hence, the bondwoman was to be cast out, to make room for a more perfect arrangement of the commonwealth.

Since the expulsion of Israel by the Romans, Jerusalem and her children are in the situation of Hagar and her son, while wandering in the wilderness of Beersheba. She is divorced from the Lord as Hagar was from Abraham, and "being desolate she sits upon the ground," Gen. xxi. 1; Isa. iii. 26; and bewails her widowhood. Isa. liv. 4. But, there is to be "a restitution of all things." Jerusalem is to become a free woman as Sarah was; and to take her stand in the midst of the earth, as "The city whose architect and builder is God." She will then "remember the reproach of her widowhood no more. For her Maker will be her husband; the Lord of Hosts is his name; and her Redeemer the Holy One of Israel (even Jesus) the God of the whole earth shall he be called." She will then be the metropolis of the world; and her citizens or children will be more numerous than those she rejoiced in under the law, as a married wife. The period of her glory will have arrived; the twelve tribes be again the united, peaceful, and joyous inhabitants of the land; the "greater than Solomon," their king; and his city, "the heavenly Jerusalem," which "is free, and the mother of us all." But, while Hagar represents Jerusalem under the law; and Sarah, Jerusalem under the new constitution of the Hebrew commonwealth; Ishmael represents Israel, glorying in their fleshly descent from Abraham, and boasting in the law; and Isaac, those of Israel and the Gentiles, who regard the flesh as profiting nothing, and who are the sons of Abraham by believing the promises made to him and to his seed. Hence Ishmael and Isaac represent two seeds, or classes of mankind, who shall not be heirs together of the promise. Indeed, their natures are so opposite, that it would be impossible for them to fulfil in concert the destiny marked out for those who are to inherit the promises. The Ishmaelite-seed are wild-m-n, whose hands are against all who believe the truth. They are mockers, for as Ishmael mocked Isaac, so Israel mocked Jesus, and spoke reproachfully of him and his brethren, who are one. The kingdom to be established is a righteous dominion, and requires righteous men for its administration, as it is written, "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of the Lord." 2 Sam. xxiv. 3. It is impossible, therefore, that the Ishmaelite-seed can be heirs of the promise. All the honor, glory and power of the state were in their hands under the Sinaitic covenant; and cruel and unjust was the use they made of their position. They put Jesus to death, and persecuted those to whom "he gave power to become the sons of God;" believing on his name; and were "contrary to all men; forbidding the apostles to speak to the Gentiles, that they might be saved. 1 Thes. ii. 15, 16. They were then "first;" but power was destined to change hands, when they who were "the first shall be last." They had killed the heir that the inheritance might be theirs; but they have been destroyed, and the vineyard now remains to be bestowed upon others, who shall render its lord the fruits in their seasons. Matt. xxi. 33-41. Thus, as in the case of Ishmael and Isaac, "he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the spirit, even so," says the apostle, "it is now;" and ever will be, until the times of the restitution of the State when "the last shall be first," and beyond the reach of evil.

No one had the right or the power to appoint "the heir of all things," but God. Abraham could not appoint him, neither could he be self-appointed. Abraham wished that Ishmael might be the heir; or as he expressed it, "Oh that Ishmael might live before thee." But God would not consent to this. He therefore promised to give him one for the heir, whom he should call Isaac; and of whom he said, "I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him." Gen. xvii. 19. But Isaac was not only born of promise, he believed the promises likewise, for the Scripture saith, "by faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come." Now, it is written, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called;" that is, Christ shall descend from him, and all who believe the promises, and put on Christ, shall be considered as "in Isaac;" and, being thus "the children of the promise," shall be "counted for the seed," Rom. ix. 6-8, who shall inherit the land and the world forever. "The seed," then, is a phrase that must be understood in a twofold sense; first, as referring to Christ; and secondly, to all who are constitutionally in him. Isaac is representative of both; for Christ was in his loins, and all "in him" must be constitutionally in Isaac also. For want of understanding the Scripture doctrine of the two seeds some very fatal mistakes have been made by many well meaning persons. They have gone so far as to deny that the seed of Abraham after the flesh will ever be restored to the land of Canaan; which is in effect to deny the fulfilment of a vast proportion of "the testimony of God." The seed of the serpent and the seed of the woman indicated before the flood were afterwards distinguished in the seed of Ishmael, and the seed of Isaac. "The children of the flesh are not the children of God; neither are they all Israel, who are of Israel." Rom. ix. 8. This is true; but it does not therefore follow, that there is nothing more to be done with the children of the flesh, than to bura them up. To carry out the allegory, God has yet to make of the Ishmael-seed a great nation; for though Ishmael was an outcast and a wanderer in the wilderness, God promised that he should be great, and dwell in the presence of his brethren. Gen. xvii. 20; xvi. 12. The children of Abraham according to the flesh are "the children of the kingdom." Matt. viii. 12, 13, 28, as well as the children of the promise, only these two classes of children stand in a different relation to the government and glory of the commonwealth, and to the dominion of the nations in the age to come. The Ishmael-children were cast out of the government by the Romans; but the children in Isaac will shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father, when the kingdom is restored again to Israel. Acts i. 6; Matt. xiii. 43.

"In the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory," the children in Isaac will reign as "sons," while the children of the flesh will be the king's subjects or servants." This distinction is apparent from the following testimony: "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes throughout all the earth;" Psa. xlv. 16, of whom it is said, "If the Prince give a gift unto any of my sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance. But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; and after it shall be his son's for them." Ezek. xlvi. 16, 17. The sons of the prince are joint-heirs with him, but the servants of the prince are only lease-holders for a certain number of years. If the natural Israel are not restored to Canaan, the spiritual Israel, that is to say, the prince and his sons, would inherit a kingdom without subjects to serve them. This would be like King Edward and his family reigning in Windsor Castle over the realm of Britain after all its inhabitants had expatriated themselves to the United States. It requires more than a staff to make a regiment; so also it requires a multitude of people, as well as princes, priests and kings to constitute a kingdom in Canaan, or in any country.

Now [illegible]ildren in Isaac become the chi[illegible]ds of the heavenly Jerusalem by [illegible]eiring "the exceeding great and precious promises," set forth in "the man[illegible]d wisdom of God." They hope to see Canaan and Jerusalem under the new covenant, which will constitute them both heavenly. They are even now said to have "come to Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, and to the heavenly Jerusalem;" Heb. xii. 22, but it is yet only in spirit, that is, by faith and hope; and as the city and land will be made heavenly by the Lord from heaven, their glorious attributes are in truth "above;" to believe then, in what will be brought down to the city from above, is for the children of promise in Isaac to stand related to "Jerusalem which is above, the mother of them all." Gal. iv. 26. Hence, the apostle exhorts them, saying, "If then ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on [illegible]things on the earth. For ye are [illegible]earthly things) and your life is hid[illegible]Christ in God. When Christ, who [illegible]Life, shall appear, then shall ye a[illegible]pear with him in glory." Col. [illegible]4.—Selected by Mrs. C. W. Russell.

The Coming Kingdom.

Synopsis of a discourse delivered by P. H. Bouk of Fonthill, Canada, last Sunday evening in the parlor of Mr. Lent on Adam street:

Text John iii. 5: "Except a man be born of water (out of water—E. D.) and of the Spirit he cannot enter into or inherit the kingdom of G d."

The above statement made by him who spake as never man spake, presents to us the importance of being both morally and physically qualified in order to inherit the kingdom of God.

First, in order to become morally qualified to enjoy the above important position it is necessary to believe and obey the gospel. Paul says it is the power of God unto salvation to all them who believe it, and that Christ is the author of eternal salvation to all of them that obey him. And Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

In the account of the first sermon preached by the apostles after the commission by Jesus was given to them, as recorded in Acts ii. it is stated that they who gladly received Peter's words were baptized. By reading the above chapter we notice that he preached about Christ's death, his exaltation to the right hand of the Father, there to remain till his foes be made his footstool; and that he was the one that God had promised that he would raise up to sit upon the throne of his father David, and that he now occupied the position of both Lord and Christ. The audience being convinced of the truthfulness of the preaching inquired what they should do. They were told—to repent and be baptized, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, with the promise of receiving the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Understanding the action and design of baptism enables us to comprehend what Jesus meant by the birth of water. The Scriptural meaning of the word as given by Paul is a burial (See Rom. vii. 4-5; Col. ii. 11-13) which appropriately symbolizes the burial and resurrection of Christ; and the individual emergi[illegible] from the watery tomb with fai[illegible] resurrection power of God[illegible]d in raising Christ from t[illegible]s fitly represented as a bi[illegible] the water.

As in natur[illegible] spiritual. A birth implies begetting. God's children are represented as having been begotten by the incorruptible seed or Word of God which liveth and abideth for ever. See 1 Pet. i. 23, 25; James i. 18; 1 Cor. iv. 15.

The gospel requires corresponding obedience in order for it to prove effectual, as faith without works is dead, being alone, and by works is faith made perfect. In the early days of Christianity the obedience in baptism immediately followed a reception of the gospel. See Acts ii.; viii. 26-29; xvi. 16-34; xviii. 8.

In respect to the birth of the Spirit, as stated by Jesus in the above text, it is quite evident when we examine the Scriptural testimony on the subject, that he had reference to the physical qualifications of his people in order to inherit the kingdom of God.

The Scriptures positively state there must be a moral and a physical change in man in order to obtain the great salvation promised in the Scriptures of truth. He must obtain what Paul in Rom. viii. 23, terms the "Adoption," viz: "The redemption of the body." Paul has also said in 1 Cor. xv. that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. He shows there must be a change of the physical constitution from mortality to immortality. It is necessary to obtain a spiritual body, a body that has been quickened, born or brought forth by the Spirit of God. This will appear from what Paul says in Rom. viii. 11: "If the Spirit of him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you." We see from this that it is the spirit that will quicken or give life to the dead saints at the resurrection.

The above statement of Jesus in the text seems quite appropriate when we discover that the resurrection from the dead, to an immortal or endless life, is termed a birth. See Col. i. 18; Rev. i. 5. Nowhere do the Scriptures represent as a birth a rising from the dead as in the case of Lazarus or any others under similar circumstances.

In conclusion I would say from what we have learned from the Scriptures, that Jesus taught Nicodemus the importance and necessity of being morally and physically qualified in order to inherit the kingdom of God. Man in his natural condition is wholly unqualified for that holy and immortal condition, but when the "Redemption" is completed, that song of the redeemed as recorded in Rev. v. will be sung, viz: "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth." Then the meek will inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace—Psa. xxxvii. May the glorious time soon come.—Salamanca Union.

Report.

To the brethren scattered abroad greeting:

For your encouragement I send an account of the meetings recently held at Scholls, Oregon, by Brother and Sister Woodward. They began meetings March 28, and closed April 7th. Preaching in all fifteen sermons, I believe. The weather was bad during the whole time, clearing up the day before they left; nevertheless the attendance and interest was gratifying. We have long had a desire to meet this brother and sister, and in making their acquaintance our expectation was more than realized. Many of you are personally acquainted with them, and their effective work for the Master.

The meetings were a success in every sense of the word. The brethren were built up and established in the "most holy faith" and encouraged to press on with renewed earnestness for a home in God's kingdom. Just what was accomplished, or how far-reaching the influence of these meetings for good, eternity alone can tell. The earnest words of exhortation and the precious promises so ably presented were thankfully received. To witness the hearty hand shakes and listen to the farewell words as the large congregation bade them God speed was a better testimony than we might write. With regret the time of parting came, the farewell words were spoken; but earnest prayers go with them and wishes that they may long be spared to work in the Master's vineyard. We are thankful for their visit. We hope soon to meet in that land where parting will be no more.

Dear Restitution:

I have just finished the perusal of Bro. Zimer's tract entitled, "One Body and One Spirit." It appeals to me as being eminently Scriptural, instructive clear and forcible in its teachings, presenting prominently to the mind the place the church occupies as Christ's body, and Christ the Head, and that if one member suffers all suffer. This thought should root out all jealousies, bitter feelings or even indifference and coldness among us. Jesus has foreseen all our temptations and provided for the suffering members of his body. In order to be healed they must take the medicine required; we know that medicine is found in the admonitions, entreaties and commands he has given us. This wonderful body must grow into perfection, and no member with the moral disease of unrighteousness can long remain without impairing the whole structure. Oh, let us consider carefully, lovingly day by day, hour by hour, what we are doing to nourish and establish with God's favor, our part in Christ's body. The pen of an inspired Paul has given to us in this, one of the most beautiful and forcible illustrations of a divine truth. The whole chapter and the one that follows should serve us many a meal of meat and drink. We have some members here of the beloved body. We love and are devoted to each other. We have a dear little sister who has lain upon a bed of sickness for four years. I can truthfully say that she is a living example to us of patience, cheerfulness and submission. Dear one, I wish she might realize what a minister she is. I know she would like to receive a word or two of love, or praise, or joy from other members of his beloved body. Her address is as follows: Miss Bertha H. Drew, 12 E. Fellows St., Dixon, Ill.

Dear Restitution:

Inclosed please find money order to pay for THE RESTITUTION the coming year. We would miss the weekly visits of the dear paper much, if we could not have it. It grows more dear to me each year of my life and hope we will never have to do without it as it is so full of good encouragement to those of the household of faith. I can say to the dear brothers and sisters that the blessed Master grows more precious to me and to mine, and I do want to love him more each day of my life, that when he comes, I may be one of that happy number that shall hear the "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord." Loved ones, let us not turn back to the world, but let us put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand when he will say, "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels."

Your Sister in the faith,
MRS. R. J. WORTHINGTON.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 1, 1901. NUMBER 17.

[illegible]tion.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"Wise as Serpents." No. 1.

AN ADDRESS AFTER BAPTISM.

Having recently inducted several trusting souls into the sin-covering name of Jesus, I thought it my duty to direct their thoughts and actions as witnesses for God, and the Faithful Witness. Comparatively the Bible is a new Book to you, and I wish to show you how to study it with profit, and have selected as a foundation for remarks the 16th and 17th verses of Matt. x.—"Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves; but beware of men; for they will deliver you up to the councils, [religious tribunals] and they will scourge you in their synagogues [as supposed heretics] and ye shall be brought before governors [secular tribunals or civil magistrates] for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles."

This is part of the charge delivered to the twelve before sending them out to preach the coming of God's kingdom. The preceding verses show that they were not to expect more than a bare subsistence. They were to expect rejection and persecution! What a send off! Does it not make you draw a long breath, and say, that you never saw agents of a human enterprise sent off to promote it, charged after that fashion? Does it not confirm your faith in the divinity of this enterprise? The Lord did not allow them to go unwarned into the conflict; and we humbly aim to follow his example this morning by showing you that you have enlisted to suffer with Christ, and that in all cases the cross must come before the crown.

"Behold! I send you forth." The emphasis is upon the "I." I am he that sends you forth under such forbidding circumstances. Virtually this was saying to them, "I will protect and bless you, so that ye can be my witnesses hereafter in all the earth,—be not afraid under any circumstances. It is I that send you.

2. The lessons and instructions to the twelve apply to us, because we read in Matt. v. 14 of those who had believed on him were the light of the world, and because in the Lord's absence we have believed the Word which lumined them. It now devolves upon us to disseminate his gospel, the only divine enlightener. They are not addressed to 12 or any definite number now, but says, "Let him that heareth say come," and that includes all who hear and obey. It is, then, personal with us to listen to what follows:—

3. "I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." In the Scriptures over and over again the church is compared to his flock of sheep, as in Acts xx. 28, and Jesus in John x. 14 says, "I am the Good Shepherd and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father, and I lay down my life for the sheep." And the words sheep and lamb in God's Book are synonyms of meekness, inoffensiveness, innocence, non-resistance. This is illustrated by the character of the Lamb of God, who when reviled, reviled not again. Yes; Jesus sent them out as sheep—defenceless, in the midst of wolves ready to make a prey of them, and scatter them, John x. 12. It would have been startling to have just left them where wolves may or could find them, and play havoc among them; but that the sheep should be sent right in among the wolves, would seem stranger still,—but so it was.

4. The next lesson to learn from this and similar passages is, what sort of people it is that Jesus calls wolves? In Matt. vii. 14 we find him saying to this same little group, "Beware of false teachers who come to you in the garb of sheep, while inwardly they are ravenous wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them. Are grapes gathered from thorns, or figs from thistles?" This last reference shows how beautifully the Bible explains itself, when we get acquainted with it. God is his own interpreter and he will make it plain. We know now who the men Jesus had reference to were, when he said, "Beware of men." They were religious teachers who under a pretended zeal for God had these messengers arrested and imprisoned, and scourged, and at last killed.

5. Another lesson is, That the disciples were sent in among wolves to seek out such as would receive their message. The fact is, the wolves composed the masses, and it was not expected that many of them would receive the Word with gladness. Those who received it had to be sought out, and then be brought out from the multitude of wolves dressed up as sheep to deceive. Take notice that the meekest and most defenceless messengers of peace were commissioned to do their work among the most fierce, powerful, and from every point of view, the most unconquerable opponents of the truth. Sheep in the midst of wolves are to all appearance, wholly lost,—what were they to do? Such wolves not only represent a cunning, but a malignant disposition, and hatred of Christ and truth. It is the delight of wolves to ravage a flock of sheep; but look you, the whole story is reversed here: a few sheep have to invade the territory of a vast flock of wolves. And the 6th lesson shows the sort of discipline the disciples had to submit to, to prepare for the apparently unequal contest; and here it is:—Be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. Now, brethren, and sisters, young, middle-aged, and old, take a steady look at this and you will see the sheep had no choice in the matter whatever; were subject to orders only. It is a positive command for the Great Shepherd whose career was characterized by those very traits,—wise as a serpent and as harmless as a dove. The disciples were required to combine two qualities not often found together, namely,

SAGACITY AND SIMPLICITY.

They had to imitate two animals extremely unlike; the one most simple in nature or disposition, and the other most subtle. And from this and other passages it is clearly seen that those best fitted to represent the religion of Jesus and present God's gracious message of life after death, to inherit his kingdom of glory, are such as hold in the nicest balance the Lion-heart, and

LAMB-LIKE INNOCENCE;

and the wisdom of the serpent and simplicity of the dove. Every child of God in the past, has been exposed to difficulties and trials requiring the utmost caution and prudence, because they are entrusted with the sublimest and awfulest truths which demand of them entire sincerity and simplicity. I leave for your careful consideration after you get home, the command to be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves,—and ask yourselves if the apostles would or could have executed their commission if they had disregarded the command, and then consider how we can expect to succeed if

WE DISREGARD IT?

And while dwelling upon this matter do not forget that the disciples with their differing temperaments, were all alike commanded to be as wise as serpents in the Master's work, as well as harmless as doves,—so that there is no such thing as hiding behind the excuse, "Oh, that might suit so and so, very well, but I am not made up that way." No. There is no shelter there. If we are not made up that way,—what's the reason? Its not likely that we were born with those traits largely developed, or that our training from youth up has developed them; but, do we not read that if a man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature, that old things have passed away, and all things have become new? Then what does it mean? Are we

NEW CREATURES,

or old creatures? Are we in Adam or are we in Christ? These are questions of momentous importance! If the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin, how can one corner of our hearts not have been cleaned out, and the old man be still in authority there? On close investigation we will all see that there is no excuse in that direction for not being workers together with God as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves,—because the transforming is every way equal to the work assigned it, if we but allow it. Or, in other words, if we co-operate with it! I am trying to show you again, what I have told you before,—you have not been invited for your own selves alone,—but as the light of the world,—as workers together with God,—and although it shut me out of the kingdom, I must tell you that you can do little for God unless you fit yourselves for it by obedience to the divine commands. Solemnly I say it, for God will not do. We must be ourselves wha[illegible]rs to be, by the transfo[illegible] of the truth. or we shall [illegible] no good, but rather evil, [illegible] name of God will be blasphemed if we do not adorn the teaching. But the 7th lesson in this and parallel passages explains, partly why the messengers and witnesses for Jesus have to deport themselves with the wisdom of serpents, and harmlessness of doves. "But beware of men,"—some will cherish the ravenous disposition of wolves under a dress of zeal for God. And from the fact that it says:—"For they [the men of whom they are warned to beware] will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues, and will be brought before governors," etc., we know these words had special reference to the disciples present,—and the Acts of the Apostles show the

POWER OF GOD'S TRUTH

SLOVENLY WORK

of the predictions. But the general principle applies to all of every age who embrace heartily the gospel of Christ. He who will [illegible] godly in Christ Jesus shall,—[illegible]ay—shall suffer persecution in [illegible] form or other, according to th[illegible]ges of the age. "Beware of men[illegible]n of the world, religious or [illegible]ike,—men out of Christ, pious or [illegible] stand off from them against their plots, for they seek to ensnare you, either by the pleasures of sin or the drag-net of a false system of doctrine. As if he had said, "Do not think you can be faithful to the mission entrusted to you by me, if you fraternize with the enemies of the good message you have to deliver. But in view of the command to be as wise as serpents and harmless as doves, the command to "beware of men," shows that there is position in relation to persecutions. It shows that the wisdom and the harmlessness must be combined. They must go together. Alone the wisdom of the serpent is mere cunning,—and the harmlessness of the dove mere weakness,—but in combination the wisdom would save them from unnecessary harm [illegible] the harmlessness would p[illegible] them from going too far to a[illegible]anger to their persons. Apostoli[illegible]tianity allowed how harmonious[illegible]equalities worked.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

A RIGHT AND A WRONG

Short Sermons. No. 17.

Does the world know a Christian? Does the world know us? This is a very serious Bible question, and worthy of consideration. And although we have written about it of late, yet we did not say just what, or all we wanted to say. And knowing that men and women and children too, have their ideas about who is, and who is not a Christian, we feel constrained to try again. I for one am free to say that I do not believe that the world knows a Christian when it sees him, preferring the company and the conversation of rattleheads, wild and profane, to those who love to talk about the Bible and that blessed hope, because a true Christian is a very scarce article, and is not very certain and positive about it himself, as he only walks and lives by faith. To know a Christian, and to know a professed Christian is not the same, no more than a silver dollar and a counterfeit dollar is the same, and yet there are but few who can tell the difference between them. The world did not know the Son of God when he was on earth, but looked upon him and treated him as an imposter and an enemy. It is true, that a very few comparatively had even faith in him, and received him. And he ought to be watched more closely away from home, as it won't hurt a good man to watch him, and a bad man ought to be watched closely. There are so many professed Christians who differ as wide as the poles in faith and works. It seems impossible for the world to know who a true Christian is. There are so very many who make a profession of religion while their life fails to mark the change, that the world is confessed and staggered. The world has been so long traditionized and misled that it is out of the question for them to know who a Christian is. And lastly, for want of interest the world seldom reads the Bible to learn the way of salvation, and does not know and understand God's plan of salvation, [illegible]w can they know a Christian [illegible]ey see him? The world can[illegible] know its own, much as u[illegible] room knows their own, w[illegible]w precious little about a humming bird or an antelope. And I am perfectly satisfied that the Apostle John was right when he said therefore for this reason, because we are Christians or children of God, the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Then it is not wonderful if the world who has no time or interest to read and talk and try to learn more and more about the Lord and his will, knows us not. I find but few among professed Christians who care to read and talk about their faith and their hope. Not so of true Christians. A man or a woman who claims to be a Christian, and has no time or disposition to read and examine their faith, and to talk freely about their hope, and feel real anxious to do so, and to given reason for their hope as required by the Apostle, but would far sooner do any thing else, or talk to any one else, about anything else, is surely one of the strangest creatures on earth. If such things be the marks of a Christian, I freely confess that I know nothing about a Christian? A Christian may be weak in the faith, but not from choice. A still born babe has no desire for milk that it may grow thereby, but not so of a living healthy babe. While the world does not know a Christian, it is not the fault of the Christian, but the world's misfortune. The world loves his own, so there must be and is love and affinity between Christians. "Birds of a feather will fly together," but a crow will not stay with doves and meadow larks. Our consolation is the Lord knows them that are his. And we may soon be enabled to return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. For behold, the day cometh that shall bake as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of Hosts. Amen.

T. E. ADAMS.

"He that Winneth Souls is Wise." Prov. xi. 30.

Why? Because, "when the Lord has said unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die, and we give him not warning, nor speak to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life, the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity, but his blood will be required at our hands." We shall be looked upon as his murderers and be held accountable, just the same as if we actually were, and the worst of it is, the life that will be taken from us, will not be this present, evanescent life, but that life whose days are without an end; "his blood (or life) will be required at our hands." We did not "save that life," by timely warning, for the eternal years, and our lives pay the penalty. It is no trifling matter to trifle with God. This business of winning souls is our business, not the business of the preachers alone, but the business of the whole ecclesia of God. We all have some part to bear in the matter, and we will indeed be wise, as Solomon says, to be about it; earnest, active, careful in doing, in speaking, in giving. Souls are in danger. The Bible says so. It affirms that we can save them from death, by giving them warning. From what death? Obviously the death that cuts the wicked off from eternal life, for we cannot possibly save them from the death that they die in Adam.

Dear ones, do we realize our responsibility in this matter? It is almost appalling, in view of the loss that may accrue to us, if our duty is not fulfilled. But love ought to constrain us to do the work that the Master has left for us to do. It does constrain many of us to be willing to "suffer the loss of all things so we may win Christ." "Freely ye have received, freely give." Pass on the waters of life; let others drink and live. "He that watereth shall be watered himself." "He that gathereth by labor shall increase." No active, devoted worker for God is ever unblessed. But it is not the selfish ones; it is not those who stop to bicker and quarrel and tear down the little churches; it is not those who are at enmity with each other, and whose only ambition is to show what fine talkers they are and how combative they can be, whom God "waters" and causes to "increase," but the humble, praying ones, who burying all of self in Christ, work steadily on, day after day, striving to get others into the kingdom. Winning souls! O but it is grand to win souls and to keep them won! For the winning is only begun when we get them into Christ. We take them into our arms then, as the mother takes her babes, to nourish and bring them up for Christ. They must be fed and taught; reproved and corrected, till they come to the stature of a perfect man in Christ Jesus our Lord. It is so saddening to see the babes perishing for lack of mother-care; bright young people who have come into the church, glad, eager to do the will of our heavenly Father, but who, instead of finding the church a delightful nursery for souls, "keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace,"—a place where they might learn to work and grow strong; they have found it the nursery of discord, of evil passions, and perchance of infidelism, and have fled back in dismay to the world.

Is this the case in your neighborhood, dear brother and sister? And if so, is it you who are in fault? Then the sooner you get back to your post, and to God, the better for you lest your candlestick be "moved out of its place" as so many candlesticks have been. For what worth is the stick, when no light flashes from it? That you are not in your place and at work winning souls is a plain confession that something is wrong, and that you no longer care for them, nor for God. Do you? Do I? Is God any thing to us? How do we look upon the riches of his grace? Is it sweet experience of our lives that "our iniquity is pardoned;" our joy beyond all power of woe or sorrow to take away? Then will we want to tell it; we will want others to have the same inestimable riches, and nothing can close our mouths. We will go on telling it, will keep on working, as a dear, loving child of God, who has the misfortune to belong to one of these distracted churches, said "she intended to do, though all others fall by our side." There is not a person in the church but who has some dear one out of Christ; has that dear friend ever been spoken to as to the saving of his soul? Has ten, fifteen, twenty years gone by, and he never been asked to come to Jesus? Then how can you make him believe that you think salvation of any account, or that you care for his life? You could not, were he to be brought to his death bed tomorrow.

"He that winneth souls is wise." Let us be about it, today, tomorrow and all the time. The Master is coming soon. Do not keep back the words that may bring a repenting sinner to the Master's feet. And for the dear ones who are already in the church and are going astray, have tender words of warning. Hold them back from places of worldly amusement. Show them that the little sins are "the little foxes that spoil the vines." One little hole in the wall that surrounds a vineyard, will let in a multitude of hungry jackals in a single night, the result being the ruin of the prospects of the husbandman. "Give Satan an inch and he will take an ell." Go to the theater once and you will want to go again; play cards once, and you will want to try the game over; go to one ball, and you will find it harder to resist the next time; read what is called a good novel, and by and by you may find yourself reading a bad one. And in yielding to the temptation to go to these places and to do these things, you will be losing the companionship of Christ. You will not find him walking with you, and soon you will not care to be found walking with him. I say these things to save your souls; listen and be wise; and not only to save your souls, but to save the souls of others. We do not save souls in the theater and in the ball-room, in card-playing and in novel-reading, and in going ourselves we influence others to go; we lead them away from Christ, we cause them to lose the hope of coming glory. Instead of "winning souls" for God, we take them to the school of tragedy, and bear our part in making the plays of the stage become a shocking reality in the real life of the world. We take our influence from the church and throw it into the other side of the scales. We make the world look at the church as if it, as a lump, were all like us, with nothing pure and clean about it, with no power of resistance, no back bone in it. We take from it, its saving power, its light and its salt. O be careful, dear ones! "He that winneth souls is wise." There is no time to lose.

Notice.

Will any brother living in or near Denver, Col. please send me their address? I wish to address them concerning parties living near Denver, who are anxious to obey the gospel by putting on Christ in the ordinance of baptism.

Adrian, Mich. L. C. CHASE.

To Illinois brethren in special and all brethren in general:

Recently the Building Committee of the Illinois State Conference made a call through these columns for aid in raising a fund to build a suitable Conference building—not to use as a place of worship—but a building in which delegates may be entertained while in attendance at the Conference. The church in Oregon is large enough for all the meetings, having a seating capacity of about two hundred. Many generously answered this first call and the committee desires in this general way to thank all who have subscribed not only their money but also their words of encouragement. To them this second call is not directed, for we believe you have done well your part. We have now about $275.00 on hand. We need yet, at the very lowest estimate, $75.00. To put up a suitable building with lumber at its present price, we should have $400.00. This item is written to invite any who have not yet subscribed to do so in any amount, however small. Send remittance to the chairman of the committee who will promptly receipt for the same. Time and space forbid discussion as to the merits of locating the Conference permanently. Suffice it to say that we believe that when the plan is once in working order, all will be pleased with it. Building Committee consists: S. J. Lindsay, Chairman, Oregon, Ill.; J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Ill.; E. F. Gesin, Forreston, Ill.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

TRACTS.

"One Body and One Spirit," by A. H. Zilmer, is the title of a booklet now in the press. Bro. Zilmer delivered a discourse upon this theme at the late conference in Plymouth. It was so well taken that the committee on literature arranged to have it printed. Every family should possess a copy. His treatment of the subject of the Spirit is original, logical and very scriptural. Price 5 cents each, 30 cents a dozen.

This committee also has 10 tracts entitled Bible Study Series, price 15 and 20 cents a 100.

Poetry.

Song of the Burden-Bearer.

Over the narrow footpath
That led from my lowly door
I went with a thought of the Master,
As oft I had walked before.
My heart was heavily laden,
And with tears my eyes were dim;
But I knew I should lose the burden
Could I get a glimpse of him.

Over the trodden pathway,
To the fields all shorn and bare,
I went with a step that faltered,
And a face that told of care.
I had lost the light of the morning,
With its shimmer of sun and dew,
But a gracious look of the Master
Would the strength of more renew.

While yet my courage wavered,
And the sky before me blurred,
I heard a voice behind me
Saying a tender word;
And I turned to see the brightness
Of heaven upon the road,
And suddenly lost the pressure
Of the weary, crushing load.

Nothing that hour was altered;
I had still the weight of care,
But I bore it now with gladness
Which comes of answered prayer.
Not a grief of the soul can falter
Nor cloud its vision when
The dear Lord gives the spirit
To breathe to his will amen.

The Saints and the Nations. No. 2.

After Jesus having come with all his holy saints in great power and glory and has restored the kingdom to Israel and assumed control of the whole world with all his true saints as rulers with him, then, the next step will be "And before him shall be gathered all nations." Here our Savior has quit talking about his true saints and is talking about the nations, and that this gathering of all nations before him must take place before they are taught the right ways of the Lord, Isa. xi. 9; liv. 13, and before they will go up from year to year to worship the King the Lord of Hosts and to to keep the feast of tebernacles. Zech. xiv. 16.

"And he shall separate them one from another." Separate who? All nations spoken of that shall be gathered before him, and that he will separate them as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.

What kind of a separation will this be?

A national separation. It seems that all nations of the earth are divided into just two classes called the sheep and goat nations, and they have to be separated just as well as the saints, and that the cause of their separation makes it a national affair, and that it could not be otherwise, and that we will call this up again further on, and that some nations have done what was right, while others have done wrong, and that those that have done what was right are called "sheep nations" and those that have done what was wrong are called "goat nations" then it is a fact that there are sheep and goat nations? We should say that there was as John x. 16 will plainly show where it says, "And other sheep I have which are not of this fold, them also must I bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold and one shepherd", and in Matt. xxv. 31 to the close of the chapter is the scene where the sheep are brought to view, and that it is plain to be seen that there are two folds spoken of but not in use at the same time. The first one is the gospel fold which is now in use to gather out a people for his name. Fold No. 2 is the kingdom fold into which the nations will be gathered, and that when our Savior says, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold," he evidently looks forward to the glorious kingdom fold, and to the sheep nations that shall be ingathered there and which does not belong to the gospel fold or age at all, and that the present age is the time of the gospel fold, and the future age is the time of the kingdom fold, and each age has its one fold, and Jesus is the great Shepherd not only of the saints but of the nations as well, and when the time will come when the sheep nations will be gathered into the kingdom fold, then will be the time when those other sheep shall hear the sweet voice of the Son of God and there shall be one fold and one shepherd known all over the world.

Jesus says he shall set the sheep (or sheep nations) on his right, but the goats (or goat nations) on the left but how does it come that there are sheep and goat nations? It is an easy matter to see how when rightly understood. But we will go on a little further and let the Bible explain. After separating the nations as he wants them, "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." How often this Scripture has been used and applied to the saints of God when our Savior never intended that it should be applied there, and besides we do great injustice to ourselves and to the cause of truth because those that read after us get a wrong impression of the Word and are thus led astray. To get a correct or thorough idea upon this subject we want to go back to the 23rd verse where it says "before him shall be gathered all nations." That it is all nations that are gathered before him and that all nations are not saints, and that it is the all nations that are separated, the sheep nations from the goat nations, and that the sheep nations are set over on the right hand and the goat nations on the left. Then he says to the sheep nations on his right hand, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Now from what has been said here you will notice and understand who it is said to, that all our Savior's talk is directed to the sheep nations that shall be gathered before him on his right hand, and he says unto them, "Come ye blessed of my Father." You will please remember that it is the sheep nations that are on his right hand before him, that it is therefore a national calling that they may receive their blessing as subjects in the kingdom of God as is promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in days of old, where it says, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. xi. 1, 2, 3, 7; xviii. 18; xxii. 16–18; xxvi. 3, 4; xxviii. 13, 14.

Now it is a fact that the great event to be obtained through the gospel of the kingdom of God is the blessing of all nations and that when the blessing begins it will last to all eternity, and that the restitution age will be the time for preparing the nations for that great blessing, teaching them the right ways of the Lord, and that those sheep nations must be qualified by a good character formed, even to hear our Savior call them to inherit the kingdom of God as subjects ere the call will be extended to them, and why he calls them. We will find farther on just what those things are.

Next we come to another question and ask, What does it mean where it says, "Inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world?

In order to more fully understand this question we want to understand the nature of the case. The great work of the kingdom age after the restitution is over will be to pour out the great blessing upon the sheep nations as subjects there, and that the sheep nations must be called to inherit that portion of the kingdom where the blessing will take place, hence called to inherit the kingdom as subjects. Now it is a fact that the subjects of the kingdom of God are called to inherit their portion just as much so as the saints are called to inherit their portion and it requires a good character in both cases.

The saints inherit the kingdom as rulers, the sheep nations inhabit it as subjects. They both inherit the kingdom of God and that neither one does violence to the other because each one inherits their own portion of the kingdom.

We now ask, Why are those sheep nations called to inherit their own portion of the kingdom?

This we will see more about further on, and come on now to another question and ask, Why does it say that the kingdom is prepared for you from the foundation of the world?

1st. Because God has promised to bless all the nations of the earth.

2nd. Because this great blessing is to take in the kingdom of God, or kingdom of Israel restored.

3rd. Because those nations have qualified themselves for that great position. Hence qualification for the great blessing naturally is of as much importance as it is to the saints that rule over them and that both are going on at the same time. That the kingdom of God is especially prepared for you, that is, for those sheep nations that they might be most wonderfully blessed as God has promised, and that our heavenly Father foresaw that the Seed of the woman would be the heir to David's throne, and that as an heir he would finally gain his inheritance and take possession of the rulership of the whole world under the name of King Immanuel and restore earth and man to the favor of God, and thus pour out the great blessing upon the sheep nations as subjects in the kingdom of God. Hence, the kingdom of God is being especially prepared for that great purpose, and we now ask, What have those sheep nations done that our Savior says that the kingdom of God was especially prepared for you from the foundation of the world? I will now endeavor to answer this one along with four more and will now give them.

1. Why does Jesus call those nations at his right hand "sheep nations?"

2. Why does Jesus call them "Blessed of my Father?"

3. Why does Jesus call them to inherit the kingdom as subjects?

4. Why does Jesus say prepared for you from the foundation of the world?

5. Why does Jesus say so many good things about the sheep nations of the earth?

We will now reverse the order and ask, What are the conditions that the sheep nations have done that has caused so much good said, and will be done for them that the whole kingdom of God will be especially prepared for their good?

Our Savior answers all these questions in the next two verses. "For I was an hungered and ye gave me food; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me." Here are now the conditions stated in full under six different heads just what Jesus says the sheep nations did do unto him, yet, at the same time is is a well known fact that those nations did not know the great amount of good that they had done unto Jesus, or when, or how they had done it; for we find further on that those righteous (or sheep) nations are really surprised and say, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered and fed thee? or thirsty and gave thee drink? or when saw we thee a stranger and took thee in? or naked and clothed thee? or when saw we thee sick or in prison and came unto thee? Here you will see that by what the sheep nations say to the Lord that they do not know when they have done any such good deeds unto the Lord and so they say, when saw we do all these good deeds unto thee? So the King will answer and say unto them more plainly, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

It is a fact unprecedented in history or any where else that the sheep nations have done good deeds unto the saints, and that too without any law telling them to do so, and that too of their own free will. No wonder they are called sheep nations. No wonder they are called, Blessed of my Father. No wonder they shall be called to inherit the kingdom as subjects. No wonder that the kingdom shall be especially prepared for you from the foundation of the world, because they have done such wonderful good deeds unto the saints of God, and that too of their own free will. This settles the case as to who did the good deeds and to whom it was done. Because those sheep nations have done those six items of good deeds unto the saints of God which are his brethren. Then will all those good things be done and said unto the sheep nations. But, says one, Pray tell us how is this? It is quite easy to answer if we will only stop to consider just a little in the right direction. You will notice here that there are three parties connected in this saying as follows:—

1. Jesus the speaker.

2. The righteous or sheep nations spoken to.

3. Those who Jesus call "my brethren."

Now, let us keep these three parties in mind as we pass along; for it is the foundation of the whole matter for a right understanding of the same.

We next inquire, Where did his brethren come from, that is, the third party spoken of?

We answer that they came with him there as you will plainly see by going back to the 31st verse, where it says, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory and all the holy saints with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." We are aware that it says in the verse the holy "angels" but the translation is wrong as we have already shown, and that it should read the holy "saints." Then it is all right and straight and in harmony with the 40th verse where he calls them "my brethren." The saints are his brethren and they have come to share with him in the rulership of the world. They are his retinue bright and all clothed in white for the crowns they shall wear, and to enter upon the work that lies before them. Hence they are by his side and are living witnesses for those sheep nations to the kinds of good deeds unto them. They know full well what is due unto them. But now comes the question, How did the sheep nations do good unto the saints of God, as is recorded above, which are his brethren?

It is quite easy to see how it is done when rightly understood. The rule is when any nation will so make their laws that the saints of God can live in their dominions unmolested or protected so that they can worship God according to the dictates of his truth and thus form a character aright in the sight of God. Then will all these things be administered unto them. So the nations that will do that kind of good deeds unto the saints of God will be doing it unto Jesus, and for this kind of good deeds done unto the saints of God they shall truly be called sheep nations. They shall truly be set over on the right hand, they shall truly be called "Come, ye blessed of my Father." They shall truly inherit the kingdom as subjects, they shall truly take their place in the kingdom as being especially prepared for them from the foundation of the world in order to receive the great blessing promised them. They have done the good deeds unto the saints, and that too of their own free will, and the future kingdom of God as subjects shall be theirs without any question or doubt. I wonder if they wont be called sheep nations. I wonder if they wont be set over on the right hand. I wonder if they wont be called "Come ye blessed of my Father." I wonder if they wont be called to inherit the kingdom as subjects. I wonder that the kingdom is especially prepared for you from the foundation of the world, for doing such wonderful good deeds unto the saints of God. Most assuredly will all those good things be said and done unto the sheep nations because the sheep nations framed their laws so that the saints of God live in their dominion and worship God according to the dictates of his truth.

Now, in conclusion, do you know that those good deeds done is a most wonderful good thing done to the saints of God when they can live and do those things that are well pleasing in his sight, and that God is wise enough to appreciate and reward all such good deeds done unto the saints of God?

Education. No. 7.

[The following article is one of a series of ten written by Bro. J. F. Gellety, of Williston, Md., on various educational subjects, and are calculated to expose many of the theories of supposedly "advanced teachers." Though differing somewhat from our usual style of topics, yet we trust they will be helpful to our readers, especially the younger classes of students. They were originally written for and published in the Denton Journal, and necessarily have some expressions that refer to local surroundings.—Ed.]

ANIMAL CREATION BY KIND.

"And God said let the earth bring forth the grass, the herb yielding seed after his kind, the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself * * * The waters brought forth abundantly after their kind * * And God said let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle and creeping thing and beast of the earth after his kind."—Genesis.

Perhaps the real spirit of atheism in modern theoretical science is best shown in the doctrine known as the theory of evolution, which is now being introduced to a great extent into the institutions of "higher education" and even, in some degree, into the public school system. The doctrine is but the legitimate outcome of the nebular theory, that starts the universe off with an almighty kick, and lets it go at that, to rig itself up and find its way out the best it can, till later, as the thing cooled off, some sort of a maggot (protoplasm, by scientific name,) began to infest the slime of the primeval seas. Gradually these small plants or animals grew big in the long roll of ages and differentiated into other and various forms. One, for instance, would sprout a tail and, finding it useful to wiggle along, with the consent of a lady prof. of his advanced set communicated his appendage as an inheritance to his offspring, who, in turn, improved on the idea and sprouted fins, etc. In a million years or so later the fins got so long that they accidentally flipped out of water, and that started the idea of wings. From that time arms waxed comparatively [illegible] until the "anthropomorphic" and the "missing link" [illegible] to the kind of citizens that [illegible] wingless and [illegible] one of us by taking thought can add a knuckle-joint to our vertebral column, or sprout any sort of a flipper to fly with, we must set all such negative facts aside when a big scientific theory has to be propounded.

Now, all this to some plain people may seem a sort of a joke, and there is an element of humor in it, but it must be borne in mind that this is the theory of creation supported by the greatest names in modern science. Darwin, Huxley and Tindal are words to conjure by—these are the prophets of the god Blind—Force, and they have swept the scientific circles of Europe and America. Yet, with common sense and a little posting, one need not fear all the magic of their clop-logic. The danger is in introducing their absurd conclusions into the public schools and, by mere iteration of their "polysyllabic nomenclature" confuse the mind of the rising generation. Such was the methods of the church in the middle ages, and its victory was complete. And here comes in the fact that the strong common sense of the countryman, who lives close to nature, must ever be the main stay of the race physically, mentally and morally. The country boy in the pine woods, the orchard, and the stable sees visions and dreams dreams that are sealed to even the anatomist and the professor in his brick-hemmed laboratory. For instance, it is clear to the countryman that he and his hog are not related, he might not be able to express himself fluently on the subject, but it might be dangerous to insinuate such a thing to him. It is quite different from the professor. To him we are all common stock. And the anatomist claims that the internal organs of pigs and people are very suggestively similar—much more so even than monkey and man—and, in fact, that hogs are our cousins by a few generations removed. Now observe the position that the professor's conclusion puts the countryman in when he kills and eats his hog; but even the cannibal professor himself likes ham and eggs.

The theory of the evolution of all living things from a common stock was not originated by Darwin, as some suppose, but be elaborated the idea. He noted in some pigeon cotes that he kept that he could propagate certain peculiarities of crown or feathers—commonly known as "sports"—and by so doing after a while he would have what was termed a distinct "breed." Of course all animal breeders are familiar with this fact. All the varieties of horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, chickens, and so forth, have been thus produced; and some of the various breeds are even more diverse from their kind in appearance than are animals of a different kind. Among dogs we have from the little lap dog, weighing a few ounces, to the huge Mastiff or New Foundland; horses range from the little Shetland pony to the Percheron, and chickens from the bantam to the Shanghai; and truly, one who has a theory to support can find a very plausible argument concerning the "differentiation of species" from these facts, but for one thing, and that is that the animal breeder that would raise pure stock must keep the different breeds apart. He must fence field, paddock, pen or yard, as the case may be, or all different breeds will mix and, instead of fancy Leghorns and Cochins and Games, he will soon have common chickens; and fancy dogs let loose will soon all turn mongrels. So, also, would it be in nature among all the different kinds of animals if they existed in like circumstances and under like conditions, but very different are the circumstances and conditions among wild animals. There we see all various species kept apart by a much more complete system of fencing than chicken wire, wood, stone or steel, for the law of separation is ingrained in their very nature and each propagates only with "his kind." This is a rule that governs all nature, a law inflexible as adamant, with one exception. There are certain animals of similar species that, against the rule of nature, can be crossed by artificial means, and in that case power of propagation ceases. The familiar case of the mule is in point and this peculiar fact in nature is known as muling.

The more one thinks about this great law of separation among all the various species the more wonderful it seems, especially in bird life, where the little wanderers migrate thousands of miles and mingle with all kinds of strange company; yet, even where the trained eye of the naturalist can hardly detect a difference either in structure or habit, they never make a mistake in "selection." So, also, with the fishes that flood up our river in the spring, they bring their eggs with them, as well as their baggage, and never venture outside the divinely prescribed limit—"after their kind." There are other arguments that could be adduced corroborating the biblical narrative that the animal races were created apart and kept apart by the volition of a Supreme Power; but the great widespread, prominent fact in nature, above mentioned, ought to warn those who have the guidance and direction of the education of the rising generation to think twice before introducing into the school-room natural history theories that have a high-sounding name, but that stultify the common sense of every farmer and stock-raiser. For, after all, it is to the school-room that, under God, we must look for human progress. The preachers, the professors and the politicians do very well to attend to the show departments. They beat the drum, let off the fireworks and collect the gate receipts, while the most important work of the age devolves on the graceful shoulders of the natty little school ma'am. May kind heaven assist her, and the county raise her salary.

Editor Restitution:

In your issue of Mar. 27 is an article written by C. W. Hogan, in which he warns us, and very properly too, against the stupendous error of "Christian Science." Truly Christ and the Apostles never "healed by the will of man," nor as the Christian Scientists assert "Through the power of his mind over mind i. e. whenever the people had confidence in his Word, he would convince them that they were not in reality sick, lame, blind or halt; the affliction was only in the mind, and as soon as they would believe Jesus' Word by putting away this error they were holding (that sickness, sin and death were real) they were healed." They have apparently done some wonderful cures, and very craftily mix in a good deal of the divine, "bearing many Christians upon its deceitful flood," fulfilling the prophecy of 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2, for in these last days of this gospel dispensation Satan comes clothed as an angel of light, counterfeiting the truth and the work of Jesus, even as the magicians of old counterfeited the miracles of Moses. "Whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders." 2 Thes. ii. 9.

Here is a part of their theology. Some of the facts gathered by a minister of the gospel of Jesus, from Christian Scientists, under whose treatment and instruction he placed himself for this purpose. "God is love, truth and life, and therefore he is a principle and not a person. Mortal mind is only the expression of an idea. Immortal mind or soul is part of God. Soul and body are God and man; God the principle, and man the idea. There is neither personal Deity, personal devil, nor personal man. Man is not a reality but an error. There is no sin nor sickness, no atonement; Jesus is simply an idea." What is this but anti christ? "And every Spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of anti-christ." 1 Jno. iv. 3. But please do not confound Christian Science with divine healing, for the latter is a sure and blessed reality: for the "name of the Lord Jesus, through faith in that name," makes blessedly whole those who come in faith to him for healing. Praise the Lord for a personal knowledge of his healing power, for the reality of the thrill of his divine touch in "my body and in my spirit, which are Gods." Almost nine years he has kept me strong and well and rejoicing in his great salvation. Yes, it is a blessed reality; just as real as sin and sickness, which we know all too well, are tremendously real, Christian Scientists to the contrary notwithstanding. Did he not heal all that came to him? So fulfilling the prophecy, "Himself took our infirmities and bore our sickness." Matt. viii. 17. Showing the Hebrew rendering of Isa. liii. 4. Did he not give his disciples the same command, Mark xvi. 17, and did he not through James pass it on to us? Jas. v. 14, 15. Then it must be his will and if "we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us, and if we know that he heareth us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions we desired of him." 1 John v. 14, 15. "Blessed be the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; Who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases." Psa. ciii. 2, 3.

A Funeral.

The writer was permitted to hear a Baptist minister deliver a funeral discourse. The lesson was read by a Methodist preacher. I will give the lesson, as they read it: "Let not your heart ye troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there may ye be also. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight." If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. But some will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? The rest of this chapter was read, that is from the 35th to 51st verse. Permit me to quote: "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep; but we shall be changed. After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds and people and tongues stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hand, having the glory of God; and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. And I saw no temple therein, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." Now, for fear some may not be able to find all the passages of Scripture I will give it: John xiv. 1-3; Acts i. 9; 1 Cor. xix. 20, 35-51; Rev. vii. 9; xxi. 11, 21-22; Dan. vii. 10. The seventh chapter of Daniel and the seventh chapter of Revelations should be read in connection, which I did not quote.

Then the Baptist minister began by saying: "If in this life only we had hope, we were in a deplorable condition. If we are to moulder back to mother earth and that is the last of man; sad, sad indeed would be the thought. This life is only a place to prepare us for the life beyond." Then he spoke of the first advent of Christ. How it had been pointed out by the prophets, how he was looked for by many, announced his birth by the angels, born in Bethlehem, how the angels sung, how heaven was made to rejoice at his first advent, how he taught the way of life, was betrayed, crucified, buried, rose again the third day, ascended to heaven, and when he had ascended up, two angels stood by them saying, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven; this same Jesus which is taken from you into heaven shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." If his first advent was looked for with such great delight, his second should be a thousand times more important. Then all the old prophets and those who have been dead for thousands of years will come forth; then it is necessary for him to come. In his remarks he said flesh and blood could not inherit the kingdom of God. He advised one and all to be ready, as he did not think it would be long till Jesus would return back again, as the signs indicated his near approach. Yes, he said he was coming with all his holy angels, and then shall he reward every man according as his work shall be. The first part of his discourse was on the second coming of Christ, and that heaven would retain him till his second coming; and every thing hung on his returning. Then he changed his remarks. He said death did not mean to die. This life is only a place to prepare us to live on, and as a proof he quoted part of Paul's language to Timothy: "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness. For me to die is gain. In my Father's house are many mansions. Yes, Jesus has gone to prepare a place for us, and each will have a mansion. Then shall the body return to dust and the soul unto God who gave it, or spirit.

I often went to see this brother who has been confined to his bed for over six years, and prayed and sung with him. I saw John a short time before he passed away and asked him, Is it well with thee? And as a token he nodded his head. I know by that that he is safe. Jesus came and took through the dark valley, up to one of those he had gone to prepare for him. Yes, he has a mansion for each one of us. I know John is now basking in the sunshine of God, on the eternal shore of deliverance. He is in his mansion now. He advised one and all to prepare as John had done. That is to wait till you come on your death bed and then sing and pray and all would be well; and if we failed to do that at death, awful would be our doom. Yours in hope,

G. W. Smith.

Three Prophetic Days.

"Three Prophetic Days, or Sunday the Christian Sabbath. Showing the requirements of the Mosaic law, and comparing what should have occurred during the week of the Passover, with what was done by Jesus and his Apostles, as recorded in the New Testament. Proving that the law was kept to the very letter, and that Jesus made his triumphant entrance on Saturday, that he was crucified on Wednesday afternoon, and rose from the grave on Saturday evening, and that Sunday is the Christian's rest day, as is clearly shown by the law and the prophets."

The above is the title of a book of 230 pages, written by Wm. Frederick. This book has some original and peculiar ideas, an idea being gathered by reading the title page. While it is well to settle all such matters that can be settled, still we know full well that some people will never admit the deductions made as to days. However, the chief value of this work is in the unanswerable argument it makes against the Seventh day question, and post-millennialists. Any brother who wishes to be fully posted on these important matters, cannot afford to be without this book. All who are bothered by the law keepers should procure a copy at once, for no one can be too well posted in ways to combat this error of our times. We have arranged with the Author to supply this work from this office. It is well bound in cloth, good paper, and clear type. The price is $1.00 post paid. A cheaper paper binding will be sent for 50 cents to those who do not wish to buy the one in cloth, though the book is worth the better binding.

Works of Bro. Wiley Jones.

Twelve Words, or the true meaning of Hell, Soul, Spirit, Ghost, Paradise, Incorruption, Incorruptible, Immortal, Immortality, Forever, Everlasting, Eternal, and their originals as learned by their uses in the Bible. A tract of 40 pages, sold formerly at 10 cents a copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom, an 8 page, double column tract, sold formerly at 10 cents a dozen.

Early Lessons, suitable for young or old, 30 pages, sold formerly for 10 cts a copy.

These works are excellent for use by those who wish to do missionary labor, and we offer them at such a low price that they should be out in a short time. Bro. Jones had large editions of these tracts printed, and by dying suddenly, and his Widow being in feeble health, we have undertaken the task of selling them. Her income is quite limited, and all that can be gotten out of the sales goes to her after expenses are paid. When you buy these tracts you get several times the worth of your money, and also aid a worthy Sister, who will thank you for it.

Assorted package 30 cents per pound. Gospel of the Kingdom, alone at 25 cents per pound.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

Poetry.

A Sacred Hour.

There is an hour to me most dear,
The precious thoughts doth linger near.
When from this world of sin and death,
I placed my hope on righteousness.
And looked to one, who has gone above
To prepare a place of joy and love.

Oh, blessed hour of love divine,
Where peace did reign and strife decline;
Help me to walk in gospel light,
That I may watch both day and night,
And when the glorious King has come,
May his answer be to me, well done.

L. WILHELM.

Genesis. Chap. 24.

1. And Habraam was an elder, advanced in days, and the Lord had blessed Habraam in all things.

2. And Habraam said unto his servant (born in his house) the elder of his household, the ruler of all his affairs; place thy hand beneath my thigh.

3. And I will swear thee by the Lord God of the heavens and the God of the earth, that thou do not take a wife for my son Isaak from the daughters of the Chananites in whose midst I am dwelling:

4. But that thou go thy way into the land where I was begotten and to my tribe, and take a wife for my son Isaak therefrom.

5. And the servant said unto him, Perchance the woman may not be willing to go her way back with me into this land; shall I return thy son into the land whence thou comest out?

6. And Habraam said unto him, Take heed to thyself not to return my son there.

7. The Lord God of the heavens and the God of the earth who took me out of the house of my father and out of the land where I was begotten, who called me and who assured me with an oath, saying, Unto thee will I give this land and unto thy seed; he will send his angel before thee, and thou wilt take a wife for my son therefrom.

8. And if the woman be not willing to go her way with thee into this land thou wilt be absolved from my oath. Only do not return my son there.

9. And the servant placed his hand beneath the thigh of Habraam, his lord, and he swore him concerning this matter.

10. And the servant took ten camels from the camels of his lord, and from all the good things of his lord along with himself and arose and went his way into Mesopotamia to the city of Nachoor.

11. And he made the camels lie down outside the city along side the well of water toward evening, when women are accustomed to go their way out to draw water.

12. And he said, O Lord God of my lord Habraam, Mayest thou have prospered my way in my sight today, and mayest thou have caused mercy in relation to my lord Habraam.

13. Lo, I am standing at the fountain of the water, and the daughters of those who inhabit the city are going their way out to draw water.

14. And it shall be that the virgin to whom I shall have said, Incline thy water-jar, so that I may drink, and who shall have said to me, Do thou drink and I will give thy camels water till they stop drinking; this one it shall be thou hast made ready for thy servant for Isaak; and in this way I shall comprehend that thou hast caused mercy in relation to my lord Habraam.

15. And it came to pass before he had finished talking in his thought, Lo, even Hrebekka who had been brought forth unto Bathouel, son of Melcha, wife of Nachoor, brother of Habraam, came out, having the water-jar upon her shoulders.

16. And the virgin was very beautiful to the sight; was a virgin; a husband had not known her; and going down to the fountain she filled her earthen-jar and came up.

17. And the servant ran to meet her and said, Give me a little water to drink out of thy water-jar;

18. And she said, Drink, my lord; and she hasted and took down the water-jar upon her arm and gave him to drink until he stopped drinking;

19. And she said, I will also draw water for thy camels whilst they all drink, (these camels were female-camels).

20. And she hasted and emptied the water-jar into the watering-troughs, and ran to the well to fill again, and drew for all the camels.

21. And the man was studying her and remained silent that he might know whether the Lord had prospered his way or not.

22. And it came to pass when all the camels had ceased drinking, the man took some golden ear-rings of upwards a dra-hma in weight and two bracelets for her hands, ten of gold their weight;

23. And he asked her and said, Whose daughter art thou; Tell me; Is there a place with thy father for us to put up?

24. And she said unto him, I am a daughter of Bathouel of Melcha, whom she brought forth for Nachoor.

25. And said she unto him, There is chaff and much fodder with us and a place to put up.

26. And the man was satisfied and worshiped the Lord and said,

27. Blessed be the Lord God of my lord Habraam, who hath not withheld his righteousness and his truth from my lord Habraam. The Lord forsooth hath prospered my way to the house of the brother of my lord.

28. And the maid ran to the house of her mother and told the things recounted.

29. And Hrebekka had a brother by the name of Laban; and Laban ran unto the man outside at the fountain.

30. And it came to pass when he saw the ear-rings and the bracelets on the hands of his sister, and when he had heard the words of Hrebekka, his sister, who was saying, so and so did the man talk to me, and he had come to the man, as he was standing by the camels at the fountain.

31. He also said, Come in thou blessed of the Lord, why art thou standing outside? And I have made ready the house and a place for the camels.

32. And the man entered into the house, and he (Laban) unsaddled the camels, and gave chaff and fodder to the camels, and water to wash his feet and the feet of the men with him.

33. And set bread beside them to eat. And he said; no I will not eat until I have said my say; and he said, Say it.

34. And he said I am Habraam's servant.

35. And the Lord hath blessed my lord exceedingly and he hath become exalted; and he hath given unto him sheep and bullocks and silver and gold and men-servants and maid-servants, camels and asses;

36. And Sarra the wife of my lord brought forth one son for my lord after he became old, and he hath given unto him all that was his.

37. And my lord swore me saying, Thou shalt not take a wife for my son from the daughters of the Chananites, in whose land I am sojourning.

38. But unto the house of my father shalt thou go thy way and unto my tribe, and thou shalt take a wife for my son therefrom.

39. And I said unto my lord, Perchance the woman will not go her way with me.

40. And he said unto me, The Lord God in whose sight I have been pleasing, he will send his angel along with thee and will prosper thy way; and thou wilt take a wife for my son from out my tribe and from out the tribe of my father.

41. Then shalt thou be released from my oath administered to thee.

42 And when I had come to the fountain today, I said, O Lord of my lord Habraam, if thou art prospering my way on which I am going.

42. Lo, I am standing at the fountain of water, and the daughters of the men of the city are going their way out to draw water, and it shall be that the virgin unto whom I shall have said, Give me a little water to drink out of thy water-jar.

44. And she shall have said unto me, Do thou drink and I will also draw water for thy camels, this shall be the woman which the Lord hath made ready for his courtier Isaak; and in this way shall I know that thou hast caused mercy for my lord Habraam.

45. And it came to pass before I had finished talking in my thought, that straightway Hrebekka was coming out, having her water-jar upon her shoulders, and she went down to the fountains and drew water; and I said unto her, Give me to drink.

46. And she hasted and took down the water-jar upon her arm of her own accord and said, Drink thou, and I will water thy camels; and I drank and she did water the camels.

47. And I asked her and said, Whose daughter art thou? Tell me, And she said, I am a daughter of Bathouel, son of Nachoor, whom Melcha brought forth for him: and I put the ear-rings on her and the bracelets on her hands.

48. And being satisfied (this is the same word that occurs in the passage, This is my beloved son in whom I am well-pleased, C. V.) I worshiped the Lord, and praised (blessed C. V. and R. V.) the Lord God of my lord Habraam, who had prospered me on a way of truth to take the daughter of the brother of my lord for his son.

49. If then ye are causing mercy and righteousness in relation to my lord, and if not, tell me that I may turn to the right hand or the left.

50. And Laban answered he and Bathouel and they said, From the Lord hath this matter come out; we shall not be able to gainsay thee bad or good.

51. Lo, Hrebekka is before thine eyes, Take her and run away; and let her be a wife for the son of thy lord, even as the Lord hath said.

52. And it came to pass when the servant of Habraam had heard their word, that he did homage to the Lord upon the ground.

53. And the servant brought out utensils of silver and gold and raiment, and gave them unto Hrebekka, and he gave votive-gifts also unto her brother and her father.

54. And they ate and drank both he and the men with him, and they lay down to sleep; and he arose at dawn and said, Send me away that I may return unto my lord.

55. And her brothers and her mother said, Let the virgin remain with us about ten days, and after that she shall go.

56. And he said unto them, Do not detain me; the Lord even hath prospered my way with me; Send me away that I may return unto my lord.

57. And they said, Let us call the maid and ask her mouth.

58. And they called Hrebekka and said unto her, Wilt thou go thy way with this man? And she said I will go.

59. And they sent away Hrebekka and her belongings, and the servant of Habraam and the men with him.

60. And they blessed Hrebekka and said unto her, Thou art our sister, Mayest thou have become a thousand myriads, and may thy seed have inherited the cities of our adversaries.

61. And Hrebekka arose, and she and her favorite maids (habrai) mounted upon the camels and went their way with the man; and the servant taking up Hrebbeka departed.

62. Now Isaak was going his way through the wilderness along by the well of the vision; and he was dwelling in the land at the southwest.

63. And Isaak had gone out to meditate (as a young man does) on the plain toward evening; and looking up with his eyes he saw some camels coming.

64. And Hrebekka looking up with her eyes saw Isaak and stepped down from the camel;

65. And said unto the servant, Who is that man going his way on the plain to meet us? And the servant said, This is my lord; and she took the summer veil and threw it around her.

66. And the servant discoursed to Isaak all the recounted things which he had done;

67. And Isaak entered into the house of his mother and took Hrebekka, and she became his wife, and he loved her; and Isaak was consoled for his mother.

COMMENT.

The reader will note the difference of reading in the 3rd verse, "The Lord God of the heavens and the God of the earth" in the C. V. and R. V. For it is significant of course. Why not "Lord God" of the earth as well as the heavens? This distinction is preserved in the 7th verse the reader will observe.

Note the difference of reading also in the 62nd verse C. V. and R. V. For they omit the important topographical location of "the well of the vision" entirely.

Refraining from further critical comment I would simply say in closing that we have in this chapter a masterpiece of its kind and one of the most beautiful little prose-pastoral-poems in all literature—not a stroke too much or too little in the picture drawn, and withal some very important historical, biographical and ethnological facts given us in the brief narrative.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Controversy Continued.

Uncle. In our last we assumed that man's tenure of life and being is subject to the good pleasure of his Creator, and if this be true of his mortal existence it would most certainly be true of his future being. In somesense all maintain that we are responsible to our Maker. Obedience to his law would naturally please him, and disobedience displease him. Since all have failed to keep his law, all are equally by virtue of being his offspring entitled to his favor. But his favor can be obtained only by a return to obedience, through faith. These entitle us to all the chief gifts he has to bestow. Immortality is one of these priceless gifts, not natural but spiritual. Not now a possession, but to be presented as a reward of merit, at a time when God shall discern between him that serveth him, and him that serveth him not.

Joseph. Did not the Rev. Holman tell us last Lord's day that endless existence was the natural patrimony of the children of Adam, and that immortality could be ruined but not lost, and that Christ's chief mission into this world was to restore ruined immortal souls back to God? This he said was what was brought to light in the gospel.

Uncle. Nothing can be farther from the truth. God in the beginning made man's existence depend upon his obedience, and all the generations of the past are not, because of disobedience. Without a Redeemer death ends all. It is mortality that is ruined and must needs be restored to God. It was not to remind man that he had an immortal soul that Christ came, but that the mortal might obtain an immortal nature through him. This "putting on immortality" is no where hinted at this side of the resurrection of the dead, and the resurrection of the dead is no where said to take place before the coming again of him who is the resurrection and the life. The order stands thus, Christ the firstfruit, afterward they who are Christ's at his coming. The heavenly investiture is not an immortal soul, but a garment for a mortal soul. When thus clothed upon we will be fitted to stand as a chaste bride in the presence of the heavenly Bridegroom at his coming. "Mortality swallowed up of life."

Joseph. Does not the common view of immediate reward present a more pleasing picture for our contemplation than a future resurrection? And is not the hope of heaven more entrancing and inspiring than the hope of inheriting this old "sin-cursed earth?" You people have but the one old hobby. You write and speak, rewrite and repeat these old threadbare Scriptures about man's creation and nature, and final destiny and inheritance in the kingdom as if you thought that essential to salvation. Why don't you get up something new and interesting like other churches?

Uncle. The common view of immediate reward is pleasing. Is it true? that is the question. It would have been more pleasing to the Jews if Christ had appeared as a great and conquering king instead of a meek and suffering Savior. They rejected him because there was no glory nor pomp attending him. They said our Messiah will at once restore the kingdom, and rid us of our enemies. What was the truth? and what is truth today? is the vital question. The old threadbare Scriptures being the Word of God, will stand. His promises are sure, and any hope builded upon them is steadfast, and ought to be inspiring, and is to every child of God. If the old story has lost its power, so will a new one, and if God will not fulfil his promise to give the earth to the meek for an inheritance, neither will he give us heaven, if perchance he has promised that.

Belief and Trust.

LETTER TO REV. DR. NEWMAN HALL, LONDON.

"Rev.' Dr. Newman Hall, London, England, delivered a discourse in Edinburgh in August, 1900. His subject was the jailor at Philippi. He defined the word "Believe" in the Apostle Paul's reply to the jailor as simply the exercise of "trust." The writer of this took occasion to write a brief Memo. to him as follows:

"Excuse a hint towards a fuller definition of "Believe," etc. Paul had a supplement to this verse—("they spake unto him the Word of the Lord.") This must point to his usage in preaching, as in Acts ix. 22; xvii. 3; xviii. 5, in R. V. The Christ not a personal name but an official title. This was the strong point in all Paul's preaching. Could he have omitted it here? Can we? Even in 1 Cor xv., "Christ died for our sins," he refers the Corinthians to his own preaching to them, which we find in Acts xviii.—"The Christ." This was also the prime intent of John's gospel. xx. 31. "The Christ" is Greek for Hebrew "Messiah" and means "The Anointed." Is so translated in Old Testament, but not in New. Why? It was applied to kings in Israel—Saul and David—to Jesus by his Apostles in same sense—Nathanael in John i. 49; Peter in Acts ii. 30. Could Paul have any other? Christ's own promise in Matt. xix. 28. This truth lost in time of Constantine, and not recovered in time of Luther. Only a few so-called Millenarians contend for it, and that only partially.

Belief is trust in a person as well as believing a testimony; but there is no trust on a person without belief in a testimony concerning his claims, teachings, commandments, commission, etc." J. CAMERON.

Dr. Hall's reply is as follows:—I am just leaving for the south, so excuse a hasty line. I consider that Belief in Christ resembles Belief in your Doctor. It is trust which implies obedience. I accept my Doctor's advice—take his medicines, submit to his operations, abstain from what he forbids, etc. so when I believe in Christ I accept his salvation—trust in his counsel—obey his orders. It is not mere credence in his opinions; but acceptance of himself—and therefore salvation. May you realize this fully.

REJOINDER.

"Your letter of 20th inst. duly received, with booklet "Come to Jesus" for which thanks. I reciprocate by enclosing "Jesus both Lord and Christ." You trust your doctor and rightly so. But first you accepted and believed certain testimony as to his fitness: and what is your booklet but an elaborate recommendation of the fitness of the Great Physician with testimonies to be accepted and believed by the sinner in order to lead him to trust. Thus you say, page 38 "Faith is simply coming to Jesus. He has died for thee. Believe it and take the benefit of his dying." This is my position in Memo.

The Apostle Paul gives expression to (1) belief and (2) trust when he says, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to keep," etc. That is, I know the person and his ability, to be trusted. The Master's charge to his Apostles was—"Preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth," etc. In perusing your booklet I find many statements, but thought I missed the word gospel, or any direct allusion to it.

So much for the only point of my Memo. you took notice of.

Paul's implied supplement—"Jesus is the Christ." I should like you to consider. This is the only formal creed in the New Testament. It is not found, however, although used both by Nathanael and Peter, even in the so-called Apostles creed, nor in Luther's Reformation. You probably invest Luther with a sort of infallibility, and consider his Reformation a finality. I make bold to demur to such an idea. John near the close of his gospel, says, "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. "Jesus is the Christ," is, in modern phrase, a proposition expressive of a great truth. This has to be received before trust can be exercised. This is the drift of Memo."

Obituary.

John W. Mitchell was born March 28, 1867, in Neosho Co., Kansas. He was a son of Pat Mitchell; was united in marriage Feb. 27, 1887, to Miss Emma Keneday. To this union was born one son. His wife and child, father and mother, two brothers and three sisters survive to mourn his loss and the Church of God also feels his loss as one more member laid to rest until the Master will come, besides Bro. Mitchell had a host of outside friends as his funeral testified to that fact as the large concourse of people showed. He with nine others was buried by baptism by the writer in the all saving name of Jesus, in which saving name he always tried to live. His baptism took place Feb. 24, 1890, and he remained a consistent member until the day of his death, which occurred at Shaw, Kan., Feb. 18, 1901, after a painful, lingering illness of 5 months and 20 days. His suffering time is now over, and he is now resting from his labors and his works will follow him. Oh, how needful it is to let our light shine and our works to be in harmony with the Savior's teaching. Dear sister, you will miss John more than any one else will; remember that we must all go the same way, as the poet says, one by one we leave behind us while the days are going by. May God help us all that we may so live whether awake or asleep that we may be found at our post is my prayer for Jesus' sake. Amen. The funeral was conducted by the writer. Text 1 Thes. iv. 13 to 18. Hymn sung. There will be no more sorrow when Jesus comes. Farewell, dear brother, may we all meet you in the kingdom of God.

JOHN FOORE.

Isaac Westfall was born at Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 11, 1832; he was married to Ellen Harris in 1857, to which union there were born 7 children, of whom 6 were living at the time of his death. Bro. Westfall became a member of the Church of God in October, 1900, of which he remained a member up to his death, which occurred Apr. 27, 1901.

The writer of this sketch became acquainted with the deceased last summer at the meeting that was held in the town of Remington, of which he was a regular and interested attendant. At the second meeting that was held in Oct., he with others came out on the side of the truth as it is in Jesus, and was baptized into the saving Name, and was faithful in his devotion to the truth. I was at his house on Saturday afternoon, Apr. 27th, during my regular monthly visit to that place, and had a talk with him and apparently he was in his usual health, and when the time for meeting came, started for the hall, when he had a stroke of apoplexy, and lived only a few short hours afterward. So sudden came the enemy death, without any warning. What a lesson that we should be ready to live in the fear of God, and to be prepared for the coming of the Son of Man. The writer spoke words of comfort to the bereaved from John xi. 25, 26, after which Bro. Westfall was laid to rest in the cemetery at Remington, Ind., to await the morning of the resurrection.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 8, 1901. NUMBER 18.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"If we have forgotten the name of our God, or stretched out our hands to a strange god; shall not God search this out? for he knoweth the secrets of the heart?" Psa. xliv. 20, 21.

French says of Sterling: "It was impossible to come in contact with his noble nature, without feeling one's self, in some measure ennobled and lifted up into a higher region of objects and aims than that in which one is tempted habitually to dwell."

"God is slow to anger." Annie of Austria once said to Richelieu when pleading for her rights—"My Lord Cardinal, God does not pay every week, but at the last he pays." Yes; he pays at the last. And as a man sows, so shall he reap; not something else.

Thoreau says:—"I called on the king, but he made me wait in his hall, and conducted like a man incapacitated for hospitality. There was a man in my neighborhood who lived in a hollow tree. His manners were truly regal. I should have done better had I called on him."

Bacon said "The joys of parents are secret, and so are their griefs and fear; they cannot utter the one, they will not utter the other. Children sweeten labors, but they also make misfortunes more bitter; they increase the cares of life, but they mitigate the remembrance of death."

Before us lies the question:—"What does it mean in 1 Cor. xii. 23, where it says: "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one Body?" The baptism "by one Spirit, is what puzzles me." We understand "by one Spirit," means, That we are all baptized by the command of the Spirit's Word. It is a condition of salvation imposed by the Spirit in the Word. In no other way can we get into the One Body, which is Christ's.

France sends a warship to Tangier to back up the demand that the Sultan of Morocco make apology for his course in advising the tribes in the extreme south of Algeria to resist the French occupation of their lands. This is significant when it is remembered that the conquest of Algeria was made by France on the simple pretext that the Sultan of Algeria had insulted France. There is no attempt to hide the fact that the French wish to seize Morocco, and Russia is consenting if not actually urging her on to do so.

China seems anxious for peace, and says she is willing to do anything possible to settle with the powers. The difficulty is the nations interested cannot agree in their demands. Meanwhile there is more or less rioting, and the country is suffering in consequence. In Manchuria the Russians have gone steadily on putting down the different bands that have opposed them, and while they say they desire the empire to remain intact, yet the facts are they are gradually getting the entire province into their control. No one dare say they shall not.

Born or Begotten—Which?

In reference to 1 Peter i. 23, where it says in the Common Version, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed," etc., we would say, in view of the fact that gennao is used of men to beget, and also of women to bring forth, bear, or give birth to, we must be governed by the subject in hand,—the context, as to its proper use. Both begettal and birth are figures borrowed from nature, to illustrate spiritual things; and therefore acquaintance with the laws of nature will be of assistance here. We know that begettal and birth do not take place at the same time; and therefore when Paul says to the Corinthians, "For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel, chap. iv. 15,—and when James says, "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of Truth," we know the birth must come later. And when we read that Christ was the "First-born from the dead," and the "First-born among many brethren," we naturally expect the many brethren to be born from the dead too. And, inasmuch as we are told that those who attain to that age and the resurrection from the dead die no more, the matter is pretty well cleared up for us.

To love God, and to know that we are loved of him produces a powerful joy in some; but to all it imparts hope, cheerfulness and vivacity. When we can say, "God is our bosom friend;" "God is for us and we are for him," joy bursts into praise, all things look brilliant, hardship seems easy, duty becomes delight, contempt is not felt, and every morsel of bread is sweet.

In order to show the tendency of the thought that is abroad in the land we give a report of the lecture delivered last Sunday by Prof. Herron, the man who was last week expelled from the Congregational church society. He has been creating a great deal of stir for some time by the theories he has advanced, and this extract will show the drift of his conclusions.

"Professor George D. Herron told a crowd of Brooklynites today how the world would get along without God. He was addressing a meeting called at the instance of the Brooklyn Philosophical association. His subject was: "What if There Were no God?" He said: A man who would be good only because he felt that there was a God over him compelling him to be good would in no sense be a moral being.

"What if the whole fabric of religious faith went down? Any faith that shall become an inspirer of religious adventure or any other must come out of a human soil.

"Suppose all the gods of the sky are dead. Any new inspiring force must come out of human experience, out of known facts. The world today is exhausted. It is without a religion. The gods of the Bible are dead and the old altar fires are out. No new altar fires have been lighted and the world today is seeking a religion.

"The mark of faith is the mark of fear. Blind obedience of any kind is slavery. Whatever the religion or the light of the future is to be, it must come out of human life and experience. We do not need the gods of the sky.

Truth is a state of mind. If there be what we call a heaven it would not be a place; it would be a state of mind. It is just dawning upon mankind that we may in time become masters of our state of mind—which in times past has been forced upon us."

"If a thousandth part of the energy that has gone into squabbling over unknowable things and worlds had been devoted to making a good world here, a world of friends, we should have had on this earth centuries ago a heaven surpassing the wildest dreams.

"Suppose I go back to the original question. What if there were no God? What have I left?

"This."

The speaker was impressive. He was pointing to the temporal surfaces of his peculiar dome of thought. He added that in there could be formed "the will of love," under which the universe could be disarmed, and the individual could become greater than any God theology ever thought of.

"Today we have no preaching—we have performances, we have word-mongering. The whole teaching of religion is to prevent men from seeing anything for themselves or to make them fearful if they do see anything for themselves. Human life has never been as bad as its theology and political economy."

Rejected Material.

The Lord Jesus said: "The poor have the gospel preached unto them." "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Lord Mcaulay tells of an exquisite stained window in an old cathedral, made by an apprentice from fragments of glass that the master had rejected as useless. The window was so far superior to all others made by the master artisan that he killed himself from sheer vexation. So, all previous builders of states and organizers of society depended mainly upon the higher classes. The poor and the lowly were regarded as of no account, and thrown aside as useless fragments. But these very fragments which the builders disallowed Christ is forming into the crowning glory and adornment of his wondrous temple. From the group of lowly fishermen; from the ranks of despised publicans; from troubled demoniacs, outcast lepers, and women that were sinners, Christ sought out and won over some that were lost, and has and is still forming a few for a combination of beauty and perfection of form that will cast all human organizations into the shade."

"Wise as Serpents." No. 2.

An address after baptism.

In apostolic times we discover none of the fanatical thirst for martyrdom which developed at a later age. There was a manly combination of zeal and a calm discretion before which nothing was able to stand. Craving for martyrdom marks an era of departure from the faith, and the inception of notions that characterize these apostate times,—and is akin to the delusion in possession of the poor old woman to be seen on Euclid Avenue every day, counting her beads,—thinking to work out a righteousness of her own in her own way. The apostles with every indignity and cruelty, never complained, nay, when it had to come, they rejoiced to be counted worthy to suffer for the Master,—and at the same time the very chiefest of them did not object to be let down in a basket so that he might be free to go on with the Lord's work. The 8th lesson to be learned from this and other passages is this:—The reasons here specified for having the wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove are general. In many instances it might be shown that the apostles acted on this principle whenever, or in whatever circumstances they could, if the Master's cause could be subserved by it. Notably the apostle Paul took advantage of the circumstance that pharisees and sadducees were among his persecutors and adroitly made the resurrection, believed by pharisees, and disbelieved by sadducees, divide these parties by stating it to be the very corner-stone of his faith. At another time when in imminent peril from the rabble, he confounded them by announcing his Roman citizenship. But it may be asked, how the Lord could expect us to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves if he did not give definite instructions for the exercise of these traits. I answer, this is the very thing he has done. I do not mean to say that he tells his sheep to do certain things and tells them that they must employ the wisdom of the serpent and the harmlessness of the dove in doing it; but he expects things of the sheep which in themselves embody those traits. For instance, Jesus told the uncultured fishermen he would make them fishers of men,—that is, use them to catch men by means of the gospel net. And we may learn on what principle this had to be done by seeing that as far back as Solomon's time it had been said, "He that winneth souls

is wise." After that God in mercy unfolded his loving purpose vastly more, and at last divine love concentrated at Calvary, and he "so loved the world of mankind that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." And who can doubt that after this unspeakable gift that love was the sole motive power of the gospel? And love, as exhibited on the cross, being the power that begets love in our hearts, and all hearts that respond, is not winning souls the divine process

now, as in the past? It is literally impossible to drive or scare people into the gospel net. They have to be won over by the amazing love of God and Christ,—by the astounding Gift referred to, and the vastness, and riches, and majesty, and honor, and power promised in the ages to come,—all being the manifestation of infinite love. And if you wish to see the greatest of the apostles carrying out the injunction to be wise as a serpent and as harmless as a dove while successfully fishing for men, go to Corinth, where, although in actual want

when delivering the gospel message to them, he refused to receive ought at their hands, which so favorably impressed them that they believed; and referring to it afterward, he said to them, being cunning, I caught you with artifice. This wisdom and harmlessness is just as necessary in intercourse with the sheep, as it is while searching among goats for those who have ears to hear, and minds to understand, and hearts to embrace the good message. They are human in nature yet. No class of men could know so well how to reach the sinner, or conciliate the saint as we, if we would give our minds to it. We alone of all the religious bodies know how man is made, and realize that it is an organism we have to do with. The fearfulness and wonderfulness of our make-up consists of a living organism. It embodies the organ of combativeness, and destructiveness, and self-esteem, and approbativeness, and firmness, and acquisitiveness and a complete set of religious organs, including reverence, faith, hope, spirituality, besides a wonderful group of intellectual faculties. The science of mind I refer to IS SCIENCE, because it is in strict harmony with the description of the man God made,—and I repeat, we ought to know how to influence and manage men, as no others can. We ought to be able to read our fellows through and through by their actions, and we ought to realize the purpose or intention or reason for very many commands of God. Take the command: "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath." Jas. i. 19. I am speaking about brethren among brethren, not among aliens, now,—talking of rules of the household of faith.

In a reasoning creature like man it is natural to enquire the why and the wherefore, of commands. When God speaks as he does here, and always, he means what he says,—and there is a reason for what he says, and he expects his flock to obey what he says here, as elsewhere. And you may set it down for a fact that both a moral and a physiological reason underlies all his commands to his children. We may not readily trace all of them, but they are there, and can be discerned by careful research.

Our experience should furnish the key to many of them. Swift to hear. Knowledge is a valuable and powerful attainment. It enlarges one's mind and extends his vision in all directions. In order to benefit by it we must take time to weigh it, analyze it and digest it, and not hastily pass judgment upon it. Be slow to speak. If one is always speaking he soon tells all he knows, and after that he has to speak at random. It may be correct or it may be incorrect; and it will be very annoying to such to be corrected,—and have to retract what was hastily or ignorantly said. The third command in this verse, is, slow to anger, for, for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. Clearly, the tendency of anger is to work *un*righteousness. Jesus said to Peter, "Feed my lambs," and twice he said to him, "Feed my sheep." Peter and the rest are gone but the sheep still require to be fed. Those who stand and feed this little flock will drop out before long, if the glorious Lord does not soon come, and those who do not have the wisdom and harmlessness here enjoined, and are slow to wrath will not win many souls from the path of disobedience and death.

Sheep will not follow an angry shepherd, and would not half relish their food and thrive upon it, if dealt out to them by a surly attendant, nor one who gets angry with them and scolds them because they cannot digest what they eat, instead of thoroughly diagnosing their case and giving a corrective or alterative medicine, and treating them kindly and gently. This is true to nature, and applies equally in the spiritual realm, as frequent reference to sheep and sheep-fold by the chief shepherd clearly teaches. Those who feed the flock of God must first eat of the food to be dealt out and digest it, and assimilate it, and by spiritual healthfulness show its effect upon them. In a word, they must go forward and let the sheep follow. At their peril they reverse the order and get behind them with whip or tongue and drive them. Their voice of love and mercy, like that of the Chief Shepherd must be known to the sheep, and when thus lovingly and patiently called and warned if disobedient, they will respond if they are fit to be saved. All the terrors and scolding will make them worse, because they will discern the flesh is getting the upper hand, and will be sure to raise the evil spirit all the more. It is a waste of effort to try to scare down the old man,—for if he is put down one moment, he is up again the next. The old man cannot be obedient; he cannot be converted.

Here is the place for strategy—the wisdom of the serpent is needed here to plan a flank movement. If there be a spark of spiritual mindedness left that is the place to pile on the fuel, and put a match to it; that is just the one thing the old man cannot stand. But what is this wisdom, and how is it obtained? It is not gotten all at once, or all in a lump as some think people get religion. Oh, no. We do not believe in getting religion at all. We believe in being religious.

Jesus says, Mark you, "be ye, therefore wise, etc; he does say get the wisdom of the serpent. Successful teachers study human nature,—study the people they have to instruct, and adapt the instruction to the capacities of the scholars, their temperaments and dispositions, and then learn from observation and experience and reading how they can best produce a desired effect upon the minds of others,—and what would be likely to defeat that object, and for ever close their ears and hearts to any propositions that may be made by arousing combativeness and other opposing faculties. But you must not think I am only speaking to teachers or prospective teachers. The Master speaks to all the sheep in this Scripture. And he performs no miracle to make them wise. It is the work of the sheep to fit themselves for their shepherd's work in this respect by the faculties they possess and the helps graciously provided.

to work acceptably for God, his tools must be used according to his directions; for we read Prov. xiii. 13 that he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded; and the lawful conclusion from this is that those who do not fear the commandment will work for nothing; and worse than that, "Whoso despiseth the Word shall be destroyed." It follows from this that great care must be taken not to reprove scorners,—Prov. ix. 7, 8, and the good Shepherd clinches this stout nail in Matt. vii. 6, "Give not that which is holy to dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." Be sure to exercise discretion in the Lord's work; and although this may appear to cramp your operations, be this your comfort,—its the Lord's command, and then you will, if faithful to the end see his approving smile, and hear him say well done. That this may be the lot of all before me, I earnestly pray. Amen.

The Blind Bird's Song.

Blind and a captive in his narrow cage,
My little bird lives on from day to day;
Cheered by no sight of feathered friend, he sits
In darkness, lightened by no sunbeam's ray.

And yet a burst of sweetest melody,
Limpid and clear as any wild-bird's trill,
Comes forth from out that narrow, close-barred cage,
With heaven-born music all my room to fill.

Dear, little, patient singer, may I learn
The secret of your heart's rejoicing note?
Whence springs the music from your darkened life
Which seems to fill my soul and round me float?

So would I sing when light and hope seem fled,
And all my path is barred with doubt and care.
Shall I not sing of brighter days ahead?
Yes, little bird, thy song, thy life, I share.

Augustus Toplady.

When Augustus Toplady was a young man he made up his mind that he would not become a Christian. But his parents had faith in God. He had said that his ears were always open to the cries of his children, and they lifted up their voices in prayer to him. It happened not long afterward that Augustus went with his mother to visit some friends in Ireland. On Sunday (August, 1756), they were invited to attend service at a little place not far off, where a good and much beloved minister was to preach. They went. The sermon was addressed to just such young men as Augustus Toplady. The topics were earnest and pleading; the mercy and love of God were shown; the need of a Savior was pointed out; the helplessness of a poor, dying sinner was painted in colors that ought to have touched the hardest heart. Then the invitation was given for those who wanted to become Christians to make it manifest, over and over again was the question asked, "Will you give yourselves to Christ, or will you remain rebels?"

Augustus said in his heart, each time the question was repeated, "No, I will not yield."

The minister gave out the hymn:—

"Come ye sinners, poor and needy,
Weak and wounded, sick and sore."

Every Christian heart in the congregation had been stirred into deeper love and longing for the poor, lost ones, and they sing just as they felt. The singing of that hymn was made to answer the prayers that had been so often offered up in Toplady's happy English home. The tender invitation was to him as the voice of God. He broke down. There was no sham in such singing, he knew its meaning. These people had been where he was. They had found something real to cling to: a God whom they could trust. And oh, he too wanted this God! he too needed a Savior." His pride was all gone. He gave himself to the loving Father to be ever more a faithful soldier to him. And then, he too went to save others. He became a noted preacher, and brought many to Jesus. How good it is to trust God! To be sure that he will hear; to know that we shall have the thing that we ask. God wants us to pray, enter thy closet and shut thy door, pray to thy Father in secret. He will reward thee openly. Take the names of dear ones and lay them before him. A little invalid girl did this. Name by name, she brought all whom she knew to be out of Christ, to God in prayer. Then each name was written down and placed under her pillow. In the little church near by meetings were held and people began pressing forward to obey the Lord. There had been no such revival for years. The little girl soon afterward died, but on the paper under her pillow was found 50 names of those for whom she had prayed, and all these she had checked off, as one by one they had come to God.

We delight in singing:

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

If Augustus Toplady's father and mother had not prayed for him, would it ever have been written? For the very young man who had so often said, "No, I will not yield," and who was broken by a hymn, wrote the sweet words of this latter song, that in its turn was to break other hearts, and help to bring the bruised and weary ones to the Lamb of God.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., Michigan, commencing Thursday evening, May 30th, 1901, and continue over the following Sunday, (May 31st, June 1st and 2nd). It is the desire of all who have been in the habit of attending these gatherings, that all the churches send delegates with report of their conditions to the meeting. Also that isolated brethren attend or send letter. Now friends, please attend to this little matter, and if you cannot possibly come, send a letter to the secretary at Grand Rapids, Michigan, R. R., No. 1, Burton Ave., and it will be presented to the Conference. If you have some good news of what the Lord has done for you, tell us of it—it will cheer us on our way. Let none remain away through fear of being a burden to those that entertain the Conference, as arrangements will be made to accommodate all that come. All will receive a hearty welcome. Dutton is situated on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids. Jesus is coming, will the Annual Meeting of 1901 be the last? Come, work while the day lasts.

Yours in the hope of the soon coming King,

H. C. Hammond, Pres.
Emma Jackman, Sec.

Dear Sisters:

The yearly Conference is almost here and with it comes the annual meeting of the Ladies' Tithing Society. Have we forgotten our Lord's portion this last year and spent it all for our own uses (not needs)? O there are so many ways for the Lord's money to be used, it seems more this year than ever. Will we sacrifice a little for the good of humanity and cause of truth? Make an effort, dear ones, to be present at this meeting; would you go on some pleasure trip, come to the Conference instead. We will have to give an account of how we use his money, may we have a good record to look at. While we wait for the Master let us work.

M. A. Woodward, Sec.

Be thou the cursed, not he who curses. Be of them who are persecuted, not of them that persecute. Look at Scripture! There is not a single bird more persecuted than the dove, yet God has chosen her to be offered up on his altar. The bull is hunted by the lion, the sheep by the wolf, the goat by the tiger. God said, "bring me a sacrifice not from them that persecute, but from them that are persecuted."—Talmud.

The Little Family.

There was a little family
That lived in Bethany:
Two sisters and a brother
Composed the family.
In singing and in praying
Like angels in the sky,
At morning and at evening,
They raised their voices high.

They were poor and without money,
But their kindness made amends.
Their house was ever open
To Jesus and his friends.
They lived in peace and pleasure
For many lovely years,
And laid away their treasures
Beyond this vale of tears.

Although they were so holy,
So pure, so kind and good,
Their brother was afflicted,
And rudely thrown in jail,
They nourished and they cheered him,
They wept aloud and cried,
But still he grew no better,
But lingered on and died.

The Jews came to the sisters,
Laid Lazarus in the tomb,
A trying for to comfort,
And drive away the gloom;
When Jesus heard these tidings,
For he a distant land,
So swiftly did he travel
To see this little band.

And as he was a coming,
Martha met him on the way,
And told him how her brother
Had died and passed away;
When Mary saw him coming
She ran and met him too,
Fell at his feet a weeping
And rehearsed the tale of woe.

He blessed her and he cheered her,
And told her not to weep,
For in him was the power
To raise him from a sleep;
When Jesus saw them weeping,
He began weeping too,
And wept until they showed him
Where Lazarus lay entombed.

They rolled away the cover,
He looked upon the grave,
And cried unto his Father,
His lonely friend to raise;
Lazarus lying in helpless slumber
Came from the gloomy mound,
In health and full of vigor,
He walked upon the ground.

Now if we do love Jesus,
And do his holy will Like Martha and like Mary,
He'll always treat us well;
From death he will redeem us,
We'll meet him in the skies,
And live with him forever
Where pleasure never dies.

And now while we are sitting
Together side by side,
We should think about this lesson,
And live like him that died,
That we might reach the kingdom;
And there together dwell
In an eternal union,
Where all things will be well.

Dear Restitution:

I have selected a song that I will be pleased to see printed in THE RESTITUTION. It has a beautiful tune, and as the composition did not in every instance agree with our text book (the Bible) have made some changes, important ones I think. And to the household of faith will say, be faithful, dear ones. The signs of the times portend that Jesus' coming is near at hand. Then let us be faithful, think of the promises and of the associations with the Lord, and that grand company of the redeemed that have their robes washed in his blood, glorious and of eternal duration.

Your Brother in the blessed hope,

THE UNCLOUDED DAY.

O they tell me of a homefar beyond the tides,
O they tell me of a home over there;
O they tell me of a home where no storm-clouds rise,
O they tell me of a cloudless day.
O the land of cloudless day,
O the land of an unclouded sky;
O they tell me of a home where no storm-clouds rise,
O they tell me of an unclouded day.

O they tell me of a home where the saints will go;
O they tell me of that land far away;
Where the tree of life in eternal bloom
Sheds its fragrance thro the unclouded day,
O the land of cloudless day,
And they tell me by the river is the tree of life,
In the land of an unclouded sky;
And they tell me by the river is the tree of life,
In the land of the unclouded day.

O they tell me of the King in his beauty there;
And they tell me that mine eyes shall see
Where he sits on the throne that is whiter than snow,
In the city that is made of gold;
O that land pleases eyes shall see,
O that land of unclouded sky;
O they tell me of the King on his snow white throne,
In the land of the unclouded day.

O they tell me that he smiles on his children there,
And his smiles drive their sorrows all away;
And they tell me no tears ever come again
In that lovely land of unclouded day,
O that land of lovely smiles,
O the smiles of his love beaming eye,
O the King in his beauty invites us there,
To the land of the unclouded day.

The Saints and the Nations. No. 3.

THE GOAT NATIONS.

This great national parable tells or decides the fate of nations, according to their deeds, without any faith whatever. Our Savior says to them on his left hand, "Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Why does he speak of them so? Why does he speak in terms so plain?

Because, they are justly deserving of it, and because it is his to mete out their just dues; for he says, "I was an hungered and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink, naked and ye clothed me not; sick and in prison and ye visited me not." Here are now the terms on the negative side, that are obeyed by the goat nation, and which enter into or goes to make up the bad character of every goat nation, and they too in turn do not know of the bad deeds that they have done unto the Lord, and are surprised at it, and say, "Lord when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison and did not minister unto thee?"

He explains to them the real truth by saying, "Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." The saints which are his brethren having come with him, are therefore by his side, and are living witnesses to the statements that our Savior has made to the goat nations. It seems upon sight these goat nations will know full well what they have done unto them, that they made laws that would not permit the saints of God to live in their dominions, so that they could not worship God according to the dictates of his truth. They did something else. They made laws that persecuted the saints of God, and hunted them down and destroyed them. They knew full well that there was a class of people that were punished at their hands. How was it during the dark ages? They did not even dare to hold God's truth and let it be known. They had to live in seclusion, in dens and caves of the earth so fierce were they against them.

No wonder the Lord denounces them in their day of judgment for such cruel deeds. In view of this, we affirm that there are just two sides to the nations nationally, one to favor the saints and the other to abuse them, and by these good and bad deeds will their good and bad character be formed, and they will be known to our Savior the same way when the day of judgment comes for the goat nations to be doomed. They will see then and understand what they have done and what they will receive for what they have done. Our Savior simply tells them what they have not done. This upon first thought is very queer and strange punishment, to condemn the goat nations for what they have not done, and yet, it is all right when more duly considered. There is an affirmative and a negative among the nations as well as among the saints and, by these lines drawn are their characters formed whether they shall inherit the kingdom of God as subjects or not. It is a well known fact that individually the crime for which a guilty person is doomed, which has been proven beyond a doubt against him, which he confesses is so. He knows what he has done, and knows that he is guilty of it and deserves punishment, yet there is a negative to it; for the very thing that he did do is the very thing he ought not to have done. Just so with the nations. They can do good unto Jesus, or they can do bad, just as they please about it. By doing good or bad unto his brethren which are his saints, and yet in this natural case the crime they have done is not even once spoken of against them; but simply what they have not done, and if they have not done good unto the saints of God, then they have done bad; for there is no between ground here; for the goat nations have made laws so that the saints of God could not live in their dominions and worship God according to the dictates of his truth, and such has been the case, for they have been persecuted, hunted down, destroyed, so that the saints of God had no show. This decision is a national affair, separating the sheep nations from the goat nations; because it is the nations that are gathered before him. So, also is the punishment, "Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels," which is applied to the goat nations on the left, and makes a broad sweep of them nationally. In the 46th verse it says, "into everlasting punishment." Now the fire is the punishment, and fire is never used in the Bible or anywhere else as a means of preservation, but of destruction destroying, burning up, ceasing to be that which it once was. Now if the wicked are cast into fire, what will become of them? will they be preserved, or will they be burn up? What does the Bible teach? What says the Bible to you and to me?

Let us read Psa. xxxvii. 10. "For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be." Read also the 20th verse. "But the wicked shall perish." "The enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume: into smoke shall they consume away." That is by no means preserving them. Consuming away is not preserving—it is a settled fact that as long as the smoke ascends there is something consuming, hence, "Into smoke shall they consume away." Now let us read again, Mal. iv. 1, 3. "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, all that do wickedly shall be stubble; the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. They shall be ashes under the soles of the righteous feet." Ob. i. 16, "Be as though they had not been." Rev. xx. 14. "To be cast into the lake of fire which is the second death," which will end the fate of the wicked. "But the righteous into life eternal."

We do not want to forget that the righteous here spoken of is the righteous (or sheep) nations that are set on the right hand of Jesus awaiting their call to inherit the kingdom as subjects, and still another thing we want to understand is the nature of the case, when the restitution age (or 1000 years or little season) is completed so that the sheep nations are fully restored and fully qualified for that great blessing that is promised, which is to last to all eternity. It is a fact that the righteous (or sheep) nations must live to all eternity also in order to receive and enjoy the great blessings there. Most certainly they will. Read Rev. xxi. 4. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

Here is a broad and sweeping statement that will apply to man in general at that time, and just so sure as that all those things there spoken of are to pass away, then just so sure it will effect the subjects as well as the rulers of the kingdom of God. Then the subjects as well as the rulers will live to all eternity, and no fears of death any more; for the former things are passed away. Glorious time indeed for the good of all mankind. Soon may it come.

Will the subjects then be immortal like the rulers? Not at all. Because they never lost it. A restitution life can never place them there nor neither is it promised. All that the sheep nations will get will be a restitution life like Adam was before he sinned, and the blessing that is promised which will be an abundance of every thing that will then grow. Immortality, incorruptibility was never lost, hence a restitution can never give that which it never had. Jesus and all his true saints get a great deal more than a restitution.

"Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." 1 Thes. v. 21.

To have and to hold may be a very good thing, or it may not. Our holdings may not be worth what they are costing us. A horse in the country, if one is practicing medicine, may be indispensible; while in the city, the street car service is thought to be much cheaper than keeping a horse. But there are many things we may not dispense with as we do our horse. An incorrigible child for instance, should not be turned out of home and sent to a reformatory, until all our efforts at controlling them have failed, nor should we try to get away from the mother of our children because she fails in somethings to come up to our ideal. Yes, we must hold fast to the bad as well as the good, sometimes, aiming always where it is possible, to overcome the evil with our good. When the priest reminded Barney Mullen that he took Kate Donovan for better or for worse, Barney reminded him that Kate was so much worse than he took her for. "Bear with one another" is a much harder command than "from such turn away." Numbers of people appear to enjoy the breaking up of friendships. Next to the loss of my once robust health, memory, teeth, etc. is the failure on my part to hold fast to certain persons, whose friendship I thought sincere, thought them among the good things I was exhorted to hold fast.

The wife of one of Baltimore's wealthy citizens employed me recently to do some work at her house, and when I presented the bill to her husband, he refused to pay it unless I cut it down to about half what my time and material amounted to. I concluded that he was not one of the things I was exhorted to hold fast, so I used force enough to collect my bill and let him go. He seemed to think I could not live without him. He is a pillar in one of the churches. Doubtless he wanted to send some of his money to the foreign missionary society, to convert the heathen Chinee. Then my own church friends, one by one are passing by on the other side, because I told the preacher that I did not believe Dives was still pleading that Lazarus be sent with one drop of water to cool his tongue in his home of immortal worms, fire and smoke. Failure to believe in these things or even an attempt to prove them is deemed by the church an evidence of wickedness and from all such they invariably turn away. One of the most tender sentences in all the story of our Lord was when his popularity was on the wane and dreading being left alone he asked what remained of his little flock, "And will ye also go away?" Like us he craves fellowship. I have had three brothers, one still living, but I had to let him go, because I rebuked him for doing something he ought not to do. I did not lose my head, like the Baptist did for his rebuke, but I lost his friendship and that of his family. My only sister in America, I have lost in the same way. I have often wondered why it was the world hated our dear Lord. Was it, not because he told them the truth? He knew a schemer, a galvanized imitation from the pure, the genuine, and he did not deceive them. He gave them a true picture of themselves. And if the picture displeased them, they blamed him for it and wanted to stone him at once. Perhaps I had better not grieve because I have failed to hold on to every thing, bad and good. As a Christian I am exhorted to hold to that which is good. "Hold fast till I come." Again, "Behold I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." The things born for but one short day, we can let go, but let us hold fast our confidence in Jesus our Savior till we see him.

ISAAC MCCURRY, Sr.

Report of Labor.

March 21st we left Washington for Scholls, Oregon, bidding good by to the household of faith with sad hearts, for we never expect to meet them again, and they had become very dear to us. But a call had come more than 300 miles farther west and south, and we must go, for O the calls are so many, and so few to fill them. We crossed the Cascade range, passing through the tunnel nearly 8 miles long, under the famous switchback. We shot through it in ten minutes, but in spite of the little time it takes to travel it, several firemen and engineers have smoothered to death before reaching the open air, and we understood it had been abandoned until they could run the cars through with electricity. The only exciting thing occurring in this ride was, while changing cars at Seattle. The Elder was relieved of his pocket book, while boarding the train with two large satchels in his hands. The amount, however, was small, $6.50. Bro. Wm. Skeels met us at Portland with covered vehicle, and we rode twenty miles over the country to his home, meeting his amiable wife and black-eyed baby girl. The church at Scholls is composed of a very intelligent class of people, many of them being old school teachers. They are much better off than most churches, having four ministers to feed them from time to time. Bro. Wm. Prosser, the founder of the church, is a very intelligent, pleasant man, Bro. Wm. Skeels, State Evangelist, an earnest, zealous worker, Bro. W. Jaquith, an old school teacher, who loves the truth, and knows how to tell it, Bro. Edwin Groat, the youngest of them all, who has been preaching but a short time, is a zealous, consecrated man. There were no additions to the church here. The meetings were well attended in spite of the constant rain, good attention, and we believe if we could have stayed a week longer, some would have been obedient to the gospel. Here we met Sister Almira Brooks, formerly of Michigan, near Adrian, old Bro. L. H. Chase being her father, in the faith. This acquaintance was also a very pleasant one. The last day of our stay in Oregon was spent with her, as she and her youngest son took us to Portland. We think of them all today and our prayer has been every day since leaving them, O Lord, make the dear workers at Scholls united in brotherly love, working together with God for the spread of his glorious truth, and with the Apostle we say, "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body, and whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." To you who are waiting for personal letters be patient, as soon as possible we will write. We have been home two weeks, and have sent out 47 letters and cards, besides several packages, this with our every day work and Sunday preaching has kept us very busy every minute since reaching home. May God keep us all in the love of the truth, is the prayer of your brother and sister in Christ.

Another Pioneer Called.

This community was thrown into mourning when the news spread that Uncle Martin Billmire had passed away. He had been an invalid for the past six years, and on Thursday, Apr. 18, 1901, while none expected the end so near, he quietly and peacefully passed away. "God's finger touched him and he slept."

He was the son of Gabriel and Anna (Tobey) Billmire and was born in Washington county, Maryland, Mar. 3, 1822. At the age of six years he with his parents moved to Dayton, Ohio, where he lived until 1846, when he came to Ogle county in true pioneer style, afterward making the same journey twice with different members of his father's family; settling near Oregon on what is now the "county farm." He afterward moved to Lafayette township, where he has since resided.

Uncle Martin was always held in high esteem by all who knew him and will long be remembered as a man of honor, honesty and integrity. His hospitality was one of his leading virtues, where, with his friends around his fireside, he would recall the hardships and trials of pioneer life. He was a member of the Church of God and was baptized in that faith. He was an ardent lover of the Bible and found great comfort during his sickness in the many sacred promises contained therein.

The funeral was held at the home on Saturday, 10 A. M., Elder S. J. Lindsay, of Oregon, assisted by Elder F. B. Rolph, conducted the services, which were opened by Mr. Billmire's favorite passage of Scripture: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

He leaves a wife, three sons and four daughters who mourn his loss. Interment took place at the Washington Grove cemetery.—Ogle County Republican.

Obituary.

Sister Ella Obedience Corbell, wife of C. A. Corbell, fell asleep in Jesus at their home near Tempe, Arizona, Apr. 14, 1901, after an illness of ten days of blood poison. Sister Corbell was a good and kind sister. Some six years ago I received a letter from Bro. C. A. Saylor of Arizona, asking me to come to Arizona to preach, as Bro. and Sister Corbell were wanting to be baptized, and at the same time sent me the money to come on, so I went and I arrived at Tempe, Arizona, went to Bro. Saylor's house. The next day or two after we met Bro. and Sister Corbell, and there I first learned the cause of this call to be baptized, as Bro. Saylor took THE RESTITUTION. Sister Saylor put THE RESTITUTION paper in a basket in which Sister Corbell had brought some article from Sister Saylor's, and Sister Corbell got to reading the paper and both she and Bro. Corbell were converted. Bro. Saylor told me they got so anxious to put on Christ by baptism that they could hardly wait until the time for me to arrive there. Well, brethren, we could all do more if we would be a mind to, so by sending the truth out in our papers and tracts, and let them preach to a lost world, sow them broadcast to the world.

Well, we will come back again to the subject. We held a meeting of some two or three weeks, baptized 16 or 17, started a class of about 23 members, with Bro. C. A. Saylor as the elder. Sister Corbell was a faithful member, always at church when she was able. She believed Christianity was a religion that we had to possess every day. We lived in Arizona for nearly three years. I was there and my wife was in Kansas, and O the kindness I received at the hands of Bro. and Sister Corbell while I was lonely and sad, and this morning when I received the letter from Bro. Corbell, we could not help to mourn and weep over the sad news and over the broken up family, the poor little children, without a mother to cheer them up, as she was good and kind to them, to Charles, and to all that would need any kindness. But alas, dear sister, yet young in years, has to go to her long home, from which no traveller has ever yet returned except he who said, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore." Rev. i. 18. Thank God, and have the keys of hell and death. Charles, cheer up, Christ will come by and by, and will awake all the sleeping saints, and Sister Corbell will be among that number. Dear little children, take the sweet councils that your dear mother gave before she died, and also remember the words she said, when she wished that Bro. Foore was here to preach my funeral. I read and write with tears in my eyes, when I read dear brother's letter. O children, remember how we used to sing together. What says the Bible? Mother can never come back to you any more, but you can live an honest and an upright life, believe the gospel, repent, be baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, and meet your dear mother in the resurrection morning. Dear Brother Charles, although we are sixteen hundred miles apart bodily, but spiritually present with you. Bro. Charles has lost a good and affectionate wife, the little children have lost a dear mother, and the church has lost or laid away one more of their number; but no one misses her as Brother Charles and the dear little children. But we need not sorrow as those who are without hope. 1 Thes. iv. 13. Comfort one another with these words. We close with this song:

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.

Asleep in Jesus! oh! how sweet
To be for such a slumber meet!
With holy confidence to rest
In hope of being ever blest.

Asleep in Jesus! peaceful rest,
Whose waking is supremely blest;
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour,
That manifests the Savior's power.

Asleep in Jesus! soon to rise,
When the last trump shall rend the skies;
Then burst the fetters of the tomb,
To wake in full, immortal bloom."

Dear brethren and sisters, let us so live that we may meet all the loved ones gone to their long homes, is my prayer. Amen.

JOHN FOORE.
